KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Nepal is an independent Himalayan Kingdom located between India and the Tibetan region of China. From the 8th to the 11th centuries, many Buddhists fled to Nepal from India, which had been invaded by Muslims. In the 18th century Nepal was a collection of small principalities (many of Rajput origin) and the three kingdoms of the Malla dynasty: Káthmandu, Pátan and Bhádgao. In central Nepal lay the principality of Gurkha (or Gorkha); its ruler after 1742 was Prithvi

Náráyan Sháh, who conquered the small neighbouring states. Fearing his ambitions, in 1767 the Mallas brought in forces lent by the British East India Company. In 1769 these forces were withdrawn and Gurkha was then able to conquer the Malla kingdoms and unite Nepal as one state with its capital at Káthmandu. In 1846 the Ráná family became the effective rulers of Nepal, establishing the office of prime minister as hereditary. In 1860 Nepal reached agreement with the British in India whereby Nepali independence was preserved and the recruitment of Gurkhas to the British army was sanctioned.

In 1950 the Sháh royal family allied itself with Nepalís abroad to end the power of the Ránás. The last Ráná prime minister resigned in Nov. 1951, the king having proclaimed a constitutional monarchy in Feb. 1951. A new constitution, approved in 1959, led to confrontation between the king and his ministers; it was replaced by one less liberal in 1962. In Nov. 1990 the king relinquished his absolute power. Nepal remains one of the poorest countries but a five-year plan encompasses economic reform with the hope of ending illiteracy among the young by 2005.

In June 2001 the king and queen, along with 6 other members of the royal family, were shot dead by their son and heir to the throne, Crown Prince Dipendra, allegedly following a dispute over his choice of bride. Prince Dipendra then shot himself. The former monarch's younger brother, Gyanendra, was crowned king.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Policy. Since May 1991 the government has been moving forward with economic reforms, particularly those that encourage trade and foreign investment, e.g. by eliminating business licenses and registration requirements in order to simplify investment procedures. The government has also been cutting public expenditures by reducing subsidies, privatizing state industries, and laying off civil servants. Prospects for foreign trade and investment, particularly in areas other than power development and tourism, are limited by the small size of the economy, its remoteness and its susceptibility to natural disaster. The international community provides funding for 62% of Nepal's developmental budget and for 34% of total budgetary expenditures. Industrial activity is limited, mainly involving the processing of agricultural produce (jute, sugarcane, tobacco, and grain). Production of textiles and carpets expanded in the mid- and late 1990s and accounts for 85% of foreign exchange earnings. Apart from agricultural land and forests, exploitable natural resources are mica, hydropower and tourism. Agricultural production in the late 1980s grew by about 5%, compared to annual population growth of 2.6%.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

As the German Count of Nassau, William of Orange (1533–84) inherited vast possessions in the Netherlands and the Principedom of Orange in France. The struggle for independence from Spain began in 1568 and by the Union of Utrecht the more easily defensible seven provinces of the North—Holland, Zeeland, Utrecht, Overijssel, Groningen, Drenthe and Friesland—declared themselves independent. At the end of the Thirty Years War, by the Treaty of Westphalia (1648), Spain recognized the Republic of the United Netherlands. In 1689 Willem III acceded to the throne of England, becoming joint sovereign with his wife Mary. Willem III died in 1702 without issue, and there was no stadhouder until a member of the Frisian branch of Orange–Nassau was nominated hereditary stadhouder in 1747. However, his successor, Willem V, had to take refuge in England in 1795 when the French invaded. The country was freed from French domination in Nov. 1813. The Congress of Vienna (1815) joined the Belgian provinces, called the ‘Spanish’ or the ‘Austrian Netherlands’ before the French Revolution, to the Northern Netherlands. The union was dissolved by the Belgian revolution of 1830 and in 1839 Belgium and the Netherlands were recognized as two independent kingdoms.

In 1840 Willem I abdicated in favour of his son, Willem II, who moved the Netherlands towards a constitutional monarchy, a process that continued under successive monarchs.

The Netherlands followed a policy of non-participation in the European conflicts of the early 20th century and during the First World War remained neutral. In the Second World War, however, the Netherlands was occupied by Germany from 1940 until 1945. After liberation in 1945, the country abandoned its traditional policy of neutrality. In 1948 the Netherlands joined with Belgium and Luxembourg to form the Benelux economic union; in 1957 it was a founder member of the EEC, and in 1949 joined NATO.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Netherlands is bounded in the north and west by the North Sea, south by Belgium and east by Germany. The area (1998) is 41,526 sq. km, of which 33,882 sq. km is land. Projects of sea-flood control and land reclamation (polders) by the construction of dams and drainage schemes have continued since 1920.

The population was 13,060,115 at the census of 1971 and estimated to be 15,864,000 on 1 Jan. 2000 (8,017,600 women). On 8 March 2001 the population reached 16m. Population growth in 1998, 0·68%.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 16·17m.

On-going ‘rolling’ censuses have replaced the former decennial counts.

The Hague: A coastal city in the south of the Netherlands, The Hague has around 440,000 inhabitants. It has little hard industry to speak of but is the home of the Dutch Queen, the national parliament and the International Court of Justice. The Hague's port, Scheveningen, is a popular coastal resort for Dutch holiday-makers as well as an important centre for herring fishing.

Amsterdam: Lying on the rivers Amstel and IJ in the north of the Netherlands, Amsterdam possesses important financial, diamond cutting and polishing trades as well as strong shipbuilding and brewing industries. Since the 1960s the city has also reinvented itself as a centre for radicalism, both in terms of relaxed drugs legislation, strong environmental policies and the decentralization of council power. With a population of 728,000 and a thriving tourist industry, Amsterdam also possesses magnificent collections of Dutch, Flemish and modern art.

The first national language is Dutch and the second is Friesian.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

According to the Constitution (promulgated 1814; last revision, 1983), the Kingdom consists of the Netherlands, Aruba and the Netherlands Antilles. Their relations are regulated by the 'Statute' for the Kingdom, which came into force on 29 Dec. 1954. Each part enjoys full autonomy; they are united, on a footing of equality, for mutual assistance and the protection of their common interests.

The Netherlands is a constitutional and hereditary monarchy.

The reigning Queen is Beatrix Wilhelmina Armgard, born 31 Jan. 1938, daughter of Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard; married to Claus von Amsberg on 10 March 1966; succeeded to the crown on 1 May 1980, on the abdication of her mother. Offspring: Prince Willem-Alexander, born 27 April 1967; Prince Johan Friso, born 25 Sept. 1968; Prince Constantijn, born 11 Oct. 1969.

The Queen receives an allowance from the civil list. This was 7.5m. guilders in 1999; that of Prince Claus was 1.5m. guilders and that of Crown Prince Willem Alexander, 1.8m. guilders.

Mother of the Queen: Queen Juliana Louise Emma Marie Wilhelmina, born 30 April 1909, daughter of Queen Wilhelmina (born 31 Aug. 1880, died 28 Nov. 1962) and Prince Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin (born 19 April 1876, died 3 July 1934); married to Prince Bernhard Leopold Frederik Everhard Julius Coert Karel Godfried Pieter of Lippe-Biesterfeld (born 29 June 1911) on 7 Jan. 1937. Abdicated in favour of her daughter, the Reigning Queen, on 30 April 1980.

Sisters of the Queen: Princess Irene Emma Elisabeth, born 5 Aug. 1939, married to Prince Charles Hugues de Bourbon-Parma on 29 April 1964, divorced 1981 (sons: Prince Carlos Javier Bernardo, born 27 Jan. 1970; Prince Jaime Bernardo, born 13 Oct. 1972; daughters: Princess Margarita Maria Beatriz, born 13 Oct. 1972; Princess Maria Carolina Christina, born 23 June 1974); Princess Margriet Francisca, born in Ottawa, 19 Jan. 1943, married to Pieter van Vollenhoven on 10 Jan. 1967 (sons: Prince Maurits, born 17 April 1968; Prince Bernhard, born 25 Dec. 1969; Prince Pieter-Christiaan, born 22 March 1972; Prince Floris, born 10 April 1975); Princess Maria Christina, born 18 Feb. 1947, married to Jorge Guillermo on 28 June 1975 (sons: Bernardo, born 17 June 1977; Nicolas, born 6 July 1979; daughter: Juliana, born 8 Oct. 1981).

The royal succession is in the direct female or male line in order of birth.

The central executive power of the State rests with the Crown, while the central legislative power is vested in the Crown and Parliament (the States-General), consisting of 2 Chambers. The upper First Chamber is composed of 75 members, elected by the members of the Provincial States. The 150-member Second Chamber is directly elected by proportional representation for 4-year terms. Members of the States-General must be Netherlands subjects of 18 years of age or over.

The Council of State, appointed by the Crown, is composed of a vice-president and not more than 28 members. The monarch is president, but the day-to-day running of the Council is in the hands of the vice-president. The Council has to be consulted on all legislative matters.

The Hague is the seat of the Court, government and Parliament; Amsterdam is the capital.

The Sovereign has the power to dissolve either Chambers, subject to the condition that new elections take place within 40 days, and the new Chamber be convoked within 3 months.

Both the government and the Second Chamber may propose Bills; the First Chamber can only approve or reject them without inserting amendments. The meetings of both Chambers are public, though each of them may by a majority vote decide on a secret session. A Minister or Secretary of State cannot be a member of Parliament at the same time.

The Constitution can be revised only by a Bill declaring that there is reason for introducing such revision and containing the proposed alterations. The passing of this Bill is followed by a dissolution of both Chambers and a second confirmation by the new States-General by two-thirds of the votes. Unless it is expressly stated, all laws concern only the realm in Europe, and not the overseas part of the kingdom, Aruba and the Netherlands Antilles.

ARUBAKEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Discovered by Alonzo de Ojeda in 1499, the island of Aruba was claimed for Spain but not settled. It was acquired by the Dutch in 1634, but apart from garrisons, was left to the indigenous Caiquetious (Arawak) Indians until the 19th century. From 1828 it formed part of the Dutch West Indies and, from 1845, part of the Netherlands Antilles with which, on 29 Dec. 1954, it achieved internal self government. Following a referendum in March 1977, the Dutch government announced on 28 Oct. 1981 that Aruba would proceed to independence separately from the other islands. Aruba was constitutionally separated from the Netherlands Antilles from 1 Jan. 1986, and full independence promised by the Netherlands after a 10-year period. However, an agreement with the Netherlands government in June 1990 deletes, at Aruba's request, references to eventual independence.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The island, which lies in the southern Caribbean 32 km north of the Venezuelan coast and 68 km west of Curaçao, has an area of 180 sq. km (75 sq. miles) and a population at the 1995 census of 65,974; density, 369 per sq. km. Population in 1998, 93,424; density, 519 per sq. km. The chief towns are Oranjestad, the capital (1998 population, 29,000) and Sint Nicolaas. Dutch is the official language, but the language usually spoken is Papiamentu, a creole language. Over half the population is of Indian stock, with the balance of Dutch, Spanish and mestizo origin.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Netherlands Antilles comprise two groups of islands, the Leeward group (Curaçao and Bonaire) being situated 100 km north of the Venezuelan coast and the Windward group (Saba, Sint Eustatius and the southern portion of Sint Maarten) situated 800 km away to the northeast, at the northern end of the Lesser Antilles. The total area is 800 sq. km (308 sq. miles) and the census population in 1995 was 207,333. The estimated population for 2000 was 210,000. An estimated 69·2% of the population were urban in 1995. Willemstad is the capital and had a 1999 population of 123,000.

The areas, populations and chief towns of the islands are:

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

On 29 Dec. 1954 the Netherlands Antilles became an integral part of the Kingdom of the Netherlands but are fully autonomous in internal affairs, and constitutionally equal with the Netherlands and Aruba. The Sovereign of the Kingdom of the Netherlands is Head of State and Government, and is represented by a Governor.

The executive power in internal affairs rests with the Governor and the Council of Ministers, who together form the government. The Ministers are responsible to a unicameral legislature (States) consisting of 22 members, elected for a 4-year term in 3 multi-seat constituencies and 2 single-seat constituencies.

The executive power in external affairs is vested in the Council of Ministers of the Kingdom, in which the Antilles is represented by a Minister Plenipotentiary with full voting powers. On each of the insular communities, local autonomous power is divided between an Island Council (elected by universal suffrage), the Executive Council and the Lieut.-Governor, responsible for law and order.

At a referendum in Curaçao on 19 Nov. 1993, 73% of votes cast favoured maintaining the status quo of Curaçao as part of the Netherlands Antilles. The other options were: autonomy (18%), unification with the Netherlands (8%) or complete independence (1%). At a referendum in Oct. 1994 Sint Maarten, Sint Eustatius and Saba voted to remain part of the Netherlands Antilles.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

New Zealand was first called Aotearoa by the Maori who migrated from other northern islands in Polynesia, sometime around AD 1400. The first European to discover New Zealand was Abel Tasman in 1642. He named the south island after the Dutch province of Zeeland. The coast was explored by Capt. Cook in 1769. From about 1800 onwards, New Zealand became a resort for whalers and traders, chiefly from Australia. New Zealand's European constitutional history can be traced back to 1840 when the Maori entered into an agreement with the Crown under the Treaty of Waitangi and New Zealand became a British colony with the Maori retaining full rights of self-governance. However, the effective administration of the country was soon taken over by European settlers although there were movements for Maori self-government. These movements declined in the early 1900s but the struggle for self-determination has re-emerged in recent years which have also seen a relative decline in the number of immigrants from England, Scotland and Ireland. New Zealand had its first elected House of Representatives in 1852 along with a nominated legislative Council and a Governor. Sheep farming came to dominate the economy and in 1882 the first refrigerated meat was sent to Britain.

In the last years of the 19th century, New Zealand adopted a succession of radical social reforms. New Zealand women gained the vote in 1893, the first in the world to be enfranchised.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

New Zealand lies southeast of Australia in the south Pacific, Wellington being 1,983 km from Sydney. There are two principal islands, the North and South Islands, besides Stewart Island, Chatham Islands and small outlying islands, as well as the territories overseas.

New Zealand (i.e., North, South and Stewart Islands) extends over 1,750 km from north to south. Area, excluding territories overseas, 270,534 sq. km comprising North Island, 115,777 sq. km; South Island, 151,215 sq. km; Stewart Island, 1,746 sq. km; Chatham Islands, 963 sq. km. The minor islands (total area, 320 sq. miles or 829 sq. km) included within the geographical boundaries of New Zealand (but not within any local government area) are the following: Kermadec Islands (34 sq. km), Three Kings Islands (8 sq. km), Auckland Islands (606 sq. km), Campbell Island (114 sq. km), Antipodes Islands (62 sq. km), Bounty Islands (1 sq. km), Snares Islands (3 sq. km), Solander Island (1 sq. km). With the exception of meteorological station staff on Raoul Island in the Kermadec Group and Campbell Island there are no inhabitants.

The Kermadec Islands were annexed to New Zealand in 1887, have no separate administration and all New Zealand laws apply to them. Situation, 29° 10' to 31° 30' S. lat., 177° 45' to 179° W. long., 1,600 km NNE of New Zealand. The largest of the group is Raoul or Sunday Island, 29 sq. km, smaller islands being Macaulay and Curtis, while Macaulay Island is 5 km in circuit.

Direct negotiations with the Crown have been offered to claimants and a range of proposals to resolve historical grievances launched for public discussion in Dec. 1994. These proposals specify that all claims are to be met over 10 years with treaty rights being converted to economic assets. There have been four recent major treaty settlements: NZ$170m. each for Tainui and Ngai Tahu, the NZ$150m. Sealord fishing agreement and NZ$40m. for Whakatohea in the Bay of Plenty. CLIMATE

Lying in the cool temperate zone, New Zealand enjoys very mild winters for its latitude owing to its oceanic situation, and only the extreme south has cold winters. The situation of the mountain chain produces much sharper climatic contrasts between east and west than in a north-south direction. Mean daily maximum temperatures and rainfall figures:

	Jan (°C)	July (°C)	Annual rainfall (mm) in 2000
Auckland	23.3	14.4	1,046
Christchurch	22.5	11.2	706
Dunedin	18.9	9.9	926
Wellington	20.3	11.3	994

The highest extreme temperature recorded in 2000 was 35.0°C, recorded at both Darfield and Culverden on 4 March, and the lowest –12.4°C, at Tekapo on the morning of 24 Aug.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Definition was given to the status of New Zealand by the (Imperial) Statute of Westminster of Dec. 1931, which had received the antecedent approval of the New Zealand Parliament in July 1931. The Governor-General's assent was given to the Statute of Westminster Adoption Bill on 25 Nov. 1947.

The powers, duties and responsibilities of the Governor-General and the Executive Council are set out in Royal Letters Patent and Instructions thereunder of 11 May 1917. In the execution of the powers vested in him the Governor-General must be guided by the advice of the Executive Council.

At a referendum on 6 Nov. 1993 a change from a first-past-the-post to a proportional representation electoral system was favoured by 53·9% of votes cast.

Parliament is the House of Representatives, since 1996 consisting of 120 members: 60 for general seats, 55 for party list seats and 5 for Maori seats, elected by universal adult suffrage on the mixed-member-proportional system (MMP) for 3-year terms. The 5 Maori electoral districts cover the whole country. Maori and people of Maori descent are entitled to register either for a general or a Maori electoral district. As at Sept. 1997 there were 163,310 persons on the Maori electoral roll. There are now six Maori seats at general elections.

ECONOMY

Services accounted for 66% of GDP in 1997, industry 25% and agriculture 9%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, New Zealand ranked equal 3rd in the world in 2000 in a survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 9.4 out of 10 in the annual index.

Performance. GDP at current prices grew to NZ$103,857m. in the year ended March 2000 up from NZ$95,816m. in 1997. The New Zealand economy experienced a recession in 1998 with the economy contracting by 1.0%, before recovering in 1999, with growth of 2%. The current account deficit was 8% of GDP in 1997. Total GDP was US$52.8bn. in 1998.

Budget. The following tables of revenue and expenditure relate to the Consolidated Account, which covers the ordinary revenue and expenditure of the government—i.e., apart from capital items, commercial and special undertakings, advances, etc. Total revenue and expenditure of the Consolidated Account, in NZ$1m., year ended 30 June:

New Zealand System of National Accounts. National Accounts aggregates for 6 years are given in the following table (in NZ$1m.):

Currency. The monetary unit is the New Zealand dollar (NZD), of 100 cents. The total value of notes and coins on issue from the Reserve Bank in Dec. 2000 was NZ$2,069m. Inflation was 1.3% in 1998. In Feb. 1998 foreign exchange reserves were US$4,190m. Total money supply in Feb. 1998 was NZ$34,211m.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Reserve Bank (Governor, Dr Don Brash).

The financial system comprises a central bank (the Reserve Bank of New Zealand), registered banks, and other financial institutions. Registered banks include banks from abroad, which have to satisfy capital adequacy and managerial quality requirements. Other financial institutions include the regional trustee banks, now grouped under Trust Bank, building societies, finance companies, merchant banks and stock and station agents. The number of registered banks was 18 in 2000 of which only 4 were operating in New Zealand before 1986. Around 99% of the assets of the New Zealand banking system were under the ownership of a foreign bank parent.

The primary functions of the Reserve Bank are the formulation and implementation of monetary policy to achieve the economic objectives set by the government, and the promotion of the efficiency and soundness of the financial system, through the registration of banks, and supervision of financial institutions. Since 1996 supervision has been conducted on a basis of public disclosure by banks of their activities every quarter.

On 31 Dec. 2000 the funding (financial liabilities including deposits) and claims (financial assets including loans) for all registered banks and other financial institutions were: funding, NZ$179,617m. (in foreign currency, NZ$40,362m.); claims, NZ$142,915m. (foreign currency, NZ$12,398m.).

The stock exchange in Wellington conducts on-screen trading, unifying the 3 former trading floors in Auckland, Christchurch and Wellington.

Weights and Measures. The metric system of weights and measures operates.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. On 1 April 1987 the former Electricity Division of the Ministry of Energy became a state-owned enterprise, the Electricity Corporation of N.Z. Ltd which has recently been split into two state-owned enterprises causing a competitive wholesale electricity market to be established. Around 75% of the country's electricity is generated by renewable sources. Hydro-electric plants, mainly based in the South Island, account for some 70% with geothermal power, generated in the North Island, accounting for around 5%. The rest comes from natural gas (22%), coal, wind and landfill gas. Electricity generating capacity, 1997, 8m. kW. Annual consumption per capita was 8,700 kWh in 1997.

Electricity consumption statistics (in GWh) for years ended 31 March are:

	Residential	Commercial	Industrial	Total consumption
1996	10,584	5,595	14,342	30,522
1997	10,959	6,101	14,200	31,260

1999	10,089	7,195	13,745	32,029

New Zealand also has 2 wind farms.

Oil and Gas. Crude oil and condensate production was 120.61 petajoules in 1997, all from the Taranaki region. Around two thirds of production is exported. 168.39 petajoules were imported in 1997.

In 1998 gasfields produced 201 petajoules. Gas reserves are estimated to last until about 2014, with the Maui field possibly running out around 2006.

Minerals. Coal production for the year ended Dec. 1997 was 3.4m. tonnes. Of the 45 mines operating (down from 53 in 1995), 29 were opencast and 16 underground, responsible for about 78% and 22% of total coal production respectively. Only 5 mines produced over 200,000 tonnes of coal, and 18 operations had an output of less than 10,000 tonnes. Around 60% of New Zealand's exported coal goes to India and Japan.

While New Zealand's best known non-fuel mineral is gold (producing about 12 tonnes annually) there is also production of silver, ironsand, aggregate, limestone, clay, dolomite, pumice, salt, serpentinite, zeolite and bentonite. In addition, there are resources or potential for deposits of titanium (ilmenite beachsands), platinum, sulphur, phosphate, silica and mercury.

Agriculture. Two-thirds of the land area is suitable for agriculture and grazing. The total area of farmland in use at 30 June 1999 was 15,585,027 ha. There were 13,863,279 ha of grazing, arable, fodder and fallow land, 53,692 ha of land for horticulture and 446,954 ha of plantations of exotic timber.

The largest freehold estates are held in the South Island. The number of occupied holdings as at 30 June 1999 were as follows:

Total meat produced in the year ended 30 Sept. 1997 was estimated at 1.4m. tonnes (including 646,000 tonnes of beef and veal, and 542,000 tonnes of lamb). Meat industry products are New Zealand's second largest export income earner, accounting for about 18 percent of merchandise exports. New Zealand's main meat exports are lamb, mutton and beef. About 80 percent of lamb, 80 percent of mutton and 80 percent of beef produced in New Zealand in 1997-98 was exported overseas. The domestic market absorbs over 99 percent of the pigmeat and poultry produced in New Zealand. 54% of the world's exported sheepmeat comes from New Zealand.

Production of wool for the year ended Sept. 1997 was 203,300 tonnes. Milk production for the year ended May 1998 was expected to reach a new record level of 900m. kg of milk solids. 1998 butter production, 383,000 tonnes; cheese production, 280,000 tonnes.

In 1996 a total of 2,205,568 (provisional) tonnes of fertilizer were sold.

Forestry. Forests covered 8.1m. ha in 1998 (29% of New Zealand's land area), up from 7.67m. ha in 1990. Of this, about 6.4m. ha are indigenous forest and 1.7m. ha planted productive forest. New planting has increased from 15,000 ha in 1991 to 66,000 ha in 1997. Introduced pines form the bulk of the large exotic forest estate and among these radiata pine is the best multi-purpose tree, reaching log size in 25-30 years. Other species planted are Douglas fir and Eucalyptus species. Total roundwood production in 1999-2000 was 18.11m. cu. metres. The table below shows production of rough sawn timber in 1,000 cu. metres for years ending 31 March:

In 1999-2000 forest industries consisted of 338 sawmills, 6 plywood and 10 veneer plants, 4 particle board mills, 6 wood pulp mills (4 of which also produced paper and paperboard) and 5 fibreboard mills.

The basic products of the pulp and paper mills are mechanical and chemical pulp which are converted into newsprint, kraft and other papers, paperboard and fibreboard. Production of woodpulp in the year ending 31 March 2000 amounted to 1,527,565 tonnes and of paper (including newsprint paper and paperboard) to 829,812 tonnes.

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas New Zealand's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 8.0 tonnes per capita in 1996.

Fisheries. In 1998 the total catch was 635,711 tonnes, almost entirely from sea fishing. The total value of New Zealand Fisheries exports during the year ended Dec. 1998 was NZ$1,233m., of which hoki exports constituted NZ$294.6m.

In Feb. 1998 there were 9,110 full-time equivalent persons employed in the provision of road passenger transport and 22,210 persons providing road freight transport.

Total expenditure on roads (including state highways), streets and bridges—by the central government and local authorities combined—amounted to NZ$1.1bn. in 1997.

At 31 March 1999 motor vehicles licensed numbered 2,668,536, of which 1,831,118 were cars. In 1997 there were 16,139 omnibuses/public taxis, and 38,288 motorcycles. Included in the remaining numbers were 8,425 powercycles, 346,489 trucks and 303,371 trailers and caravans.

In 1999 there were 434 deaths in road accidents.

Rail. New Zealand Rail was privatized in 1994 and is now known as Tranz Rail. In 1994 a 24-hour freight link was introduced between Auckland and Christchurch. There were, in 2000, 3,904 km of 1,067 mm gauge railway open for traffic (506 km electrified). In 1998 Tranz Rail carried 11.7m. tonnes of freight and 11.3m. passengers. Total revenue in the financial year 1999–2000 was NZ$594.5m.

At 30 June 2000 Tranz Rail track and rolling stock included 343 diesel, electric and shunting locomotives, 5,948 freight wagons, 321 passenger carriages and commuter units, 3 rail/road ferries (linking the North and South Islands) and plant and support equipment.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Wellington, Auckland and Christchurch, with Auckland International being the main airport. The national carrier is Air New Zealand. Ansett New Zealand provides some domestic services. In 1998 services were also provided by Aerolíneas Argentinas, Air Calédonie International, Air Chathams, Air Pacific, Air Vanuatu, American Airlines, Ansett Australia, Associated Airlines, British Airways, Canadian Airlines International, Cathay Pacific Airways, Chathams Airlink, EVA Airways, Evergreen International, Garuda Indonesia, JAL, Korean Air, Lan-Chile, Lufthansa, Malaysia Airlines, Mandarin Airlines, Polynesian Airlines, Qantas Airways, Royal Tongan Airlines, Singapore Airlines, Solomon Airlines, Thai Airways International and United Airlines. Trans-Tasman air travel is subject to agreement between Air New Zealand and Qantas.

The main airlines carried almost 5m. passengers on domestic services and more than 2.5m. passengers arrived on international air carriers in the year to June 1998. New Zealand has one of the highest ratios of aircraft to population in the world with 3,403 aircraft in the year to June 1998. Since 1992 air transport flights have increased by about 9 percent per year.

Shipping. In 1998 merchant shipping totalled 336,000 GRT, including oil tankers, 73,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. The provision of telecommunication services is the responsibility of the Telecom Corporation of New Zealand, formed in 1987 and privatized in 1990; and CLEAR Communications, which began operations in Dec. 1990. In 1999 there were 1,877,000 main lines, or 490.3 for every 1,000 persons. Mobile phone subscribers numbered 881,000 (230 per 1,000 persons) in 1999 and there were 1.25m. PCs in use (326 per 1,000 persons). In 1995 there were 65,000 fax machines. There were approximately 1.5m. Internet users in Nov. 2000. IT spending in 1997, at 8.7% of GDP, is one of the highest in the developed world.

Postal Services. On 1 April 1998 the Postal Services Act removed New Zealand Post's former statutory monopoly on the carriage of letters and opened the postal market to full competition. To carry out a business involving the carriage of letters, a person or company must be registered as a postal operator with the Ministry of Commerce.

In 1997 there were 297 post shops, 705 post centre franchises and 3,663 stamp resellers.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The judiciary consists of the Court of Appeal, the High Court and District Courts. All exercise both civil and criminal jurisdiction. Final appeal lies to the Privy Council in London. Special courts include the Maori Land Court, the Maori Appellate Court, Family Courts, the Youth Court, Environment Court and the Employment Court. On 20 Nov. 1997 there were 4,935 sentenced inmates of whom 207 were women. Of the male inmates 44% (some 1,566) identified themselves as Maori only compared to 38% who identified themselves as European only. Some 526,372 offences, including 165 homicides, were reported in the year ending June 1997. The death penalty for murder was replaced by life imprisonment in 1961.

The Criminal Injuries Compensation Act, 1963, which came into force on 1 Jan. 1964, provided for compensation of persons injured by certain criminal acts and the dependants of persons killed by such acts. However, this has now been phased out in favour of the Accident Compensation Act, 1982, except in the residual area of property damage caused by escapees. The Offenders Legal Aid Act 1954 provides that any person charged or convicted of any offence may apply for legal aid which may be granted depending on the person's means and the gravity of the offence etc. Since 1970 legal aid in civil proceedings (except divorce) has been available for persons of small or moderate means. The Legal Services Act 1991 now brings together in one statute the civil and criminal legal aid schemes.

Police. The police are a national body maintained by the central government. Legislation of 1994 permits the private management of prisons and prisoner escort services. For operational purposes New Zealand was divided into 4 police regions in July 1997, each controlled by an assistant commissioner. In 1991, 1,100 traffic officers merged with the police, who previously did not control traffic. In June 1998 there were 6,760 full-time equivalent sworn officers.

Ombudsmen. The office of Ombudsman was created in 1962. From 1975 additional Ombudsmen have been authorized. There are currently two. Ombudsmen's functions are to investigate complaints under the Ombudsman Act, the Official Information Act and the Local Government Official Information and Meetings Act from members of the public relating to administrative decisions of central, regional and local government.

During the year ended 30 June 2000, a total of 4,798 complaints were received, with files opened on 407 other cases. A total of 34 complaints were sustained during the year and 387 were still under investigation.

Religion. No direct state aid is given to any form of religion. For the Church of England the country is divided into 7 dioceses, with a separate bishopric (Aotearoa) for the Maori. The Presbyterian Church is divided into 23 presbyteries and the Maori Synod. The Moderator is elected annually. The Methodist Church is divided into 10 districts; the President is elected annually. The Roman Catholic Church is divided into 4 dioceses, with the Archbishop of Wellington as Metropolitan Archbishop.

Children aged 3 and 4 years may enrol at the 595 free kindergartens maintained by Free Kindergarten Associations, which receive government assistance. There are also 545 play centres which also receive government subsidy. In 1997 there were 46,756 and 17,058 children on the rolls respectively. There were also 1,288 childcare centres in 1997 with 61,597 children, 705 te kohanga reo (providing early childhood education in the Maori language) with 13,505 children, and a number of other smaller providers of early childhood care and education.

In 1997 there were 2,235 state primary schools (including intermediate and state contributing schools), with 432,721 pupils; the number of teachers was 22,289. A correspondence school for children in remote areas and those otherwise unable to

New Zealand has 7 universities—the University of Auckland, University of Waikato (at Hamilton), Victoria University of Wellington, Massey University (at Palmerston North), the University of Canterbury (at Christchurch), the University of Otago (at Dunedin) and Lincoln University (near Christchurch). The number of equivalent full-time students attending universities in 1999 was 95,120. There were 4 teachers' training colleges with 8,429 equivalent full-time students in 1999, and 70,338 equivalent full-time students were enrolled in polytechnic courses in 1999.

Total budgeted expenditure estimated in 1998 on education was NZ$5,756m. (16.8% of government expenses). The universities are autonomous bodies. All state-funded primary and secondary schools are controlled by boards of trustees. Education in state schools is free for children under 19 years of age. All educational institutions are reviewed every 3 years by teams of educational reviewers.

A series of reforms is being implemented by the government following reports of 18 working groups on tertiary education. These include a new funding system, begun in 1991 and based solely on student numbers.

The adult literacy rate in 1998 was at least 99%.

Health. At 31 March 2000 there were 8,615 active medical practitioners. In 1998 there were 109 public hospitals with 14,298 beds and 285 private hospitals with 9,156 beds. Total expenditure on health in 1998–99 was NZ$8,376m. (NZ$6,490 from public sources).

Welfare. Non-contributory old-age pensions were introduced in 1898. Large reductions in welfare expenditure were introduced by the government in Dec. 1990.

From 1 Oct. 1998 anyone receiving unemployment benefit, sickness benefit, a training benefit, a 55 plus benefit, or a young job seekers allowance has received a benefit called the Community Wage. In return for receiving the Community Wage, recipients are expected to search for work, meet with Work and Income New Zealand when asked, take a suitable work offer, and take part in activities that would improve their chances of finding a job. For the year ended 30 June 1998, 154,774 people received Unemployment Benefits (replaced by the Community Wage on 1 Oct. 1998) with total gross expenditure amounting to NZ$1,496,701,000.

In the budget of July 1991 it was announced that current rates of Guaranteed Retirement Income Scheme (GRI) payment would be frozen until 1 April 1993, thereafter to be on the previous year's consumer price index. On 1 April 1992 GRI was replaced by the national superannuation scheme which is income-tested. Eligibility has been gradually increased to 65 years. Universal eligibility is available at 70 years. At 1 April 1999 a married couple received NZ$325.58 per week, a single person living alone NZ$212.69 per week.

Reciprocity with Other Countries. New Zealand has overseas social security agreements with the United Kingdom, the Netherlands, Greece, Ireland, Australia, Jersey and Guernsey, Denmark, Canada and Italy. The main purpose of these agreements is to encourage free movement of labour and to ensure that when a person has lived or worked in more than one country, each of those countries takes a fair share of the responsibility for meeting the costs of that person's social security coverage. New Zealand also pays people eligible for New Zealand Superannuation or veterans' pensions who live in the Cook Islands, Niue or Tokelau.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Legislation of 1995 split the state-owned Radio New Zealand into a government-owned public radio broadcasting company and some 40 commercial stations.

Television New Zealand operates 2 channels. 2 other channels, TV3 and TV4, are commercial. There are also regional TV networks. Pay television was introduced in May 1990—Sky Entertainment operates on 37 channels. Colour is by PAL. The New Zealand Public Radio Service also includes the Radio New Zealand International, a short-wave which broadcasts to the South Pole. In July 1988 there were 47 AM and 17 FM stations broadcasting in New Zealand, of which 30 were privately owned. There are 21 regional Maori stations for the promotion of Maori culture. In 1997 there 3.75m. radio and 1.9m. television receivers.

Cinema. Attendances at the 315 cinema screens in 1999 totalled 17m., up from 6m. in 1991. 4 full-length films were made in 1995 and gross box office receipts came to NZ$82m.

The Sunday Star Times is a broadsheet and circulates about 190,000 copies while the Sunday News is a tabloid and circulates 115,000 copies every Sunday.

Tourism. There were 1,652,000 tourists in the year to March 2000 (in 1998, 1,518,000) of whom 537,775 were from Australia, 186,842 were from the USA, 145,637 were from Japan and 174,838 were from the UK. International tourism generated NZ$3.07bn. in 1998 (3.4% of GDP).

TERRITORIES OVERSEAS

Territories Overseas coming within the jurisdiction of New Zealand consist of Tokelau and the Ross Dependency.

Tokelau

Situated some 500 km to Samoa's north and comprises three dispersed atolls—Atafu, Fakaofo and Nukunonu. The land area is 12 sq. km and the population at the 1996 census was 1,507, giving a density of 126 per sq. km.

The British government transferred administrative control of Tokelau to New Zealand in 1925. Formal sovereignty was transferred to New Zealand in 1948 by act of the New Zealand Parliament. New Zealand statute law, however, does not apply to Tokelau unless it is expressly extended to Tokelau. In practice New Zealand legislation is extended to Tokelau only with its consent.

Tokelau's three villages are its foundation, and have remained largely autonomous. There has never been any resident New Zealand administration. At the national level Tokelau's needs remain formally the responsibility of the New Zealand government, and in particular, the Administration of Tokelau.

Under a programme agreed in 1992, the role of Tokelau's political institutions is being better defined and expanded. The process under way enables the base of Tokelau government to be located within Tokelau's national level institutions rather than as before, within a public service located largely in Samoa. In 1994 the Administrator's powers were delegated to the General Fono (the national representative body), and when the General Fono is not in session, to the Council of Faipule. The Tokelau Amendment Act 1996 conferred on the General Fono a power to make rules for Tokelau, including the power to impose taxes.

Coconuts (the source of copra) are the only cash crop. Pulaka, breadfruit, papayas, the screw-pine and bananas are cultivated as food crops. Livestock comprises pigs, poultry and goats.

Development prospects are restricted by the small land area and population, geographic isolation, and the relatively high cost of providing education, health and other services including telecommunications and shipping, to three widely separated communities. For these reasons Tokelau relies substantially on external financial support, particularly from New Zealand. Nonetheless the development of government structures at the national level has promoted a wish for Tokelau to be self-reliant to the greatest extent possible.

Tokelau affirmed to the United Nations in 1994 that it had under active consideration both the Constitution of a self-governing Tokelau and an act of self-determination. It also expressed a strong preference for a future status of free association with New Zealand.

Ross Dependency

By Imperial Order in Council, dated 30 July 1923, the territories between 160° E. long. and 150° W. long. and south of 60° S. lat. were brought within the jurisdiction of the New Zealand government. The region was named the Ross Dependency. From time to time laws for the Dependency have been made by regulations promulgated by the Governor-General of New Zealand.

The mainland area is estimated at 400,000–450,000 sq. km and is mostly ice-covered. In Jan. 1957 a New Zealand expedition under Sir Edmund Hillary established a base in the Dependency. In Jan. 1958 Sir Edmund Hillary and 4 other New Zealanders reached the South Pole.

The main base—Scott Base, at Pram Point, Ross Island—is manned throughout the year, about 12 people being present during winter. Temporary accommodation facilities provide support for specific activities in the Dry Valleys and elsewhere in the Ross Sea Region. The annual activities of 200–300 scientists and support staff are managed by a crown agency, Antarctica New Zealand, based in Christchurch.

SELF-GOVERNING TERRITORIES OVERSEAS

THE COOK ISLANDS

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Cook Islands, which lie between 8° and 23° S. lat., and 156° and 167° W. long., were made a British protectorate in 1888, and on 11 June 1901 were annexed as part of New Zealand. In 1965 the Cook Islands became a self-governing territory in 'free association' with New Zealand.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The islands fall roughly into two groups—the scattered islands towards the north (Northern group) and the islands towards the south (Southern group). The islands with their populations at the census of 1996:

Lower Group—	Area sq. km	Population	Northern Group—	Area sq. km	Population
Rarotonga	67.1	11,225	Nassau	1.3	99
Mangaia	51.8	1,108	Palmerston (Avarua)	2.1	49
Atiu	26.9	956	Penrhyn (Tongareva)	9.8	606
Aitutaki	18.3	2,389	Manihiki (Humphrey)	5.4	668

Manuae and Te au-o-tu	6.2	—	Suvarrow (Anchorage)	0.4	4
			Total	235.4	19,103

Population density in 1996 was 76 per sq. km. In 1996 an estimated 58.8% of the population lived in urban areas. The projected population for 2000 is 20,000.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Birth rate (1998 estimate, per 1,000 population), 22.5; death rate, 5.2. Annual growth rate, 1990–99, 0.6%. Life expectancy was estimated (1998) at: males, 62.2 years; females 73.1. Fertility rate, 1999, 3.4 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Oceanic climate where rainfall is moderate to heavy throughout the year, with Nov. to March being particularly wet. Weather can be changeable from day to day and can end in rainfall after an otherwise sunny day. Rarotonga, Jan. 26°C, July 20°C. Annual rainfall 2,060 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Cook Islands Constitution of 1965 provides for internal self-government but linked to New Zealand by a common Head of State and a common citizenship, that of New Zealand. It provides for a ministerial system of government with a Cabinet consisting of a Prime Minister and not more than 8 nor fewer than 6 other Ministers. There is also an advisory council composed of hereditary chiefs, the 15-member House of Ariki, without legislative powers. The New Zealand government is represented by a New Zealand Representative and the Queen, as head of state, by the Queen's Representative. The capital is Avarua on Rarotonga.

The unicameral Parliament comprises 25 members elected for a term of 5 years.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 16 June 1999 the centrist Democratic Alliance (DA) won 11 of the 25 seats, the Cook Islands Party (CIP) won 10 seats and the New Alliance (NA) 4 seats.

The consumption of water in Rarotonga averages 260 litres per person per day. There are periodic water shortages, particularly in the northern group of islands.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Colonization of the Nicaraguan Pacific coast was undertaken by Spaniards from Panama, beginning in 1523. France and Britain, however, and later the USA, all tried to play a colonial or semi-colonial role in Nicaragua. Nicaragua became an independent republic in 1838 but its independence was often threatened by US intervention. Between 1910 and 1930 the country was under almost continuous US military occupation.

In 1914 the Bryan-Chamarro Treaty entitled the USA to a permanent option for a canal route through Nicaragua, a 99-year option for a naval base in the Bay of Fonseca on the Pacific coast and occupation of the Corn Islands on the Atlantic coast. The Bryan-Chamarro Treaty was not abrogated until 14 July 1970 when the Corn Islands returned to Nicaragua.

The Somoza family dominated Nicaragua from 1933 to 1979. Through a brutal dictatorship imposed through the National Guard, they secured for themselves a large share of the national wealth. In 1962 the radical Sandanista National Liberation Front was formed with the object of overthrowing the Somozas. After 17 years of civil war the Sandanistas triumphed. On 17 July 1979 President Somoza fled into exile. The USA made efforts to unseat the revolutionary government by supporting the Contras (counter-revolutionary forces). It was not until 1988 that the state of emergency was lifted as part of the Central American peace process. Rebel anti-Sandanista activities had ceased by 1990; the last organized insurgent group negotiated an agreement with the government in April 1994.

In Oct. 1998 Hurricane Mitch devastated the country causing 3,800 deaths.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The territory was at the centre of the slave trade in the 18th century. The port of Lagos was annexed by Britain in Aug. 1861. Growing British involvement in the Lagos hinterland and in the Niger Delta led to the chartering of the Royal Niger Company which established its own political administration over a wide territory. On 1 Jan. 1900 the Royal Niger Company transferred its territory to the British Crown. The 'colony and protectorate of Nigeria' was created in 1914. Africans were excluded from political power until the end of the Second World War. Full independence was achieved by the Federation of Nigeria on 1 Oct. 1960 and it became a republic on 1 Oct. 1963.

The republic was overthrown by a military coup on 15 Jan. 1966. Ethnic and regional conflict ensued with Hausa northerners fearing domination by the Igbo people from the east of the country. The Eastern Region decided to secede as the Republic of Biafra in May 1967. This set off a bloody civil war, prolonged by international involvement, and a severe famine. Subsequent attempts to re-establish civilian rule were thwarted by the military. Following the execution of Ogoni separatist Ken Saro-wiwa and 8 other civil rights activists in Nov. 1995, Nigeria was suspended from the Commonwealth. Gen. Abacha promised to restore constitutional government by Oct. 1998 but died on 8 June 1998, reportedly of a heart attack. He was replaced as president by Gen. Abdulsalam Abubakar who scrapped election plans designed to retain power for Abacha and released political detainees. Chief Moshood Abiola, the imprisoned undeclared winner of the 1993 presidential election, died on 7 July 1998 the day before his expected release from prison.

Gen. Abubakar launched a corruption probe, announced a cabinet with civilians occupying most of the key posts and promised to give up power in May 1999 to allow for a return to civilian rule. Presidential elections were held on 27 Feb. 1999. The victor was Olusegun Obasanjo, a 62-year-old retired general who once led his country as part of a military junta. In Oct. 2000 a state of emergency was declared following violence which had claimed more than 100 lives in Lagos.

There are about 250 ethnic groups. The largest linguistic groups are the Hausa (21.4% of the total) and the Yoruba (also 21.4%), followed by Igbo (18%), Fulani (11.3%), Ibibio (5.6%), Kanuri (4.1%), Edo (3.4%), Tiv (2.2%), Ijaw (1.8%), Bura (1.5%) and Nupe (1.3%). Lagos: The capital of Lagos State until 1975, and the capital of Nigeria until it was replaced by Abuja in 1991, Lagos is the biggest city in Nigeria. The Portuguese established a thriving slave trade with local chiefs in 1472 which was not fully terminated until the British took control in 1861. Today Lagos is spread over four islands connected by bridges. It is a commercial centre and plays a significant role in Nigeria's export industry.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the 1978 Constitution, Nigeria is a sovereign, federal republic comprising states and a federal capital district. As part of the process of demilitarization and democratization, in 1993 the government created 2 parties, the Social Democratic Party (SDP) and the National Republican Convention (NRC).

On stepping down from all his offices on 26 Aug. 1993 President Babangida nominated an interim government of national unity headed by Ernest Shonekan (ING).

On 17 Nov. 1993 the Minister of Defence, Gen. Sani Abacha, assumed the functions of head of state and set up an 11-member Provisional Ruling Council headed by himself. Parliament, the 30 state Executive Councils and the 2 political parties were dissolved. A 33-member cabinet, the Federal Executive Council, was appointed, chaired by Gen. Abacha. In June 1994 a Constitutional Conference opened with 360 participants, 90 of whom were appointed by the government. In Oct. 1994 the Conference recommended the introduction of a plurality of political parties, and the rotation of the presidency between North and South to overcome the bitter hostility between the two regions. In June 1995 the Conference submitted a proposal for a new constitution to the head of state, and the latter lifted the ban on political parties. 5 parties gained government recognition in Oct. 1996. The Nigerian parliament is expected to promulgate a new constitution before the end of 2001.

Parliament consists of a 360-member House of Representatives and a 109-member Senate.

DEFENCE

In 1999 defence expenditure totalled US$2,237m. (US$20 per capita), representing 1.7% of GDP.

Army. Strength (1999) 79,000. An estimated 10,000–12,000 Nigerian troops have been operating in Sierra Leone since March 1998.

Navy. The Navy includes 1 frigate with a helicopter and 1 corvette. The Navy has a small aviation element. Naval personnel in 1999 totalled 5,500, including Coastguard. The main bases are at Apapa (Lagos) and Calabar.

Air Force. The Air Force has been built up with the aid of a German mission; much first-line equipment was received from the former Soviet Union. Personnel (1999) total about 9,500, with 91 combat aircraft including MiG-21s, Jaguars and Alpha Jets. In addition there were 15 armed helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Involvement in Sierra Leone where Nigeria supported the exiled government of President Ahmed Tejan Kabbah led to a full-scale attack in Feb. 1998 and the routing of the Sierra Leone military junta. Nigeria is in dispute with Cameroon over both its land and its maritime boundary. The two countries are in conflict on the question of sovereignty over the Bakassi Peninsula and also territory which Cameroon claims in the area of Lake Chad.

Nigeria is a member of the UN, WTO, OAU, African Development Bank, ECOWAS, the Lake Chad Basin Commission, OIC, OPEC and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 31.7% of GDP in 1998, industry 41.0% and services 27.3%. Nigeria's 'shadow' (black market or underground) economy has been estimated to constitute approximately 77% of the country's official GDP—one of the highest percentages of any country in the world.

Policy. With the change of leadership, the long promised 3-phased privatization programme is under way. Money owed to oil companies has been paid. Sanctions, except for the ban on arms sales, have been lifted. A 10-year rift with the IMF ended with an agreement (Jan. 1999) on a Fund-monitored economic reform programme. Promised reforms included abolishing the dual exchange rate, ending the subsidy of local fuel and increasing the pace of privatization. If the incoming government does stick to this programme, expected benefits include a rescheduling of foreign debt and a further IMF agreement on a US$1bn. loan. The new legislation is also committed to implementing the Vision 2010 programme drawn up in the mid 1990s, although many observers doubt whether its goals are realistically attainable.

Performance. Real GDP growth in 1998 was -0.1% but there was a slight recovery in 1999, with growth of 1.8%. Before the discovery of oil in the early 1970s Nigeria's GDP per head was around US$200. By the early 1980s it had reached around US$800, but has now declined to some US$300. Total GDP in 1998 was US$41.4bn.

Budget. The financial year is the calendar year. 1997 revenue, ₦384,603,700m. (of which petroleum royalties and rents accounted for 36.3%); expenditure, ₦312,322m. (of which capital expenditure accounted for 52.0% and recurrent expenditure 48.0%).

Currency. The unit of currency is the naira (NGN) of 100 kobo. Foreign exchange reserves were US$4,100m. in Dec. 1996, but a dual exchange rate allows the government to purchase US dollars for 25% of the market price; gold reserves were 690,000 troy oz in 1996. Inflation was 10% in 1998 and an estimated 11% in 1999. In Nov. 1997 total money supply was ₦268,746m.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank of Nigeria is the bank of issue (Governor, Joseph Sanusi). There were 65 commercial banks (with 2,403 branches) and 51 merchant banks in 1995 (with 144 branches), in 20 of which central or state governments held a controlling interest. Total assets of commercial banks, 1995, ₦463,671m.; merchant banks, ₦91,803m. Total saving deposits, Dec. 1995, ₦121,026m.

A subsequent banking crisis resulted in a decline in the number of banks to 74 at March 1999. Of these, 17 had missed the deadline for increasing their capital to US$5.75m. by the end of 1998 and faced closure if they did not recapitalize, merge or get taken over by the end of the first quarter of 1999. In banking surveys for 1998, 26 banks were classed as 'distressed' and only 25 as 'acceptable risks or better'. It was predicted that there would be further bank closures as the industry becomes more competitive.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity, 1997, 6m. kW. Production, 1998, 14.75bn. kWh (38% kWh hydro-electric). Consumption per capita in 1997 was 143 kWh. The government plans to break up and privatize the state-run electricity company NEPA by the end of 2003.

Oil and Gas. Nigeria depends on oil for around 90% of its overseas earnings. The cumulative income from oil over 25 years exceeds US$220,000m. With the collapse in the world oil price to around US$10 a barrel (down from US$40 in 1980), it was forecast that there would be a 54% drop in revenue for 1999. Nigeria's oil production amounted to 766.5m. bbls. in 1998 (equivalent to 2.1m. bbls. a day, up from 1.5m. bbls. per day in 1986). The government aims for production to reach 3m. bbls. per day by 2003. Reserves in 1999 totalled 22.5bn. bbls. though this figure is expected to reach around 30bn. bbls. by 2004. There are 4 refineries. Oil income in 1998 was around US$1bn. a month, representing more than 75% of government revenue, but unrest which threatened to escalate into civil war caused production to be cut by around a third.

Natural gas reserves, 2000 estimate, were 3,483,000m. cu. metres; production, 1999, 5.7bn. cu. metres. Nigeria has signed an agreement for a US$430m., 600 km pipeline to supply natural gas to Benin, Ghana and Togo. It is expected to come into operation in 2002 moving around 1,415,000 cu. metres per day in the first instance.

Main food crops are millet and sorghum in the north, plantains and oil palms in the south, and maize, yams, cassava and rice in much of the country. The north is, however, the main food producing area. Cocoa

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Norway was under Danish domination from the 14th century. By a Treaty of 14 Jan. 1814, the King of Denmark ceded Norway to the King of Sweden and on 14 Aug. a convention proclaimed the independence of Norway in a personal union with Sweden. This was followed on 4 Nov. by the election of Karl XIII (II) as King of Norway. Norway declared this union dissolved on 7 June 1905 and Sweden agreed to the repeal of the union on 26 Oct. 1905. After a plebiscite, Prince Carl of Denmark was formally elected King on 18 Nov. 1905, taking the name of Haakon VII. He reigned for 52 years, after which he was succeeded by his son. From 1940 to 1944, during the Second World War, Norway was occupied by the Germans who set up a widely resented pro-German government under Vidkun Quisling. Apart from this wartime episode, the Labour Party held office, and the majority in the Storting (parliament), from 1935 to 1965. From 1965 coalitions or minority governments have held power with Labour remaining the largest single party. The discovery of extensive off shore oil reserves in the 1960s transformed the Norwegian economy, making it one of the world's richest.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Norway is bounded in the north by the Arctic Ocean, east by Russia, Finland and Sweden, south by the Skagerrak Straits and west by the North Sea. The total area of mainland Norway is 323,758 sq. km, including 17,506 sq. km of fresh water. Total coastline, including fjords, 21,340 km. There are more than 50,000 islands along the coastline. Exposed mountain (either bare rock or thin vegetation) makes up over 70% of the country. 25% of the land area is woodland and 4% tilled land.

Population (1990 census) was 4,247,546 (2,099,881 males; 2,147,655 females); population density per sq. km, 13.8. Estimated population, 1 Jan. 2000, 4,478,497; population density, 13.8. With the exception of Iceland, Norway is the most sparsely peopled country in Europe.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 4.51m.

There are 19 counties (fylke). Land area, population and densities:

CLIMATE

There is considerable variation in the climate because of the extent of latitude, the topography and the varying effectiveness of prevailing westerly winds and the Gulf Stream. Winters along the whole west coast are exceptionally mild but precipitation is considerable. Oslo, Jan. 24.3°F (−4.3°C), July 61.5°F (16.4°C). Annual rainfall 30.0" (763 mm). CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Norway is a constitutional and hereditary monarchy.

The reigning King is Harald V, born 21 Feb. 1937, married on 29 Aug. 1968 to Sonja Haraldsen. He succeeded on the death of his father, King Olav V, on 21 Jan. 1991. Offspring: Princess Märtha Louise, born 22 Sept. 1971; Crown Prince Haakon Magnus, born 20 July 1973. The king receives a tax-free annual allowance of 19.8m.

kroner from the civil list. Women have been eligible to succeed to the throne since 1990. There is no coronation ceremony. The royal succession is in direct male line in the order of primogeniture. In default of male heirs the King may propose a successor to the Storting, but this assembly has the right to nominate another, if it does not agree with the proposal.

The Constitution, voted by a constituent assembly on 17 May 1814 and modified at various times, vests the legislative power of the realm in the Storting (Parliament). The royal veto may be exercised; but if the same Bill passes two Stortings formed by separate and subsequent elections it becomes the law of the land without the assent of the sovereign. The King has the command of the land, sea and air forces, and makes all appointments.

The 165-member Storting is directly elected by proportional representation. The country is divided into 19 districts, each electing from 4 to 15 representatives.

The Storting, when assembled, divides itself by election into the Lagting and the Odelsting. The former is composed of one-fourth of the members of the Storting, and the other of the remaining three-fourths. Each Ting (the Storting, the Odelsting and the Lagting) nominates its own president. Most questions are decided by the Storting, but questions relating to legislation must be considered and decided by the Odelsting and the Lagting separately. Only when the Odelsting and the Lagting disagree, the Bill has to be considered by the Storting in plenary sitting, and a new law can then only be decided by a majority of two-thirds of the voters. The same majority is required for alterations of the Constitution, which can only be decided by the Storting in plenary sitting. The Storting elects 5 delegates, whose duty it is to revise the public accounts. The Lagting and the ordinary members of the Supreme Court of Justice (the Høyesterett) form a High Court of the Realm (the Riksrett) for the trial of ministers, members of the Høyesterett and members of the Storting. The impeachment before the Riksrett can only be decided by the Odelsting.

The executive is represented by the King, who exercises his authority through the Cabinet. Cabinet ministers are entitled to be present in the Storting and to take part in the discussions, but without a vote.

National Anthem. 'Ja, vi elsker dette landet' ('Yes, we love this land'); words by B. Bjørnson, tune by B. Nordraak.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections for the Storting held on 15 Sept. 1997 the following parties were elected: Labour Party, 65 (with 35.0% of the vote); Christian Democratic Party, 25 (15.3%); Progress Party, 25 (13.7%); Conservative Party, 23 (14.3%); Centre Party, 11 (7.9%); Socialist Left Party, 9 (6.0%); Liberal Party, 6 (4.5%); Coastal Party, 1 (0.4%).

During the election campaign, Prime Minister Thorbjørn Jagland announced his decision to resign if the Labour Party failed to attract at least 36.9% of the vote, the same share that the party received in 1993. He resigned on 14 Oct. 1997 and on 17 Oct. Kjell Magne Bondevik formed a coalition government of the 3 centrist parties (Christian Democratic, Centre and Liberal) with a combined 26.1% of the vote, but he resigned on 10 March 2000.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Norway is a member of the UN, WTO, NATO, EFTA, OECD, Council of Europe, OSCE, CERN, Council of the Baltic Sea States, Nordic Council, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty, and an Associate Member of the WEU. Norway has acceded to the Schengen Accord abolishing border controls between Norway, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

In a referendum on 27–28 Nov. 1994, 52.2% of votes cast were against joining the EU. The electorate was 3,266,182; turn-out was 88.88%.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 2.0% of GDP in 1997, industry 32.1% and services 65.9%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Norway ranked equal 6th in the world in 2000 in a survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 9.1 out of 10 in the annual index.

Performance. Major oil discoveries on the Norwegian continental shelf coincided with the 1974 and 1979 oil shocks, resulting in a pronounced upswing in the mainland economy which lasted until the 1986 oil price collapse. Norway only began to recover from the subsequent slump in the economy in 1993. The strong performance of the Norwegian economy in 1993–98 lifted mainland GDP by 20%, but there was a significant slowdown when in 1998 the oil price collapsed at a time when the labour market was overheated. A deteriorating balance of trade, coupled with increased wages and high interest rates, led to a recession but the economy is now back on track with growth close to the European average.

Real GDP growth was 2.0% in 1998 and 0.9% in 1999. Norway's total GDP in 1998 was US$145.9bn.

¹Provisional.

The 1999 budget, presented in Oct. 1998, projected the central government surplus to rebound by 23.5bn. kroner to over 52bn. kroner—almost 50% of the increase is due to a narrowing of the non-oil budget deficit. As in 1998 the entire budget surplus will be allocated to the government Petroleum Fund.

The standard rate of VAT is 23.0%.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Norwegian krone (NOK) of 100 øre. After Oct. 1990 the krone was fixed to the ecu in the EMS of the EU in the narrow band of 2.25%, but it was freed in Dec. 1992. Annualized inflation was 1.3% in 1996, 2.6% in 1997 and 2.1% in 1998, but was forecast to rise to 3.5% in 1999. In Feb. 1998 foreign exchange reserves were US$22,884m. and gold reserves were 1.18m. troy oz in Jan. 2000. In Jan. 1998 total money supply was 421bn. kroner.

Banking and Finance. Norges Bank is the central bank and bank of issue. Supreme authority is vested in the Executive Board consisting of 7 members appointed by the King and the Supervisory Council consisting of 15 members elected by the Storting. The Governor is Svein Gjedrem. Total assets and liabilities at 31 Dec. 1998 were 365,179m. kroner. This was estimated to have risen to 504,814m. kroner by 31 Dec. 1999.

There are 3 major commercial banks: Den Norske Bank, Christiana and Fokus. Total assets and liabilities of the 21 commercial banks at 31 Dec. 1999 were 709,121m. kroner.

The number of savings banks at 31 Dec. 1997 was 133; total assets and liabilities on 31 Dec. 1999 were 488,500m. kroner.

There is a stock exchange in Oslo.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Norway is a large producer of hydro-electric energy. The potential total hydro-electric power was estimated at 180,199m. kWh in 1999. Installed electrical capacity in 1997 was 27m. kW, more than 95% of it hydro-electric. Production, 1999 estimate, was 122,638m. kWh (over 99% hydro-electric). Consumption per capita in 1997, at 26,214 kWh, was the highest in the world.

Oil and Gas. There are enormous oil reserves in the Norwegian continental shelf. In 1966 the first exploration well was drilled. Production of crude oil, 1999, 148,728,000 tonnes. Norway is the world's second biggest oil exporter after Saudi Arabia, producing around 3.5m. bbls. a day in 1996. It had proven reserves of 10.8bn. bbls. in 1999. In March 1998 Norway announced that it would reduce its output for the year by 100,000 bbls. per day as part of a plan to cut global crude production. In Dec. 2000 the Norwegian government announced plans to sell off between 10 and 25% of Statoil, the last major state-owned oil company in western Europe. The privatization will be the largest in Norway's history.

Output of natural gas, 1999, 51,582m. cu. metres with proven reserves of 1,170bn. cu. metres.

¹Holdings with at least 50 ha agricultural area in use.

Forestry. In 1995 the total area under forests was 8.07m. ha, or 26.3% of the total land area (7.94m. ha and 25.9% in 1990). Productive forest area, 1997, approximately 67,375 sq. km. About 80% of the productive forest area consists of conifers and 20% of broadleaves. In 1998, 7.98m. cu. metres of roundwood were cut.

The catch in 1999 totalled 2,598,733 tonnes, almost entirely from sea fishing. The catch of herring totalled 807,586 tonnes and cod 256,621 tonnes. 6,399 seals were caught in 1999 (including 1,953 harp and 4,446 hooded seals). SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The judicature is common to civil and criminal cases; the same professional judges preside over both. These judges are state officials. The participation of lay judges and jurors, both summoned for the individual case, varies according to the kind of court and kind of case.

The 96 city or district courts of first instance are in criminal cases composed of one professional judge and 2 lay judges, chosen by ballot from a panel elected by the local authority. In civil cases 2 lay judges may participate. These courts are competent in all cases except criminal cases where the maximum penalty exceeds 6 years imprisonment.

In every community there is a Conciliation Board composed of 3 lay persons elected by the district council. A civil lawsuit usually begins with mediation by the Board which can pronounce judgement in certain cases.

The 5 high courts, or courts of second instance, are composed of 3 professional judges. Additionally, in civil cases 2 or 4 lay judges may be summoned. In serious criminal cases, which are brought before high courts in the first instance, a jury of 10 lay persons is summoned to determine whether the defendant is guilty according to the charge. In less serious criminal cases the court is composed of 2 professional and 3 lay judges. In civil cases, the court of second instance is an ordinary court of appeal. In criminal cases in which the lower court does not have judicial authority, it is itself the court of first instance. In other criminal cases it is an appeal court as far as the appeal is based on an attack against the lower court's assessment of the facts when determining the guilt of the defendant. An appeal based on any other alleged mistakes is brought directly before the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court (Høyesterett) is the court of last resort. There are 18 Supreme Court judges. Each individual case is heard by 5 judges. Some major cases are determined in plenary session. The Supreme Court may in general examine every aspect of the case and the handling of it by the lower courts. However, in criminal cases the Court may not overrule the lower court's assessment of the facts as far as the guilt of the defendant is concerned.

The Court of Impeachment (Riksretten) is composed of 5 judges of the Supreme Court and 10 members of Parliament.

All serious offences are prosecuted by the State. The Public Prosecution Authority consists of the Attorney General, 18 district attorneys and legally qualified officers of the ordinary police force. Counsel for the defence is in general provided for by the State.

The population in penal institutions in Sept. 1997 was 2,318 (55 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. There is freedom of religion, the Church of Norway (Evangelical Lutheran), however, being the national church, endowed by the State. Its clergy are nominated by the King. Ecclesiastically Norway is divided into 11 bishoprics, 96 archdeaconries and 626 clerical districts. There were 253,000 members of registered and unregistered religious communities outside the Evangelical Lutheran Church, subsidized by central government and local authorities in 1999. There were also 55 Muslim congregations with 45,145 members. The Roman Catholics are under a Bishop at Oslo, a Vicar Apostolic at Trondheim and a Vicar Apostolic at Tromsø.

Education. Free compulsory schooling in primary and lower secondary schools was extended to 10 years from 9, and the starting age lowered to 6 from 7, in July 1997. All young people between the ages of 16 and 19 have the statutory right to 3 years of upper secondary education. In 1998 there were 6,178 kindergartens (children up to 6 years old) with 187,869 children and 52,643 staff. In 1998–99 there were 3,277 primary and lower secondary schools with 569,044 pupils and 44,972 teachers; 703 upper secondary schools with 197,765 pupils and 21,068 teachers; and 71 colleges, with 102,935 students and 5,167 teachers.

There are 11 universities: including Bergen, founded 1946; Oslo, 1811; Tromsø, 1968; and the Norwegian University of Science and Technology, 1996 (formerly the University of Trondheim and the Norwegian Institute of Technology); and 10 specialized institutions of equivalent status. In 1998–99 these had 81,128 students and 6,423 academic staff. The University of Tromsø is responsible for Sami language and studies.

In 1996 total expenditure on education came to 7.4% of GNP and 15.8% of total government spending. The adult literacy rate in 1998 was at least 99%.

Health. The health care system, which is predominantly publicly financed (mainly by a national insurance tax), is run on both county and municipal levels. Persons who fall ill are guaranteed medical treatment, and health services are distributed according to need. In 1996 there were 15,368 doctors (equivalent to 1 for every 284 persons), 5,222 dentists and 65,232 nurses. In 1994 provision of hospital beds was 51 per 10,000 population.

In 1999, 32.1% of men and 31.9% of women smoked. The rate among women is one of the highest in the world.

Norway has the EU's lowest rate of AIDS at 11.1 cases per 100,000 population.

Welfare. In 1997 there were 628,247 old age pensioners who received a total of 53,333.2m. kroner, 246,541 disability pensioners who received 25,182.8m. kroner, 29,956 widows and widowers who received 1,806.6m. kroner and 44,986 single parents who received 2,506.0m. kroner. In 1997, 921,230 children received family allowances. Maternity leave is for 1 year on 80% of previous salary; unused portions may pass to a husband. In 1997 sickness benefits totalling 27,310.0m. kroner were paid: 14,787.9m. kroner in sickness allowances and 12,522.1m. kroner in medical benefits. SVALBARD

An archipelago situated between 10° and 35° E. long. and between 74° and 81° N. lat. Total area, 61,229 sq. km (23,640 sq. miles). The main islands are Spitsbergen, Nordaustlandet, Edgeøya, Barentsøya, Prins Karls Forland, Bjørnøya, Hopen, Kong Karls Land and Kvitøya. The Arctic climate is tempered by mild winds from the Atlantic.

The archipelago was probably discovered by Norsemen in 1194 and rediscovered by the Dutch navigator Barents in 1596. In the 17th century whale-hunting gave rise to rival Dutch, British and Danish-Norwegian claims to sovereignty; but when in the 18th century the whale-hunting ended, the question of the sovereignty of Svalbard lost its significance. It was again raised in the 20th century, owing to the discovery and exploitation of coalfields. By a treaty, signed on 9 Feb. 1920 in Paris, Norway's sovereignty over the archipelago was recognized. On 14 Aug. 1925 the archipelago was officially incorporated in Norway.

Total population on 1 Jan. 1998 was 2,596, of whom 1,438 were Norwegians, 1,149 Russians and 9 Poles. Coal is the principal product. There are 2 Norwegian and 2 Russian mining camps. 386,440 tonnes of coal were produced from Norwegian mines in 1998 valued at 113,799,000 kroner.

There were 2,327 motor vehicles and trailers registered at 31 Dec. 1998, including 1,342 snow scooters.

There are research and radio stations, and an airport near Longyearbyen (Svalbard Lufthavn) opened in 1975.

JAN MAYEN

This bleak, desolate and mountainous island of volcanic origin and partly covered by glaciers, is situated at 71° N. lat. and 8° 30' W. long., 300 miles north-northeast of Iceland. The total area is 377 sq. km (146 sq. miles). Beerenberg, its highest peak, reaches a height of 2,277 metres. Volcanic activity, which had been dormant, reactivated in Sept. 1970.

The island was possibly discovered by Henry Hudson in 1608, and it was first named Hudson's Tutches (Touches). It was again and again rediscovered and renamed. Its present name derives from the Dutch whaling captain Jan Jacobsz May, who indisputably discovered the island in 1614. It was uninhabited, but occasionally visited by seal hunters and trappers, until 1921 when Norway established a radio and meteorological station. On 8 May 1929 Jan Mayen was officially proclaimed as incorporated into the Kingdom of Norway. Its relation to Norway was finally settled by law of 27 Feb. 1930. A LORAN station (1959) and a CONSOL station (1968) have been established.

BOUVET ISLAND

Bouvetøya

This uninhabited volcanic island, mostly covered by glaciers and situated at 54° 25' S. lat. and 3° 21' E. long., was discovered in 1739 by a French naval officer, Jean Baptiste Loziert Bouvet, but no flag was hoisted till, in 1825, Capt. Norris raised the Union Jack. In 1928 Great Britain waived its claim to the island in favour of Norway, which in Dec. 1927 had occupied it. A law of 27 Feb. 1930 declared

Bouvetøya a Norwegian dependency. The area is 59 sq. km (23 sq. miles). Since 1977 Norway has had an automatic meteorological station on the island.

PETER I ISLAND

Peter I Øy

This uninhabited island, situated at 68° 48' S. lat. and 90° 35' W. long., was sighted in 1821 by the Russian explorer, Admiral von Bellingshausen. The first landing was made in 1929 by a Norwegian expedition which hoisted the Norwegian flag. On 1 May 1931 Peter I Island was placed under Norwegian sovereignty, and on 24 March 1933 it was incorporated into Norway as a dependency. The area is 249 sq. km (96 sq. miles).

QUEEN MAUD LAND

Dronning Maud Land

On 14 Jan. 1939 the Norwegian Cabinet placed that part of the Antarctic Continent from the border of Falkland Islands dependencies in the west to the border of the Australian Antarctic Dependency in the east (between 20° W. and 45° E.) under Norwegian sovereignty. The territory had been explored only by Norwegians and hitherto been ownerless. In 1957 it was given the status of a dependency.

OMAN

Saltanat 'Uman
(Sultanate of Oman)

Capital: Muscat
Population estimate, 2000: 2.72m.
GDP per capita: (PPP$) 9,960
HDI/world rank: 0.730/86

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The ancestors of present day Oman are believed to have arrived in two waves of migration, the first from the Yemen and the second from northern Arabia. In the 9th century maritime trade flourished and Sohar became the greatest sea port in the Islamic world. In the early 16th century the Portuguese occupied Muscat. The Ya'aruba dynasty introduced a period of renaissance in Omani fortunes both at home and abroad, uniting the country and bringing prosperity; but, on the death in 1718 of Sultan bin Saif II, civil war broke out over the election of his successor. Persian troops occupied Muttrah and Muscat but failed to take Sohar which was defended by Ahmad bin Said who expelled the Persians from Oman after the civil war had ended. In 1744 the Al bu Said family assumed power and has ruled to the present day. Oman remained largely isolated from the rest of the world until 1970 when Said bin Taimur was deposed by his son Qaboos in a bloodless coup.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Situated at the southeast corner of the Arabian peninsula, Oman is bounded in the northeast by the Gulf of Oman and southeast by the Arabian Sea, southwest by Yemen and northwest by Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates. There is an enclave at the northern tip of the Musandam Peninsula. An agreement of April 1992 completed the demarcation of the border with Yemen, and an agreement of March 1990 finalized the border with Saudi Arabia.

With a coastline of 1,700 sq km from the Strait of Hormuz in the north to the borders of the Republic of Yemen, the Sultanate is strategically located overlooking ancient maritime trade routes linking the Far East and Africa with the Mediterranean.

The Sultanate of Oman occupies a total area of 309,500 sq. km and includes different terrains that vary from plain to highlands and mountains. The coastal plain overlooking the Gulf of Oman and the Arabian Sea forms the most important and fertile plain in Oman.

The Kuria Muria islands were ceded to the UK in 1854 by the Sultan of Muscat and Oman. On 30 Nov. 1967 the islands were retroceded to the Sultan of Muscat and Oman, in accordance with the wishes of the population. They are now known as the Halaniyat Islands.

Estimated population (1999), 2,325,000, chiefly Arabs, and including 0.6m. foreign workers; density 7.5 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 3.97m.

In 1998, 81.2% of the population lived in urban areas. In the period 1990–95 the annual growth in the urban population was 8.2%, a rate only exceeded by Botswana and Mozambique. The estimated population of the capital, Muscat, in 1999 was 635,279.

The official language is Arabic; English is in commercial use.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 births, estimate, 66,000; deaths, 10,000. Birth rate, 1997 estimate (per 1,000 population), 29.0; death rate, 3.8. Expectation of life at birth, 1998, was 69.1 years for males and 73.5 years for females. Fertility rate, 1999, 4.6 births per woman, down from 7.8 in 1988. Oman has achieved some of the most rapid advances ever recorded. Infant mortality declined from 200 per 1,000 live births in 1960 to 15 per 1,000 live births in 1998, and as recently as 1970 life expectancy was just 40.

CLIMATE

Oman has a desert climate, with exceptionally hot and humid months from April to Oct., when temperatures may reach 47°C. Light monsoon rains fall in the south from June to Sept., with highest amounts in the western highland region. Muscat, Jan. 28°C, July 46°C. Annual rainfall 101 mm. Salalah, Jan. 29°C, July 32°C. Annual rainfall 98 mm.

In 1991 a new consultative assembly, the Majlis al Shura, replaced the former State Consultative Chamber. The Majlis consists of 83 elected members. It debates domestic issues, but has no legislative or veto powers.

Oman is a member of the UN, WTO, the League of Arab States, the Organization of the Islamic Conference and the Gulf Co-operation Council.

ECONOMY

In 1997 agriculture contributed an estimated 1.8% of GDP, industry 8.5% and services 50.6%.

Policy. The fifth 5-year development plan (1996–2000) projects that total public expenditure during the period will reach RO 10,630m. The deficit will be reduced to RO 538m., compared with the RO 2,355m. deficit of the fourth 5-year development plan. The non-oil revenue is estimated at RO 2,639m. of total revenue compared with the RO 2,095m. non-oil revenue of the previous plan. The current plan is based on an estimated oil production average of 880,000 bbls. a day valued at US$15 per barrel. If oil revenues exceed the projected barrel price of US$15–17, the surplus will be placed in the State General Reserve Fund. Total revenues are expected to increase by 17.4% from RO 8,598m. to RO 10,092m. Oil revenues are expected to constitute 73.9% of total revenues.

Operating expenditure (current expenditure) will amount to RO 8,696m. (81.8% of total government expenditure) and capital expenditure will amount to RO 1,854m. (17.4%). Contributions and loans to the private sector will amount to about RO 80m.

The public debt will be maintained at RO 1,500m. over the period of the plan. It is expected to range between 22–26% of GDP as the latter expands. The aim was to attain a GDP annual average growth rate of 4.6% at current prices and to increase the GDP share of the non-oil sectors to 69% by the year 2000.

Privatization of water and electricity is under way.

Performance. There was a recession in 1998, with the economy shrinking by 7.0%. However, a recovery followed in 1999, with growth of 5.5%. Total GDP in 1998 was US$15.0bn. The non-oil sector contributed 71.3% of this figure.

Budget. Budget revenue and expenditure (in RO 1m.):

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Revenue	1,487.9	1,602.8	1,867.4	1,426.6	1,401.8

In 1999 approximately 70% of total revenue came from oil.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Rial Omani (OMR). It is divided into 1,000 baiza. The rial is pegged to the US dollar. Foreign exchange reserves were US$1,334m. in Feb. 1998 and gold reserves 290,000 troy oz in Jan. 2000. Total money supply in Jan. 1998 was RO 566m. There was deflation of 5.7% in 1998.

Banking and Finance. The bank of issue is the Central Bank of Oman, which commenced operations in 1975 (President, Hamood Sangur Hashim). All banks must comply with BIS capital adequacy ratios and have a minimum capital of OR 10m. In 1999 there were 20 commercial banks. The largest bank is BankMuscat SAOG, with assets of OR 1.3bn. It was created in 2000 following a merger between BankMuscat and the Commercial Bank of Oman.

There is a stock exchange in Muscat, which is linked with those in Bahrain and Kuwait.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in operation.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 2m. kW in 1997. Production in 1998 was 7.36bn. kWh. Consumption per capita was 4,192 kWh in 1997.

Oil and Gas. The economy is dominated by the oil industry. Oil in commercial quantities was discovered in 1964 and production began in 1967. Production in 1999 was 904,000 bbls. a day from 2,470 wells. In 1999 exports of oil stood at 309m. bbls. Total proven reserves were estimated in 1999 to be 5.3bn. bbls. It was announced in Aug. 2000 that 2 new oilfields in the south of the country had been discovered, with a potential combined daily production capacity of 12,200 bbls. a day. Earlier in 2000 oil began to be pumped from 2 further recently-discovered oilfields. It is hoped that by 2004 daily oil production will have increased to 1m. bbls. a day.

Gas is likely to become the second major source of income for the country. Oman's proven gas reserves were 824bn. cu. metres, until the discovery in 2000 of 2 new fields which could yield a daily production of 1.78m. cu. metres. Natural gas production was 5.6bn. cu. metres in 1999.

Water. Oman relies on a combination of aquifers and desalination plants for its water, augmented by a construction programme of some 60 recharge dams. Desalination plants at Ghubriah and Wadi Adai provide most of the water needs of the capital area. In 1999 water production was 20,136m. gallons.

Minerals. Production in 1998 (in 1,000 tonnes): limestone, 1,902; marble, 166; gypsum, 165; chromite, 30; salt, 14; copper (1994), 6.5; silver (1994), 3,300 kg; gold, 569 kg. The mountains of the Sultanate of Oman are rich in mineral deposits; these include copper ore, chromite, coal, asbestos, manganese, gypsum, limestone and marble. The government is studying the exploitation of gold, platinum and sulphide.

Agriculture. Agriculture and fisheries are the traditional occupations of Omanis and remain important to the people and economy of Oman to this day. The country now produces a wide variety of fresh fruit, vegetables and field crops. The country is rapidly moving towards its goal of self-sufficiency in agriculture with the total area under cultivation standing at over 70,000 ha and total output more than 1m. tonnes. This effort has not been achieved without effort. In a country where water is a scarce commodity it has meant educating farmers on efficient methods of irrigation and building recharge dams to make the most of infrequent rainfall. According to a census of 1992-93, about 103,000 people were employed in agriculture of whom a third were women.

The coastal plain (Batinah) northwest of Muscat is fertile, as are the Dhofar highlands in the south. In the valleys of the interior, as well as on the Batinah coastal plain, date cultivation has reached a high level, and there are possibilities of agricultural development. Agricultural products, 1998 (in 1,000 tonnes): dates, 135; tomatoes, 34; watermelons, 32; lemons and limes, 31; bananas, 28. Vegetable and fruit production are also important, and livestock are raised in the south where there are monsoon rains. Camels (98,500 in 1998) are bred by the inland tribes. Other livestock, 1998: sheep, 240,000; cattle, 213,000; goats, 854,000; chickens, 3m. (1996). Live animals and meat constitute more than 25% of the country's non-oil exports.

Environment. Oman's carbon dioxide emissions in 1996 were the equivalent of 7.0 tonnes per capita according to the World Bank Atlas.

Fisheries. The catch was 108,808 tonnes in 1999, exclusively sea fish. More than 80% is taken by some 85,000 self-employed fishermen.

INDUSTRY

Apart from oil production, copper mining and smelting and cement production, there are light industries, mainly food processing and chemical products. The government gives priority to import substitute industries.

Labour. Females constituted 16% of the labour force in 1998. In 1995 there were 619,351 employees in the private sector and 110,529 persons in government service. The employment of foreign labour is being discouraged following 'Omanization' regulations of 1994.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Total foreign debt was US$3,629m. in 1998. A royal decree of 1994 permits up to 65% foreign ownership of Omani companies with a 5-year tax and customs duties exemption.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997
Imports	4,030	3,693	4,050	4,385	4,649
Exports	5,365	5,542	6,065	7,339	7,631

Oil exports make up approximately 83% of total exports. Principal non-oil exports are metal, metal goods, animals and products and textiles. Main export markets (% of total trade; non-oil exports), 1996: United Arab Emirates, 41.6; Iran, 9.3; Hong Kong, 7.8; USA, 5.1. Main import suppliers: United Arab Emirates, 23.7; Japan, 17.2; UK, 8.8; USA, 7.5.

In 1998 the value of Oman's exports fell 22.1% compared to 1997. Over the same period oil exports fell by 36.0%.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The State of Pakistan was created on 14 Aug. 1947 to provide Indian Muslims with their own state. Pakistan's status was that of a Dominion within the Commonwealth; it became a republic in 1956 and left the Commonwealth in 1972. Efforts to rejoin were opposed by India until 1989 when Pakistan once more became a full member of the Commonwealth.

The first of several periods of martial law began in 1958, followed by the rule of Field Marshal Mohammad Ayub Khan (until 1969) and Gen. Agha Mohammad Yahya Khan (until 1971). During the latter's term, differences between East and West Pakistan came to a head. Civil war broke out in March 1971 and ended in Dec. 1971 with the creation of Bangladesh.

A new constitution came into force on 14 Aug. 1973, providing a federal parliamentary government with a president as head of state and a prime minister as head of the government. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto became prime minister. His government was thought by traditionalists to be not sufficiently Islamic. There was an army coup led by Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-Haq in July 1977. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto was hanged for conspiring to murder. His daughter, Benazir, held power twice in the 1990s but was eventually overthrown in 1996 when the President, Farooq Leghari, dismissed the government for corruption and mismanaging the economy.

Relations between Pakistan and India have foundered on the issue of Kashmir, a disputed territory divided by a ceasefire line negotiated by the UN in 1949.

On 28 May 1998 Pakistan carried out five nuclear tests in the deserts of Balochistan in response to India's tests earlier in the month. US President Bill Clinton invoked sanctions but Pakistan subsequently carried out a sixth test. With first steps towards a nuclear agreement, the USA lifted most sanctions. On 11 June, following India's example, Pakistan announced a unilateral moratorium on nuclear tests.

On 12 Oct. 1999 the military chief, Gen. Pervez Musharraf, seized power in a coup, overthrowing the democratically-elected government of prime minister Nawaz Sharif. The coup, which lasted less than 3 hours, was launched after the prime minister had tried to dismiss Gen. Musharraf from his position as army chief of staff. The former prime minister and his senior allies were placed under house arrest and subsequently put on trial. Nawaz Sharif was found guilty of corruption and sentenced to life imprisonment. The coup marked the first time in history that a military regime had taken over an affirmed nuclear power.

Negotiations with India over the future of the disputed territory of Kashmir began in July 1999. The peace process has a long way to go, but the fact that talks are taking place is seen as an encouraging sign that a settlement will be reached eventually. Kashmiri leaders have stated that the war would only end when a settlement is reached involving Pakistan, India and Kashmiris. There have been some 35,000 deaths since the outbreak of the Kashmir insurgency in 1988.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Pakistan is bounded in the west by Iran, northwest by Afghanistan, north by China, east by India and south by the Arabian Sea. The area (excluding the disputed area of Kashmir) is 307,293 sq. miles (796,095 sq. km); population (1998 census, excluding Azad, Kashmir, Baltistan, Diamir and Gilgit), 130,579,571 (females, 62,739,434). There were 1.2m. refugees in 1998, a figure exceeded only in Iran. In 1999, 65.5% lived in rural areas.

Karachi: The capital of Pakistan from the partition in 1947 until 1959 when it was removed to Islamabad, Karachi is situated on the Arabian Sea, northwest of the Indus Delta. It began as a small fishing village in the 18th century and quickly expanded when the British annexed it in 1842. It is now the country's busiest sea port and handles all marine imports for Pakistan and Afghanistan.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 estimates: births, 4,950,000; deaths, 1,240,000. Rates, 1997 (per 1,000 population): birth, 36; death, 9; infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 95 (1998). CLIMATE

A weak form of tropical monsoon climate occurs over much of the country, with arid conditions in the north and west, where the wet season is only from Dec. to March. Elsewhere, rain comes mainly in the summer. Summer temperatures are high everywhere, but winters can be cold in the mountainous north. Islamabad, Jan. 50°F (10°C), July 90°F (32.2°C). Annual rainfall 36" (900 mm). Karachi, Jan. 61°F (16.1°C), July 86°F (30°C). Annual rainfall 8" (196 mm). Lahore, Jan. 53°F (11.7°C), July 89°F (31.7°C). Annual rainfall 18" (452 mm). CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the 1973 Constitution, the President is elected for a 5-year term by a college of parliamentary deputies, senators and members of the Provincial Assemblies. Parliament is bicameral, comprising a Senate of 87 members and a National Assembly of 217. The 4 Provincial Assemblies each elect 19 senators, the tribal areas are represented by 8 senators elected by the National Assembly and the Federal Capital has 3 representatives. About half the senators are elected for 6-year terms every 3 years. The National Assembly is directly elected with 10 religious minority representatives. However, since the 1999 coup all legislative bodies (national parliament and the 4 provincial assemblies) and their members have been suspended.

During the period of martial law (1977-85) the Constitution was in abeyance, but not abrogated. In 1985 it was amended to extend the powers of the President, including those of appointing and dismissing ministers and vetoing new legislation until 1990. Legislation of 1 April 1997 abolished the President's right to dissolve parliament, appoint provincial governors and nominate the heads of the armed services.

The constitutional set up of the government is again in abeyance after General Pervez Musharraf, Chief of the Army Staff, assumed the responsibilities of the Chief executive of the country following the removal of Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on 12 Oct. 1999. Musharraf formed a National Security Council consisting of 6 members belonging to the armed forces and a number of civilians with expertise in various fields. A Federal Cabinet of Ministers was also installed working under the guidance of the National Security Council. Also formed was the National Reconstruction Bureau, a think tank providing institutional advice and input on economic, social and institutional matters. The current administration has declared that it intends to first restore economic order before holding general elections to install a civilian government. The Supreme Court of Pakistan has allowed the administration a 3-year period, which expires on 12 Oct. 2002, to accomplish this task.

The Constitution obliges the government to enable the people to order their lives in accordance with Islam.

National Anthem. 'Pak sarzamin shadbad' ('Blessed be the sacred land'); words by Abul Asr Hafeez Jaulandhari, tune by Ahmad G. Chaagla.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Following the President's dismissal of Benazir Bhutto's government in Nov. 1996, elections were held on 3 Feb. 1997 for the 217 contestable seats in the National Assembly. The electorate was 54m.; turn-out was 38%. The Muslim League (N) gained 142 seats; the Pakistan People's Party, 18. 6 women were elected to the National Assembly. Following the 1999 coup, in Nov. 2000 the Muslim League party of the former prime minister, Nawaz Sharif, joined a group of parties called the Grand Democratic Alliance that has as its goal the restoration of democracy. The Alliance includes the Pakistan People's Party of Benazir Bhutto, Nawaz Sharif's former bitter political rival.

In May 1998 it carried out 6 nuclear tests in response to India's tests earlier in the month. Economic sanctions following the nuclear tests, and the general world economic climate, led to a mixed 1998–99, with real GDP growth of around 3.1%, principally because of poor performance by the agricultural sector (0.35% growth). The manufacturing (4.7% growth) and services (4.1% growth) sectors were also relatively weak. Pakistan's total GDP in 1998 was US$63.4bn.

Under them are district and sessions courts of first instance in each district; they have also some appellate jurisdiction. Criminal cases not being sessions cases are tried by judicial magistrates. There are subordinate civil courts also.

The Constitution provides for an independent judiciary, as the greatest safeguard of citizens' rights. There is an Attorney-General, appointed by the President, who has right of audience in all courts and the Parliament, and a Federal Ombudsman.

A Federal Shariat Court at the High Court level has been established to decide whether any law is wholly or partially un-Islamic. In Aug. 1990 a presidential ordinance decreed that the criminal code must conform to Islamic law (Shariah), and in May 1991 parliament passed a law incorporating it into the legal system.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Spain acquired sovereignty over the Palau Islands in 1886 but sold the archipelago to Germany in 1899. Japan occupied the islands in 1914 and in 1921 they were mandated to Japan by the League of Nations. Captured by Allied Forces in 1944, the islands became part of the UN Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands created on 18 July 1947 and administered by the USA. Following a referendum in July 1978 in which Palauans voted against joining the new Federated States of Micronesia, the islands became autonomous from 1 Jan. 1981. A referendum in Nov. 1993 favoured a Compact of Free Association with the USA. Palau became an independent republic on 1 Oct. 1994.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The archipelago lies in the western Pacific and has a total area of 1,632 sq. km (630 sq. miles); water covers 1,124 sq. km (434 sq. miles). It comprises 26 islands and over 300 islets. Only 8 of the islands are inhabited, the largest being Babelthup (368 sq. km), but most inhabitants live on the small island of Koror (8 sq. km) to the south, containing the present headquarters (a new capital is being built in eastern Babelthup). República de Panamá

Capital: Panama City

Population estimate, 2000: 2·86m.

GDP per capita: (PPP$) 5,249

HDI/world rank: 0·776/59

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A revolution, inspired by the USA, led to the separation of Panama from the United States of Colombia and the declaration of its independence on 3 Nov. 1903. This was followed by an agreement making it possible for the USA to build and operate a canal connecting the Atlantic and Pacific oceans through the Isthmus of Panama. The treaty granted the USA in perpetuity the use, occupation and control of a Canal Zone, in which the USA would possess full sovereign rights. In return the USA guaranteed the independence of the republic. The Canal was opened on 15 Aug. 1914.

The US domination of Panama has provoked frequent anti-American protests. In 1968 Col. Omar Torrijos Herrera took power in a coup and attempted to negotiate a more advantageous treaty with the USA. Two new treaties between Panama and the USA were agreed on 10 Aug. and signed on 7 Sept. 1977. One dealt with the operation and defence of the Canal until the end of 1999 and the other guarantees permanent neutrality.

Torrijos vacated the presidency in 1978 but maintained his power as head of the National Guard until his death in an air crash in 1981. Subsequently Gen. Manuel Noriega, Torrijos' successor as head of the National Guard, became the strong man of the regime. His position was threatened by some internal political opposition and economic pressure applied by the USA but in Oct. 1989 a US-backed coup attempt failed. On 15 Dec. Gen. Noriega declared a 'state of war' with the USA. On 20 Dec. the USA invaded. Gen. Noriega surrendered on 3 Jan. 1990. Accused of drug dealing he was convicted by a court in Miami and is now serving a 40-year jail sentence. There is still an American presence, but most US troops have now left the country.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were 11,384 km of roads, about one-third paved or tarred. The road from Panama City westward to the cities of David and Concepción and to the Costa Rican frontier, with several branches, is part of the Pan-American Highway. The Trans-Isthmian Highway connects Panama City and Colón. In 1997 there were 214,890 passenger cars, 62,060 lorries and vans and 16,180 buses and coaches. There were 534 road accident fatalities in 1998.

Rail. The 1,524 mm gauge Ferrocarril de Panama, which connects Ancón on the Pacific with Cristóbal on the Atlantic along the bank of the Panama Canal, is the principal railway. Passenger-km travelled in 1997 came to 5,684m. and freight tonne-km to 24,115m. The United Brands Company runs 376 km of railway, and the Chiriquí National Railroad 171 km.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Panama City (Tocumén International). The national carrier is COPA. In 1996 COPA flew to 22 destinations in 16 countries and carried 0.7m. passengers. In 1998 services were also provided by ACES, Aeroperlas, Aeroperú, Aerpostal Alas de Venezuela, American Airlines, Avianca, Aviateca, Continental Airlines, Delta Air Lines, Ecuatoriana, EVA Airways, Iberia, LACSA, Lloyd Aéreo Boliviano, Mexicana, Nicaraguense de Aviación, SAM, Servivensa and Taca International Airlines. In 1999 Tocumén International handled 1,233,316 passengers and 70,690 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. Ships under Panamanian registry in 1998 totalled 98.22m. GRT, including oil tankers, 22.68m. GRT. As at Sept. 1996, 13,618 vessels were registered. Most of these ships elect Panamanian registry because fees are low and labour laws lenient. Revenue from the registry was US$44m. in 1996. All the international maritime traffic for Colón and Panama runs through the Canal ports of Cristóbal, Balboa and Bahía Las Minas (Colón); Almirante is used for both the provincial and international trade. There is an oil transfer terminal at Puerto Armuelles on the Pacific coast. In 1997 vessels totalling 4,422,000 net registered tons entered ports and vessels totalling 2,916,000 NRT cleared.

Panama Canal. The Panama Canal Commission is concerned primarily with the operation of the Canal. Since 1 Oct. 1994 tolls assessment has been based on the Panama Canal/Universal Measurement System (PC/UMS), which incorporates the principles of the 1969 International Convention on Tonnage Measurement of Ships. Toll rates are US$2.57 a PC/UMS ton for vessels carrying passengers or cargo and US$2.04 per ton for vessels in transit in ballast. The toll rate for warships, hospital ships and supply ships, which pay on a displacement basis, is US$1.43 a ton.

The rates are set to continue the approximately break-even financial operating results after paying its own expenses.

At present some 92% of the world's shipping fleet can use the canal, but this is set to drop to 60% as many new ships are too wide for the canal. Feasibility studies for an additional set of locks that could take today's largest ships are almost completed.

Administrator of the Panama Canal Authority: Alberto Alemán Zubieta.

Particulars of the ocean-going commercial traffic through the canal are given as follows (vessels of 300 PC/UMS tons net and 500 displacement tons and over; cargo in long tons):

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Spanish first claimed the island in 1545 but the first attempt at colonization was made in 1793 by the British. The Dutch, however, claimed the west half of the island as part of the Dutch East Indies in 1828. On 6 Nov. 1884 a British Protectorate was proclaimed over the southern portion of the eastern half of New Guinea and in 1888 the territory was annexed. On 1 Sept. 1906 the Governor-General of Australia declared that British New Guinea was to be known henceforth as the Territory of Papua. The northern portion of New Guinea was a German colony until 1914 when Australian armed forces occupied it and it remained under their administration until becoming a League of Nations mandated territory in 1921, administered by Australia, and later a UN Trust Territory (of New Guinea). Australia granted Papua New Guinea self-government on 1 Dec. 1973, and on 16 Sept. 1975 Papua New Guinea became a fully independent state.

What began in 1988 as an armed campaign by tribes claiming traditional land rights against the Australian owner of the massive Panguna copper field soon escalated into a civil war for the secession of the island of Bougainville. Fighting between the government and the Bougainville Revolutionary Army (BRA) continued until 3 Sept. 1994 when a peace agreement set up a provisional Bougainville government. The ceasefire was broken by the rebels in mid-1995. In April 1998 the government of Papua New Guinea signed a 'permanent' truce with the secessionists. The 9-year rebellion claimed 20,000 lives.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Paraguay was occupied by the Spanish in 1537 and became a Spanish colony as part of the viceroyalty of Peru. The area gained its independence, as the Republic of Paraguay, on 14 May 1811. Paraguay was then ruled by a succession of dictators. During a devastating war fought from 1865 to 1870 between Paraguay and a coalition of Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay, Paraguay's population was reduced from about 600,000 to 233,000. Further severe losses were incurred during the war with Bolivia (1932–35) over territorial claims in the Chaco inspired by the unfounded belief that minerals existed in the territory. A peace treaty by which Paraguay obtained most of the area her troops had conquered was signed in July 1938.

A new constitution took effect in Feb. 1968 under which executive power is discharged by an executive president. Gen. Alfredo Stroessner Mattiauda was re-elected 7 times between 1958 and 1988. Since then, Paraguay has been under more or less democratic government. On 23 March 1999 Paraguay's vice-president Luis María Argaña was assassinated. The following day, Congress voted to impeach President Cubas who was said to be implicated in the murder. He then resigned.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Paraguay is bounded in the northwest by Bolivia, northeast and east by Brazil and southeast, south and southwest by Argentina. The area is 406,752 sq. km (157,042 sq. miles).

The population (census 1992) was 4.12m.; estimate (July 1998) 5.29m.; density, 13.0 per sq. km. In 1998, 54.6% lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 6.98m.

In 1999 the capital, Asunción (and metropolitan area), had an estimated population of 1,224,000. Other major cities (1992 census populations) are: Ciudad del Este, 133,893; San Lorenzo, 133,311; Lambaré, 99,681.

There are 17 departments and the capital city. Area and population at the 1992 census:

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Incas of Peru were conquered by the Spanish in the 16th century and subsequent Spanish colonial settlement made Peru the most important of the Spanish vicerealties in South America. On 28 July 1821 Peru declared its independence, but it was not until after a war which ended in 1824 that the country gained its freedom. In a war with Chile (1879–83) Peru's capital, Lima, was captured and she lost some of her southern territory. Tacna, in the far south of the country, remained in Chilean control from 1880 until 1929. In 1924 Dr Victor Raúl Haya de la Torre founded the Alianza Popular Revolucionaria Americana to oppose the dictatorial government then in power. The party was banned between 1931 and 1945 and between 1948 and 1956 its leader failed regularly in the presidential elections but it was at times the largest party in Congress. The closeness of the 1962 elections led Gen. Ricardo Pérez Godoy, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs-of-Staff, to seize power. A coup led by Gen. Nicolás Lindley López deposed him in 1963. There followed, after elections, a period of civilian rule but the military staged yet another coup in 1968. In 1978–79 a constituent assembly drew up a new constitution, after which a civilian government was installed. On 6 April 1992 President Alberto Fujimori suspended the constitution and dissolved the parliament. A new constitution was promulgated on 29 Dec. 1993. But while Peru has enjoyed stability and economic growth, there was still rule by autocracy which put some politicians above the law. Embroiled in a bribery and corruption scandal, President Fujimori's discredited administration came to an end in Nov. 2000 with his resignation while out of the country.

¹Constitutional province.

In 1991 there were some 100,000 Peruvians of Japanese origin.

The official languages are Spanish (spoken by 80.3% of the population in 1993), Quechua (16.5%) and Aymara (3%).

Lima: Founded by the Spanish conquistador, Pizarro, in 1535, Lima quickly became an important centre of justice and religion, being the headquarters of the Inquisition and the High Court in Peru. Situated on the Rio Rimac, eight miles from the Pacific ocean, it covers an area of 70 sq. km. Despite being devastated by an earthquake in 1746, Lima expanded massively and today its citizens account for around a third of the total population of Peru.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1998 estimates: births, 637,400; deaths, 161,200; infant deaths (under 1 year), 43,000. Rates per 1,000 population (1998 estimate): birth, 25.7; death, 6.5. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 1.8%; infant mortality, 1998, 43 per 1,000 live births. Life expectancy, 1998: males, 66.2 years; females, 71.2. Fertility rate, 1999, 2.9 births per woman.

CLIMATE

There is a very wide variety of climate, ranging from equatorial to desert (or perpetual snow on the high mountains). In coastal areas, temperatures vary very little, either daily or annually, though humidity and cloudiness show considerable variation, with highest humidity from May to Sept. Little rain is experienced in that period. In the Sierra, temperatures remain fairly constant over the year, but the daily range is considerable. There the dry season is from April to Nov. Desert conditions occur in the extreme south, where the climate is uniformly dry, with a few heavy showers falling between Jan. and March. Lima, Jan. 74°F (23.3°C), July 62°F (16.7°C). Annual rainfall 2" (48 mm). Cusco, Jan. 56°F (13.3°C), July 50°F (10°C). Annual rainfall 32" (804 mm). El Niño is the annual warm Pacific current which moves to the coasts of Peru and Ecuador. El Niño in 1982–83 resulted in agricultural production down by 8.5% and fishing output down by 40%. El Niño in 1991–94 was unusually long. El Niño in 1997–98 resulted in a sudden rise in the surface temperature of the Pacific by 9°F (5°C) and caused widespread damage and loss of life.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The 1980 Constitution provided for a legislative Congress consisting of a Senate (60 members) and a Chamber of Deputies (180 members) and an Executive formed of the President and a Council of Ministers appointed by him. Elections were to be every 5 years with the President and Congress elected, at the same time, by separate ballots.

On 5 April 1992 President Fujimori suspended the 1980 constitution and dissolved Congress.

A referendum was held on 31 Oct. 1993 to approve the twelfth constitution, including a provision for the president to serve a consecutive second term. 52.24% of votes cast were in favour. The constitution was promulgated on 29 Dec. 1993. In Aug. 1996 Congress voted for the eligibility of the President to serve a third consecutive term of office. All citizens over the age of 18 are eligible to vote. Voting is compulsory.

In 1998 President Fujimori estimated that El Niño caused US$12m. worth of infrastructure damage, killed over 100 people and resulted in tens of thousands becoming homeless. The government declared a state of emergency in 9 out of the country's 24 regions. A programme to rebuild the infrastructure, namely communication lines (bridges, roads, railway lines and canals) and healthcare facilities, to prevent the spread of epidemics, has been initiated. President Fujimori regained popularity owing to his efforts to combat the effects of El Niño.

National Anthem. 'Somos libres, seámoslo siempre' ('We are free, let us always be so'); words by J. De La Torre Ugarte, tune by J. B. Alcedo.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 8 April and 3 June 2001 for President and 8 April for the 120-member, single-chamber Congress. There were 8 presidential candidates in the first round of voting. Alejandro Toledo Manrique of the personalist Peru Possible Party (36.5%) and Alan Gabriel Ludwig García Pérez of the American Revolutionary People's Alliance (25.8%) met in a run-off, which Toledo won with 52.5%. Toledo had withdrawn from presidential elections in 2000 amidst complaints made against the electoral process. Alberto Kenyo Fujimori Fujimori, who had retained the presidency following Toledo's withdrawal, announced 4 months later that he was standing down, owing to a bribery scandal involving a close ally. He was dismissed in Nov. 2000, and replaced as Prime Minister by Valentín Paniagua, at the head of a transitional government. Pérez, a former president and unexpected candidate, had been in exile until Jan. 2001 for corrupt practices during his own presidency (1985–90).

In the Congressional elections of 8 April 2001 the Peru Possible party gained 41 seats with 26.3% of votes cast. The American Revolutionary People's Alliance gained 29 seats (19.7%), the National Unity party 15 (13.8%), the Moralizing Independent Front 12 (11.0%), We Are Peru 4 (5.8%), Change '90 New Majority 4 (4.8%), People's Action 3 (4.2%) and Union for Peru 6 (4.1%), with the remaining seats taken up by People's Solution (3.6%), All for Victory (2.0%), Agrarian People's Front of Peru (1.7%), Project Country (1.6%) and Renacimiento Andino (1.4%).

Alejandro Toledo was scheduled to take office on 28 July 2001 at which point a new cabinet was to be inaugurated.

ECONOMY

Agriculture produced 7.1% of GDP in 1998, industry 36.8% and services 56.1%.

Policy. Privatization began in 1991 under the aegis of the Privatization Commission (COPRI). By early 1995, 95 state companies had been sold bringing in revenue of US$4,400m. In 1996, 31 state companies were sold, bringing in US$871m. In 1994 a 'citizen participation' scheme was initiated to increase the extent of private shareholding in state enterprises; retirement pensions may also be taken as shares.

Performance. GDP growth was 0.7% in 1998 and 3.8% in 1999, with a forecast for 2000 of growth of 3.7%. Total GDP in 1998 was US$62.7bn.

Budget. Budget revenue and expenditure (in Im. sols):

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Revenue	20,390	24,023	27,704	29,447	28,964
Expenditure	23,033	24,686	27,232	30,104	34,168

At US$10.2bn., the 1998 budget was 10% higher in real terms than in 1997. There was a trade deficit of US$1.7bn. in 1997. In 1997 the World Bank approved a US$150m. loan to help Peru overcome expected problems associated with El Niño.

Currency. The monetary unit is the nuevo sol (PES), of 100 céntimos, which replaced the inti in 1990 at a rate of 1m. intis = 1 nuevo sol. Inflation was 7.3% in 1998. Foreign exchange reserves were US$10,954m. in Jan. 1998 and gold reserves 1.1m. troy oz in Jan. 2000. In Dec. 1997 total money supply was 14,825m. sols.

Banking and Finance. The bank of issue is the Banco Central de Reserva (Governor, Germán Suárez Chávez), which was established in 1922. The government's fiscal agent is the Banco de la Nación. In 1995 there were additionally 17 domestic commercial, 1 foreign and 4 multinational banks. Legislation of April 1991 permitted financial institutions to fix their own interest rates and reopened the country to foreign banks. The Central Reserve Bank sets the upper limit.

There are stock exchanges in Lima and Arequipa.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

Peru lays claim to 84 of the world's 114 ecosystems; 28 of its climate types; 19% of all bird species; 20% of all plant species; and 25 conservation areas (7 national parks, 8 national reserves, 7 national sanctuaries and 3 historic sanctuaries).

Electricity. In 1998 output was 18.28bn. kWh (75% hydro-electric). Total generating capacity was 5m. kW in 1997. 66.1% of the population were supplied with electricity in 1996. Consumption per capita in 1997 was 737 kWh. Peru's reliance on hydro-generated electricity means that electricity production was affected by the drought brought on by the 1997-98 El Niño.

Oil and Gas. Proven oil reserves in 1999 amounted to 400m. bbls. Output, 1996, 43.91m. bbls. Development of the huge Camisea gas field, Peru's largest commercial project, is on hold while negotiations continue with the Shell-Mobil consortium.

Natural gas reserves in 1997 were 200bn. cu. metres; output in 1997 was 40 petajoules.

Minerals. Mining accounts for some 8.4% of GDP (1996). Lead, copper, iron, silver, zinc and petroleum are the chief minerals exploited. Mineral production, 1996 (in 1,000 tonnes): iron, 2,875.6; zinc (1998), 869; copper (1998), 522; lead, 248.8; silver (1998), 1.93; gold (1997), 76.4 tonnes. Early in 1998 Southern Peru Copper, the country's largest mining company, estimated that 3,000 tonnes of copper production had been lost due to flooding caused by El Niño.

Agriculture. There are 4 natural zones: the Coast strip, with an average width of 80 km; the Sierra or Uplands, formed by the coast range of mountains and the Andes proper; the Montaña or high wooded region which lies on the eastern slopes of the Andes; and the jungle in the Amazon Basin, known as the Selva. Legislation of 1991 permits the unrestricted sale of agricultural land. Workers in co-operatives may elect to form limited liability companies and become shareholders.

Production in 1998 (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 7,100; potatoes, 2,398; rice, 1,549; plantains, 1,391; maize, 933; cassava, 884; onions, 316; oranges, 234; sweet potatoes, 222; lemons and limes, 217; barley, 166; papayas, 165; wheat, 146.

Livestock, 1996: alpacas, 2.6m.; cattle, 4.6m.; pigs, 2.5m.; sheep, 12.7m.; poultry, 77.2m. Livestock products (in 1,000 tonnes), 1998: poultry meat, 490; mutton and lamb, 23; pork, bacon and ham, 91; beef and veal, 124.

Arable land (in 1,000 ha), 1996: 35,381.8, of which 5,477 was given over to agricultural production: 4,314.4 was cultivated, 892.3 was permanent crops and 270.3 was permanent pasture. 29,904.8 ha of arable land was not used for agricultural production, with 16,906.4 natural pasture, 9,053.7 left wild and 3,944.7 was other types of earth. In Nov. 1997 more than 3,000 ha of farmlands were washed away in floods caused by El Niño.

Forestry. In 1995 the area covered by forests was 67.56m. ha, or 52.8% of the total land area (68.65m. ha and 53.6% in 1990). The forests contain valuable hardwoods; oak and cedar account for about 40%. In 1998 roundwood removals totalled 9.16m. cu. metres.

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Peru's carbon dioxide emissions in 1996 were the equivalent of 1.1 tonnes per capita.

Fisheries. Sardines and anchovies are caught offshore to be processed into fishmeal, of which Peru is a major producer. Fishing in deeper waters is being developed, subject to government conservation by the imposition of quotas and fishing bans. Total catch in 1998 was 4,338,437 tonnes, almost entirely from sea fishing. In 1995 the catch had a value of US$936.7m. Peru's annual catch is the third largest in the world after those of China and Japan. In the first 9 months of 1997, 1.3m tonnes of fishmeal was produced, up 3.4% over the same period for 1996. The central bank forecast that El Niño of 1997 would shrink the fishing industry by 14% in 1998-99.

INDUSTRY

About 70% of industries are located in the Lima/Callao metropolitan area. Production, 1997 (in 1,000 tonnes): cement, 4,300; residual fuel oil, 2,561; distillate fuel oil, 1,869; kerosene, 644; petrol, 1,175; prepared animal feeds (1994), 853; sugar (1998), 570; beer, 742.8m. litres; cigarettes, 2.8bn. units; crude steel, 510.

Labour. The labour force in 1996 totalled 8,652,000 (71% males). In 1993, 1,852,800 people worked in agriculture, 1,167,000 in commerce, 783,900 in manufacturing, 599,700 in services, 347,500 in transport, 255,000 in building, 72,200 in mining and 18,700 in electricity production. In Dec. 1994 the minimum monthly wage was 132 sols. In 1999 an estimated 7.9% of the workforce was unemployed, up from 5.9% in 1991.

Trade Unions. Trade unions have about 2m. members (approximately 1.5m. in peasant organizations and 500,000 in industrial). The major trade union organization is the Confederación de Trabajadores del Perú, which was reconstituted in 1959 after being in abeyance for some years. The other labour organizations recognized by the government are the Confederación General de Trabajadores del Perú, the Confederación Nacional de Trabajadores and the Central de Trabajadores de la Revolución Peruana.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

An agreement of 1992 gives Bolivia duty-free transit for imports and exports through a corridor leading to the Peruvian Pacific port of Ilo from the Bolivian frontier town of Desaguadero, in return for Peruvian access to the Atlantic via Bolivia's roads and railways. Foreign debt was US$32,397m. in 1998.

	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997
Exports	3,258	4,213	5,068	5,245	6,243

By 1999 gold had become the leading export, shipping 128 tonnes worth US$1.19bn.

The central bank predicted that the combined effects of the Asian economic crisis of 1997 and El Niño would result in lower export earnings and increased food imports to compensate for lost agricultural production.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Discovered by Magellan in 1521, the Philippine islands were conquered by Spain in 1565 and named after the Spanish king, Philip. In Dec. 1898, following the Spanish-American War, the Philippines were ceded to the USA. The Philippines acquired self-government as a Commonwealth of the USA in March 1934. The islands were occupied by the Japanese from 1942 to 1945. Independence was achieved in July 1946. From independence until 1972 the Philippines were governed under a constitution based largely on the US pattern. In Sept. 1972 President Ferdinand Marcos declared martial law. In May 1980 Benigno Aquino, Jr, the leading opponent of Marcos, was released from prison to go to the USA for medical treatment. He was killed when he returned to the Philippines after three years in exile. At the presidential elections of Feb. 1986 Ferdinand Marcos was opposed by Aquino's widow, Corazón. Aquino became president, Marcos fled the country and a new constitution limiting the president to a single, six-year term in office was ratified in Feb. 1987. Insurgent activities carried out since 1972 by the Moro National Liberation Front (Muslims) were ended by a peace agreement of 2 Sept. 1996 which provides for a Moslem autonomous region. But Moslem rebels continue their guerrilla war against the state. In Oct. 2000 impeachment proceedings began against President Estrada who was alleged to have received more than US$10·8m. from gambling kickbacks. An impeachment trial started in Dec. It collapsed in Jan. 2001 when he was forced from office amid mass protests.

The Philippines is situated between 21° 25' and 4° 23' N. lat. and between 116° and 127° E. long. It is composed of 7,107 islands and islets, 2,773 of which are named. Approximate land area, 300,000 sq. km (115,830 sq. miles). KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Poland takes its name from the Polanie ('plain dwellers'), whose ruler Mieszko I had achieved a federation by 966, a date taken as that of the foundation of the Polish state. He placed Poland under the Roman Holy See around 990. His son Bolesław I (992–1025) continued his father's territorial expansionism until by the time of his coronation in 1024 Poland's boundaries were much as they are today. The tendency of this state to fragment under German pressure was formalized by Bolesław III (1102–38), whose sons divided the kingdom into 3 duchies. In the 13th century Poland was laid waste by pagan proto-Russians and Mongols. In 1320 Władysław of Kraków was crowned king of Poland. The work of unification was consolidated by his son, Kazimierz III (1333–70). A descendant of his married the pagan duke of Lithuania, Jagiełło, who was converted to Catholicism and became king of Poland in 1386, uniting Poland and Lithuania in a vast multi-ethnic empire. The Jagiełłonian period to 1572 is regarded as an economic and cultural 'golden age'.

In 1648 a Cossack revolt in Ukraine resulted in a Russian victory and soon afterwards Sweden occupied and devastated the whole country. Poland's involvement in the Russo-Swedish wars of 1700–09 brought further economic ruin and political dependence on the might of Peter the Great. In the 'First Partition' of 1772 Russia and Prussia in conjunction with Austria took over a third of Poland's territory. Poland was wiped off the map by the Second and Third partitions (1793, 1795), except for a brief independent interlude under Napoleon.

Risings in 1830, 1846, 1848 and 1863 were unsuccessful. Thereafter nationalist efforts were channelled more into cultural and economic development. After the First World War, Poland was promised independence and access to the sea. A constitution was voted in March 1921. Poland's frontiers were not established until 1923 after plebiscites in Silesia and East Prussia and a war with Soviet Russia in 1920 which Poland nearly lost. In foreign affairs Poland attempted to maintain a balance between Germany and the USSR, but after Munich it accepted a British guarantee of its independence. In Aug. 1939 Hitler signed a non-aggression pact with Stalin which provided for a partition of Poland; this took place a few days after the outbreak of war.

Poland was rapidly overrun but Polish forces were able to reform on Allied soil under a government-in-exile. Subsequently, Moscow recognized the Polish Committee of National Liberation (the 'Lublin committee') which proclaimed itself the sole legal government when Lublin was liberated in July 1944. In Aug. and Sept. the Soviet army stopped short of the city while the resistance forces were destroyed in the Warsaw uprising. Elections held on 19 Jan. 1947 led to victory for the Communist-dominated 'Democratic Bloc'.

After riots in Poznań in June 1956 nationalist anti-Stalinist elements gained control of the Communist Party under the leadership of Władysław Gomułka. The raising of meat prices on 1 July 1980 resulted in a wave of strikes which broadened into generalized wage demands. Workers in Gdańsk, Gdynia and Sopot elected a joint strike committee, led by Lech Wałęsa, to demand the right to strike and to form independent trade unions, the abolition of censorship, access to the media and the release of political prisoners. On 17 Sept. various trade unions decided to form a national confederation ('Solidarity'). On 13 Dec. 1981 the Government imposed martial law and set up a Military Council of National Salvation. Solidarity was proscribed. Following strikes and demands for the reinstatement of Solidarity, the government resigned in Sept. 1988. Free parliamentary elections were instituted in Oct. 1991.

Warsaw: Lying in the east on the River Vistula, Warsaw became capital city of Poland when fire destroyed the King's Kraków residence in 1596. It has had a mercurial history, suffering from partition in 1795, Nazi occupation from 1939–45 and the overbearing influence of the Soviet Union. Since the fall of the Iron Curtain in 1989, however, Warsaw has grown as a communications centre and has a burgeoning tourist industry. Its population is 1·6m.

The 6 largest towns and cities all saw a decline in population in 1997, and in 15 out of the 20 largest the population went down during 1997.

Ethnic minorities are not identified. There were estimated to be 1·2m. Germans in 1984, and there are Ukrainians, Belorussians and Lithuanians. A movement for Silesian autonomy has attracted sufficient support to suggest that further moves towards decentralization may soon be considered. A Council of National Minorities was set up in March 1991. There is a large Polish diaspora, some 65% in the USA.

The national language is Polish.

The present Constitution was adopted on 2 April 1997. The head of state is the President, who is directly elected for a 5-year term (renewable once). The President may appoint, but may not dismiss, cabinets.

The authority of the republic is vested in the Sejm (Parliament of 460 members), elected by proportional representation for 4 years by all citizens over 18. There is a 5% threshold for parties and 8% for coalitions, but seats are reserved for representatives of ethnic minorities even if their vote falls below 5%. 69 of the Sejm seats are awarded from the national lists of parties polling more than 7% of the vote. The Sejm elects a Council of State and a Council of Ministers. There is also an elected 100-member upper house, the Senate. The President and the Senate each has a power of veto which only a two-thirds majority of the Sejm can override. The President does not, however, have a veto over the annual budget. The Prime Minister is chosen by the President with the approval of the Sejm.

A Political Council consultative to the presidency consisting of representatives of all the major political tendencies was set up in Jan. 1991.

Poland is a member of the UN, WTO, the Council of Europe, NATO, OECD, OSCE, CEFTA, CERN, CEI, Council of the Baltic Sea States, IOM, the Antarctic Treaty, an associate partner of the WEU and an associate member of the EU. Poland became a member of NATO on 12 March 1999, and full membership of the EU is likely by 2004. A European Commission report endorsed in Dec. 1999 named Poland (along with Hungary) as the country from central and eastern Europe most likely to be the first to join the EU.

ECONOMY

In 1995, 15 National Investment Funds were set up to oversee the privatization of 444 state enterprises. All citizens may purchase titles to participate in these funds for 10% of their annual salary, which will enable them to buy shares in the enterprises when privatized (Mass Privatization Scheme). By May 1997, 25.9m. persons had purchased titles to participate. As of Jan. 1997, 4,107 enterprises had been privatized and 1,900 wound up.

Real GDP in 1998 was 17% higher than in 1989. No other ex-communist country has seen such consistent progress since 1989—in almost all of the other former communist economies GDP was lower in 1998 than it had been in 1989 at the time of the changes which swept through central and eastern Europe. The private sector accounts for more than 60% of GDP.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Portugal has been an independent state since the 12th century apart from one period of Spanish rule (1580–1640). It became a kingdom in 1139 under Alfonso I. During the 15th century Portugal played a leading role in oceanic exploration, opening up new trade routes and establishing colonies. Portuguese influence extended to Guinea, Brazil, the Indies and the African coast. In 1807, during the Napoleonic wars, the Spaniards again invaded Portugal, but were driven out by the Duke of Wellington and Portuguese guerrillas during the peninsula war. Nationalistic republicans deposed King Manuel II on 5 Oct. 1910. Another coup on 28 May 1926 replaced the unstable parliamentary republic with a military government which in turn was succeeded by civil dictatorship. In the 1960s Portugal faced economic stagnation at home and rebellion in her colonies. Goa was seized by India in 1961. War raged in the African colonies. There was a coup on 25 April 1974, establishing a junta of National Salvation. During 1974–75 most of the Portuguese overseas possessions, notably the African colonies, gained independence.

Following an attempted revolt on 11 March 1975, the junta was dissolved and a Supreme Revolutionary Council formed which ruled until 25 April 1976 when constitutional government was resumed. The transit to full civilian government was completed in 1982 when the constitution was revised to reduce the powers of the president.

Macao, Portugal's colony on the coast of China, was handed back to China on 20 Dec. 1999.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Mainland Portugal is bounded in the north and east by Spain and south and west by the Atlantic Ocean. The Atlantic archipelagoes of the Azores and of Madeira form autonomous but integral parts of the republic, which has a total area of 91,905 sq. km. Population (1991 census), 9,862,700 (5,107,500 females).

In 1999 mainland Portugal was divided into 5 regions, with estimated population: North (3,570,100); Central (1,710,400); Lisbon and Tagus Valley (3,323,200); Alentejo (512,600); Algarve (348,000). Population of the Azores (244,400); Madeira, 259,900. Density (1996 est.), 108 per sq. km. (North, 167; Central, 72; Lisbon and Tagus Valley, 278; Alentejo, 19; Algarve, 69; Azores, 104; Madeira, 331).

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 9·71m.

In 1998, 63·0% of the population lived in rural areas. Portugal has a higher percentage of its population living in rural areas than any other European country. The populations of the districts and Autonomous Regions (1996):

The chief cities are Lisbon (the capital; 1999 population, 3,754,000), Oporto (1,615,000 in 1995), Amadora, Setúbal and Coimbra.

Lisbon: Located 17 km from the Atlantic coast, Lisbon lies on the North Bank of the River Tagus. It covers an area of 226 sq. km and is Portugal's largest city. It has been the capital since its integration into the kingdom of Portugal in 1147. In 1755 it suffered a devastating earthquake. Some traces of mediaeval architecture can still be seen in the older districts of which Alfama, near St George's Castle, is the oldest. Its name derives from the Arab word Alhama, meaning 'good water' or 'hot fountain'.

The national language is Portuguese.

The Azores islands lie in the mid-Atlantic Ocean, between 1,200 and 1,600 km west of Lisbon. They are divided into 3 widely separated groups with clear channels between, São Miguel (759 sq. km) together with Santa Maria (97 sq. km) being the most easterly; about 160 km northwest of them lies the central cluster of Terceira (382 sq. km), Graciosa (62 sq. km), São Jorge (246 sq. km), Pico (446 sq. km) and Faial (173 sq. km); still another 240 km to the northwest are Flores (143 sq. km) and Corvo (17 sq. km), the latter being the most isolated and undeveloped of the islands. São Miguel contains over half the total population of the archipelago.

Madeira comprises the island of Madeira (745 sq. km), containing the capital, Funchal; the smaller island of Porto Santo (40 sq. km), lying 46 km to the northeast of Madeira; and two groups of uninhabited islets, Ilhas Desertas (15 sq. km), being 20 km southeast of Funchal and Ilhas Selvagens (4 sq. km), near the Canaries.

CLIMATE

Because of westerly winds and the effect of the Gulf Stream, the climate ranges from the cool, damp Atlantic type in the north to a warmer and drier Mediterranean type in the south. July and Aug. are virtually rainless everywhere. Inland areas in the north have greater temperature variation, with continental winds blowing from the interior. CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new Constitution, replacing that of 1976, was approved by the Assembly of the Republic (by 197 votes to 40) on 12 Aug. 1982 and promulgated in Sept. It abolished the (military) Council of the Revolution and reduced the role of the President under it. Portugal is a sovereign, unitary republic. Executive power is vested in the President, directly elected for a 5-year term (for a maximum of 2 consecutive terms). The President appoints a Prime Minister and, upon the latter's nomination, other members of the Council of Ministers.

The 230-member National Assembly is a unicameral legislature elected for 4-year terms by universal adult suffrage under a system of proportional representation. Women did not have the vote until 1976. Since 1987 every government has seen through its full 4-year term.

Portugal's first referendum, on whether to ease abortion restrictions, was held on 28 June 1998. Turn-out was just 32%, but the result would have had legal force only if more than half the electorate had voted. 51% of voters favoured keeping most abortions a crime, against 49% in favour of permitting the procedure on demand.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Qatar embraced Islam in the 7th century AD, and since then it has been noted regularly in the accounts of Arab historians and writers. Like all countries in the area, it came under Turkish rule for several centuries. Ottoman power was nominal, with real power being in the hands of local sheikhs and tribal leaders. In 1915 the Turks withdrew, and on 3 Nov. 1916 Qatar signed a protection treaty with Britain. The dominant economic activity had traditionally been pearl diving, but around 1930 the pearl market collapsed. In 1939 oil was discovered. Although the Second World War delayed progress, exporting began in 1949. This was to change Qatar dramatically. Qatar declared its independence from Britain on 3 Sept. 1971, ending the Treaty of 1916 which was replaced by a Treaty of friendship between the 2 countries.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The foundation of the feudal 'Danubian Principalities' of Wallachia and Moldavia in the late 13th and early 14th centuries marks the beginning of modern Romania. The nobility acted as the Turks' agents until 1711 when, suspected of pro-Russian sentiments, they were replaced by Greek merchant adventurers, the Phanariots. The Phanariot period of ruthless extortion and corruption was ameliorated by Russian influence. Between 1829 and 1834 the foundations of the modern state were laid but Russian interference soon became repressive. The Moldavian and Wallachian assemblies were fused in 1862. In 1866 Carol of Hohenzollern came to the throne and a constitution adopted based on that of Belgium of 1831. Romania was formally declared independent by the Treaty of Berlin of 1878.

This was a period of expansion for an economy controlled by land-owners and nascent industrialists. The condition of the peasantry remained miserable and the rebellion of 1907 was an expression of their discontent. Romania joined the First World War on the allied side in 1916. The spoils of victory brought Transylvania (with large Hungarian and German populations), Bessarabia, Bukovina and Dobrudja into the union with the 'Old Kingdom'. Hit by the world recession, Romania was drawn into Germany's economic orbit. Against this background the fascist Iron Guard assassinated the Liberal leader in 1934. Carol II adopted an increasingly totalitarian rule. Following Nazi and Soviet annexations of Romanian territory in 1940, he abdicated in favour of his son Michael. The government of the fascist Ion Antonescu declared war on the USSR on 22 June 1941. On 23 Aug. 1944 Michael, with the backing of a bloc of opposition parties, deposed Antonescu and switched sides.

The armistice of Sept. 1944 gave the Soviet army control of Romania's territory. This, and the 'spheres of influence' diplomacy of the Allies, predetermined the establishment of communism in Romania. Transylvania was restored to Romania (though it lost Bessarabia and Southern Dobrudja), and large estates were broken up for the benefit of the peasantry. Elections in Nov. 1946 were held in an atmosphere of intimidation and fraudulence. Michael was forced to abdicate and a people's republic was proclaimed. The communist leader, Gheorghe Gheorghiu-Dej, purged himself of his fellow leaders in the early 1950s. Under his successor, Nicolae Ceaușescu, Romania took a relatively independent stand in foreign affairs while becoming increasingly repressive and impoverished domestically.

An attempt by the authorities on 16 Dec. 1989 to evict a Protestant pastor, László Tökés, from his home in Timișoara, provoked a popular protest which escalated into a mass demonstration against the government. A state of emergency was declared but the Army went over to the rebels and Nicolae and Elena Ceaușescu fled the capital. A dissident group which had been active before the uprising, the National Salvation Front (NSF), proclaimed itself the provisional government. The Ceaușescus were captured and after a secret two hour trial by military tribunal, summarily executed on 25 Dec. On 26 Dec. 1989 Ion Iliescu, leader of the National Salvation Front, was sworn in as President. But the Iliescu-led administration, while committed to reform, was inhibited by its communist origins. The economy stalled and the debts piled up. Iliescu was voted out of office and his government replaced by a four party coalition led by President Emil Constantinescu.

In 1997 over 1,850 state companies were privatized. Most of the companies still in state hands were to be privatized by the end of 1998. The liquidation of bankrupt state enterprises is proceeding slowly. Even so, the freeing of prices and ending of many subsidies has pushed up inflation to 20% plus.

Legislation of Nov. 1995 compensates former owners of 0.2m. nationalized properties. Compensation is limited to the ownership of 1 home if lived in or 50m. lei.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

At the end of the 17th century the Russian Empire, embracing much of eastern Europe and northern and central Asia, was governed as an autocracy under the Romanovs.

The Communist revolution of 8 March 1917 led to the abdication of Tsar Nicholas II and the proclamation of a republic. However, a political struggle went on between the supporters of the Provisional Government—the Mensheviks and the Socialist Revolutionaries—and the Bolsheviks. When they had won majorities in the Soviets of the principal cities and of the armed forces on several fronts, the Bolsheviks organized an insurrection through a Military-Revolutionary Committee of the Petrograd Soviet. On 7 Nov. 1917 the Committee arrested the Provisional Government and transferred power to the second All-Russian Congress of Soviets. This elected a new government, the Council of People's Commissars, headed by Lenin. From about 1929 Joseph Stalin's authority was supreme. Resistance to agricultural collectivization was ruthlessly suppressed. A series of Five-Year Plans (1928, 1933, 1937, 1946 and 1951) transformed the USSR into a powerful industrial state. Opposition in party and government was crushed by the purges of 1933 and 1936–38. In Sept. 1939 (under a secret clause of the 10-year non-aggression signed with Nazi Germany on 23 Aug. 1939) Soviet troops occupied eastern Poland. After Hitler invaded Russia, Stalin allied himself with the USA and Britain while extending his power in Central and Eastern Europe. Following the death of Stalin in 1953, Nikita Khrushchev condemned his regime. This encouraged a liberalizing of the Russian-backed communist regimes of Hungary and Poland, and later Czechoslovakia (1968) which the USSR crushed.

A policy of 'peaceful co-existence' with the West, especially after the war scare with the USA in 1962 over Cuban missiles, led to years of strained relations with China. After 1985, with Mikhail Gorbachev as Secretary-General of the Communist Party, a new period of glasnost (openness) and perestroika (reconstruction) was inaugurated. On 19 Aug 1991 hardliners in the Kremlin attempted to overthrow President Gorbachev, and tanks were sent on to the streets as it was announced that Gorbachev had in effect been deposed. Russian President Boris Yeltsin orchestrated the opposition to the coup, and after 3 days it ended in failure. This was followed by declarations of independence by the various constituent republics which made up the Soviet Union.

After the dissolution of the USSR in Dec. 1991, Russia became one of the founding members of the Commonwealth of Independent States. Boris Yeltsin was elected Russian President in June 1991. A period of confrontation in 1992–93 between President Yeltsin and parliament climaxed when thousands of armed anti-Yeltsin demonstrators assembled on 3 Oct. and were urged to seize the Kremlin and television centre. On 4 Oct. troops took the parliament building by storm after a 10-hour assault in which 140 people died. Vice-President Rutskoi and Speaker Khasbulatov were arrested.

Boris Yeltsin was re-elected president in 1996. Many took this as a signal of confidence in the new, democratic Russia. But the reality was a state in which democratic institutions were weakened to the point of impotence by racketeering and bureaucratic dead-weight. Russia defaulted on its debt, the rouble halved in value, imports fell by 45% and oil revenues slumped. On 17 Aug. 1998 the government freed the rouble, in effect devaluing it, imposed currency controls and froze the domestic debt market.

In Aug. 1999 Boris Yeltsin appointed as prime minister Vladimir Putin, who had been a KGB colonel and director of the KGB's successor organization, the FSB. On 31 Dec. 1999 Yeltsin resigned the presidency, nominating Putin as his ad interim successor, a job he retained after a clear-cut victory in the presidential election of March 2000.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Russia is bounded in the north by various seas (Barents, Kara, Laptev, East Siberian) which join the Arctic Ocean, and in which is a fringe of islands, some of them large. In the east Russia is separated from the USA (Alaska) by the Bering Strait; the Kamchatka peninsula separates the coastal Bering and Okhotsk Seas. Sakhalin Island, north of Japan, is Russian territory. Russia is bounded in the south by North Korea, China, Mongolia, Kazakhstan, the Caspian Sea, Georgia, the Black Sea and Ukraine, and in the west by Belarus, Latvia, Estonia, the Baltic Sea and Finland. Kaliningrad (the former East Prussia) is an exclave on the Baltic Sea between Lithuania and Poland in the west. Russia's area is 17,075,400 sq. km and has 11 time zones. Its 1989 census population was 147,021,869 (53.3% female), of whom 81.5% were Russians, 3.8% Tatars, 3% Ukrainians, 1.2% Chuvash, 0.9% Bashkir, 0.8% Belorussians, and 0.7% Mordovians. Chechens, Germans, Udmurts, Mari, Kazakhs, Avars, Jews and Armenians all numbered 0.5m. or more. Population estimate, 1998, 147,100,000 (female, 53%); density, 9 per sq. km.

In 1998, 77.0% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 141.05m.

There were 915,000 immigrants in 1995, mainly from the former Soviet republics.

The 2 principal cities are Moscow, the capital, with a 1999 population of 9.31m. and St Petersburg (formerly Leningrad), 4.80m. in 1996. Other major cities are: Nizhny Novgorod (1.38m. in 1996); Novosibirsk (1.37m. in 1996); Yekaterinburg (1.28m. in 1996); Samara (1.26m. in 1995); Omsk (1.22m. in 1995). Moscow: A settlement area since pre-historic times, Moscow is Russia's political economic and transport centre. Having developed radially from its historic centre it is a city that has preserved its traditional structure as it has grown to accommodate 9.3m. inhabitants. Moscow has a significant cultural framework and a lucrative tourist industry that has thrived since the end of the Cold War.

The national language is Russian.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 births, 1,313,000; deaths, 2,316,000; 1995 marriages, 1,075,219. Rates, 1996 (per 1,000 population): birth, 8.9; death, 15.7. 1995: marriage, 7.3; divorce, 4.5. At the beginning of the 1970s the death rate had been just 9.4 per 1,000 population. The annual abortion rate, at approximately 70 per 1,000 women aged 15-44, ranks among the highest in the world. Infant mortality, 1998 (per 1,000 live births), 21. There were 61.9 divorces per 100 marriages in 1995. The most popular age range for marrying in 1995 was 20-24 for both males and females. Expectation of life at birth, 1998, was 60.7 years for males and 72.9 years for females. With a difference of 12.2 years, no other country has a life expectancy for females so high compared to that for males. The low life expectancy (down from 64.6 years for males and 74 years for females in the USSR as a whole in 1989) and the low birth rate (down from 17.6 per 1,000 population in the USSR in 1989) is causing a demographic crisis. If current trends continue, the population could fall by nearly 40m. in the first 25 years of the 21st century. Disease, pollution, poor health care and alcoholism are all contributing to the dramatic decline in the population. In 2000, 35% of Russians were living below the poverty line, up from 21% in 1997. Annual population growth rate, 1990-99, -0.1%; fertility rate, 1999, 1.4 births per woman. The suicide rate, at 39.1 per 100,000 population in 1996, is one of the highest in the world. Among males it was 72.5 per 100,000 population in 1995.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Russian Soviet Federative Socialist Republic (RSFSR) adopted a constitution in April 1978. In June 1990, pending the promulgation of a new constitution, it adopted a declaration of republican sovereignty by 544 votes to 271. It became a founding member of the CIS in Dec. 1991, and adopted the name 'Russian Federation'. A law of Nov. 1991 extended citizenship to all who lived in Russia at the time of its adoption and to those in other Soviet republics who requested it.

There is a 19-member Constitutional Court, whose functions under the 1993 Constitution include making decisions on the constitutionality of federal laws, presidential and government decrees, and the constitutions and laws of the subjects of the Federation. It is governed by a Law on the Constitutional Court, adopted in July 1994. Judges are elected for non-renewable 12-year terms.

At a referendum on 25 April 1993 the electorate was 107.3m.; turn-out was 69.2m. 4 questions were put: confidence in President Yeltsin (58.7% of votes cast); approval of economic reforms (53% of votes cast); early presidential elections (31.7% of the electorate); early parliamentary elections (43.1% of the electorate). This referendum had no constitutional effect, however.

Voting was held on 12 Dec. 1993 on the adoption of a new constitution and the election of a new parliament for a 2-year term. The electorate was 106,170,335; turn-out was 54.8%. The constitution was approved by 58.4% of votes cast, and came into effect on 24 Dec. 1993.

According to the 1993 Constitution the Russian Federation is a 'democratic federal legally-based state with a republican form of government'. The state is a secular one, and religious organizations are independent of state control. Individuals have freedom of movement within or across the boundaries of the Federation; there is freedom of assembly and association, and freedom to engage in any entrepreneurial activity not forbidden by law. All citizens have a right to housing, to free medical care, and to a free education. The state itself is based upon a separation of powers and upon federal principles, including a Constitutional Court. The most important matters of state are reserved for the federal government, including socio-economic policy, the budget, taxation, energy, foreign affairs and defence. Other matters, including the use of land and water, education and culture, health and social security, are for the joint management of the federal and local governments, which also have the right to legislate within their spheres of competence. A central role is accorded to the President, who defines the 'basic directions of domestic and foreign policy' and represents the state internationally. The President is directly elected for a 4-year term, and for not more than 2 consecutive terms; he or she must be at least 35 years old, a Russian citizen, and a resident in Russia for at least the previous 10 years. 1m. signatures are needed to validate a presidential candidate, no more than 7% of which may come from any one region or republic. The President has the right to appoint the prime minister, and (on his nomination) to appoint and dismiss deputy prime ministers and ministers, and may dismiss the government as a whole. In the event of the death or incapacity of the President, the Prime Minister becomes head of state.

Parliament is known as the Federal Assembly. The 'representative and legislative organ of the Russian Federation', it consists of 2 chambers: the Council of the Federation and the State Duma. The Council of the Federation, or upper house, consists of 178 deputies, 2 from each of the 89 subjects of the Federation. The Federation is made up of 21 republics, 1 autonomous region, 10 autonomous areas, 6 territories, 49 regions and 2 federal cities. The State Duma, or lower house, consists of 450 deputies chosen for a 4-year term. 225 of these are elected from single-member constituencies on the first-past-the-post system, the remainder from party lists by proportional representation. To qualify for candidacy an individual must obtain signatures from at least 1% of voters in the constituency; a party or electoral alliance must obtain a minimum of 100,000 supporting signatures from at least 7 regions, but not more than 15% from any one region. There is a 5% threshold for the party-list seats. Parties which gain at least 35 seats may register as a faction, which gives them the right to join the Duma Council and chair committees. Any citizen aged over 21 may be elected to the State Duma, but may not at the same time be a member of the upper house or of other representative bodies, and all deputies work on a 'permanent professional basis'. Both houses elect a chair, committees and commissions. The Council of the Federation considers all matters that apply to the Federation as a whole, including state boundaries, martial law, and the deployment of Russian forces elsewhere. The Duma approves nominations for Prime Minister, and adopts federal laws (they are also considered by the Council of the Federation, but any objection may be overridden by a two-thirds majority; objections on the part of the President may be overridden by both houses on the same basis). The Duma for its part can reject nominations for Prime Minister, but after the third such rejection it is automatically dissolved. It is also dissolved if it twice votes a lack of confidence in the government as a whole, or if it refuses to express confidence in the government when the matter is raised by the Prime Minister.

National Anthem. In Dec. 2000 the Russian parliament, on President Putin's initiative, decided that the tune of the anthem of the former Soviet Union should be reintroduced as the Russian national anthem. Written by Alexander Alexandrov in 1943, the anthem was composed for Stalin. New words were written by Sergei Mikhalkov, who had written the original words for the Soviet anthem in 1943. The new anthem is 'Rossiya—svyashennaya nasha derzhava, Rossiya—lyubimaya nasha strana' ('Russia—our holy country, Russia—our beloved country'). Boris Yeltsin had introduced a new anthem during his presidency—'Patriotic Song', from an opera by Mikhail Glinka and arranged by Andrei Petrov.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Vladimir Putin became President for a 4-year term at the elections of 26 March 2000, gaining 52.6% of the votes cast against 10 opponents and thus avoiding a second round. His nearest opponent was Gennadiy Zyuganov, the Communist Party candidate, who won 29.3% of the vote. Turn-out was around 70%.

Elections for the State Duma were held on 19 Dec. 1999. The Communist Party gained 113 seats with 24.3% of the vote; Inter-Regional Unity Movement, 72 (23.3%); Fatherland All Russia, 66 (13.3%); Union of Right Forces, 29 (8.5%); Yabloko (Apple), 21 (5.9%); Zhironovsky Blok (Liberal Democrat Party of Russia), 17 (6.0%); Our Home is Russia, 7 (1.2%); All Russian Political Movement in Support of the Army, 2 (0.6%); Pensioners' Party, 1 (2.0%); Congress of Russian Communities and Movement of Y. Boldurev, 1 (0.6%); Russian Socialist Party, 1 (0.2%). Non-partisans claimed 106 seats.

DEFENCE

The President of the Republic is C.-in-C. of the armed forces. Conscription was raised from 18 months to 2 years in April 1995. There are plans to end conscription by 2005.

The START 2 nuclear arms cutting treaty was ratified by the Duma in April 2000, 7 years after it had been signed. This obliged both Russia and the USA to reduce their stocks of strategic weapons from some 6,000 nuclear warheads to 3,500. At the height of the Cold War each side had possessed over 10,000.

A presidential decree of Feb. 1997 ordered a cut in the armed forces of 200,000 men, reducing them to an authorized strength of 1,004,100 in 1999. This figure included 200,000 staff at the Ministry of Defence and 478,000 paramilitary troops (including 196,000 border troops).

Military expenditure totalled US$56,800m. in 1999 (US$380 per capita), representing 5.1% of GDP. At the beginning of the 1990s defence spending had accounted for more than 10% of GDP. Only the USA spent more on defence in 1998.

Nuclear Weapons. Russia's warhead count is now shrinking and stood at 5,906 in Jan. 2000 according to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute. Shortfalls in planned investments to replace current systems as they reach the end of their service lives means the number of strategic warheads will decline rapidly over the next decade. Current plans are to cut stockpiles to between 2,000 and 2,500, but President Putin has proposed that the target for both Russia and the USA should be 1,500, with even further reductions to follow.

Army. A Russian Army was created by presidential decree in March 1992. In 1999 forces numbered 348,000 (185,000 conscripts). There were estimated to be around 20,000,000 reserves (all armed forces) of whom 2,400,000 have seen service within the last 5 years. There were around 20,000 Russian troops stationed outside Russia (including 5,000 in Georgia and 3,100 in Armenia) in 1999, the majority in various states of the former USSR.

The Army is deployed in 8 military districts and 1 Group of Forces. Equipment includes some 15,500 main battle tanks (including T-55, T-62, T-64A/-B, T-72L/-M, T-80/-U/UD/UM and T-90s) plus 200 light tanks (PT-76).

The Army air element has some 2,300 attack helicopters in the inventory including Mi-24s and Ka-50s. Funding shortages have reduced serviceability drastically.

Strategic Nuclear Ground Forces. In 1999 there were 5 rocket armies, each with launcher groups, 10 silos and 1 control centre. Inter-continental ballistic missiles numbered 756. Personnel, 100,000 (50,000 conscripts).

Navy. The Russian Navy continues to reduce steadily and levels of sea-going activity remain very low with activity concentrated on a few operational units in each fleet. The safe deployment and protection of the reduced force of strategic missile-firing submarines remains its first priority; and the defence of the Russian homeland its second. The strategic missile submarine force operates under command of the Strategic Nuclear Force commander whilst the remainder come under the Main Naval Staff in Moscow, through the Commanders of the fleets.

The Northern and Pacific fleets count the entirety of the ballistic missile submarine force, all nuclear-powered submarines, the sole operational aircraft carrier and most major surface warships. The Baltic Fleet organization is based in the St Petersburg area and in the Kaliningrad exclave. Some minor war vessels have been ceded to the Baltic republics. The Black Sea Fleet continues to be the object of wrangling between Russia and Ukraine, and remains operationally paralyzed by the dispute. While a political decision has been made to divide the fleet between the nations, the practical and personnel issues remain unresolved. The small Caspian Sea flotilla, formerly a sub-unit of the Black Sea Fleet, has been divided between Azerbaijan (25%), and Russia, Kazakhstan and Turkmenistan, the littoral republics (75%).

The material state of all the fleets is suffering from continued inactivity and lack of spares and fuel. The nuclear submarine refitting and refuelling operations in the Northern and Pacific Fleets remain in disarray, given the large numbers of nuclear submarines awaiting defuelling and disposal. The strength of the submarine force has now essentially stabilized, but there are still large numbers of decommissioned vessels awaiting their turn for scrapping in a steadily deteriorating state.

The aircraft carrier Admiral Kuznetsov is now operational, albeit with a limited aviation capability, and she deployed to the Mediterranean in Dec. 1995.

The strength of the disputed Black Sea Fleet at the end of 1996 was 12 diesel-powered submarines, 4 cruisers, 3 destroyers and 22 frigates, as well as some 30 mine warfare amphibious ships and 100 support units. The force of Strategic Submarines (1998) is constituted as follows:

RUSSIA

Class	No.	Tonnage	Speed	Missiles	Other Weapons
Typhoon	3	27,000	27	20 SS-N-20	Torpedoes
Delta-IV	7	12,350	24	16 SS-N-23	Torpedoes
Delta-III	7	11,900	24	16 SS-N-18	Torpedoes
Delta-I	4	11,000	25	12 SS-N-8	Torpedoes

Some other non-operational strategic submarines continue to be counted to START totals.

The attack submarine fleet comprises a wide range of classes, from the enormous 16,250 tonne 'Oscar' nuclear-powered missile submarine to diesel boats of around 2,000 tonnes. The inventory of tactical nuclear-fuelled submarines comprises 9 'Oscar II', 1 former strategic 'Yankee'-class, 8 'Akula'-class, 3 'Sierra'-class and 7 'Victor III'-class submarines.

The diesel-powered 'Kilo' class, of which the Navy operates 12, is still building at a reduced rate mostly for export. There are a further 9 diesel submarines nominally on the active list.

Cruisers are divided into 2 categories; those optimized for anti-submarine warfare (ASW) are classified as 'Large Anti-Submarine Ships' and those primarily configured for anti-surface ship operations are classified 'Rocket Cruisers'. The principal surface ships of the Russian Navy include the following classes:

Aircraft Carrier. The Admiral Kuznetsov of 65,000 tonnes was completed in 1989. It is capable of embarking 25–30 aircraft and 8–10 helicopters. All other aircraft carriers have been decommissioned or scrapped.

Cruisers. The ships of this classification are headed by the 2 ships of the Kirov-class, the largest combatant warships, apart from aircraft carriers, to be built since the Second World War. There are, in addition, 3 Slava-class, 1 of the Nikolaev ('Kara') class and 1 Kynda class ship in operation.

Destroyers. There are 7 Udaloy-class, the first of which entered service in 1981, 1 Udaloy II-class and 7 Sovremenny-class guided missile destroyers in operation. In addition there is a single remaining 'modified Kashin'-class ship and a further 1 unmodified 'Kashin' also in operation.

Frigates. There are 10 frigates in operation including the first of a new class, the 'Neustrashimy', 7 Krivak I-class and 2 Krivak II-class ships.

The Russian Naval Air Force operates some 329 combat aircraft including 71 Tu-22M bombers and 75 Su-24, 9 Su-25 and 30 Su-27 fighters. There were an additional 387 armed helicopters in operation.

Total Naval personnel in 1999 numbered 171,500, of whom an estimated 16,000 were conscripts. Some 13,000 serve in the strategic submarine force, 35,000 in naval aviation, 9,500 naval infantry/coastal defence troops.

Air Force. The Air Force (VVS) and Air Defence Troops (PVO) amalgamated in March 1998 under 1 Air Force command. Personnel is estimated at 184,000 and comprises some 1,800 combat aircraft, 2 Air Armies, Military Transport Aviation and 6 Tactical/Air Defence formations. Under the terms of the Conventional Forces in Europe (CFE) treaty, Russia is allowed to have up to 3,450 combat aircraft, 890 helicopters and 300 naval combat aircraft.

The Air Force is organized into 4 main Commands: Long-Range Aviation, Tactical Aviation, Military Transport Aviation and Reserve and Training Command.

Long-Range Aviation comprises (numbers in brackets) Tu-160 (6), Tu-22M (158) and Tu-95 (68) bombers, some equipped to carry nuclear weapons. 8 further Tu-160s were due to arrive from the Ukraine in late 1999.

Tactical Aviation is divided into 8 Air Armies, 7 in Russia and 1 in Trans-Caucasia. Equipment includes Su-24 (350) and Su-25 (225) fighter-bombers and MiG-29 (260), MiG-31 (280) and Su-27 (340) fighters. In addition MiG-25 and Su-24s are used for reconnaissance missions.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Russia is a member of the UN (Security Council), the NATO Partnership for Peace, CIS, the Council of Europe, OSCE, Council of the Baltic Sea States, BSEC, Danube Commission, APEC and the Antarctic Treaty. On 16 May 1997 NATO ratified a 'Fundamental Act on Relations, Co-operation and Mutual Security' with Russia. Although not a member of the World Trade Organization, Russia is lobbying hard to join.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 7.3% of GDP in 1998, industry 35.3% and services 57.4%.

In Oct. 1991 a programme to create a 'healthy mixed economy with a powerful private sector' was announced. As part of this programme the prices of most commodities were freed on 2 Jan. 1992.

Privatization is overseen by the State Committee on the Management of State Property, and began with small and medium-sized enterprises. A state programme of privatization of state and municipal enterprises was approved by parliament in June 1992, and vouchers worth 10,000 roubles each began to be distributed to all citizens in Oct. 1992. These may be sold or exchanged for shares. Employees have the right to purchase 51% of the equity of their enterprises. 25 categories of industry (including raw materials and arms) remain in state ownership. The voucher phase of privatization ended on 30 June 1994. A post-voucher stage authorized by presidential decree of 22 July 1994 provides for firms to be auctioned for cash following the completion of the sale of up to 70% of manufacturing industry for vouchers. By Dec. 1997 a total of 127,000 enterprises had been privatized; of which 59% were in trade, public catering and personal services, 33% in manufacturing, construction, transport and communications and 2.4% in agriculture. While there is still widespread corruption and a reluctance in some sectors to loosen state control, there are encouraging signs of an economy pulling into shape.

Performance. GDP grew by at least 0.4% in 1997, the first expansion since the Soviet Union's collapse in 1991; but many economists believe that the booming informal economy adds over 25% to the value of GDP. Even so, 1998 was a disastrous year for the economy. With oil revenues well down and a collapse of the rouble, Russia defaulted on its debt. For 1998 real GDP growth was -4.6%. There was then a highly impressive turnaround, with growth of 3.2% for 1999. For 2000 growth of 7.0% was forecast. GDP declined by 17% between 1992 and 1997 and GDP per person by 25% over the same period. Total GDP according to a FT survey of May 2000 was an estimated US$179.9bn. in 1999.

Budget. Budgetary incomes were valued at 657,100bn. roubles in 1998, of which tax revenue accounted for 82.8%. Budgetary expenditures were valued at 753,000bn. roubles, of which social and cultural 31.7%, interest on foreign debt 14.2%, defence 7.5%, law enforcement 5.7% and administration 4.0%. In 1997 the budget deficit was 6.1% of GDP. The current account surplus was US$3,336m.

Currency. The unit of currency is the rouble (RUR), of 100 kopeks. In Jan. 1998 the rouble was redenominated by a factor of a thousand. In 1994 foreign exchange reserves were US$3,976m. Gold reserves were 13.45m. troy oz in Jan. 2000. In 1997 the rouble was tied to the US dollar on a sliding scale ranging from US$1 = 5,500–6,100 roubles on 1 Jan. 1997 to 6 roubles on 31 Jan. 1998. In 1995 the total external debt was US$120,461m., most of it inherited from the Soviet Union. Total money supply in Dec. 1997 was 269,363m. roubles. In Nov. 2000 President Putin and President Lukashenka of Belarus agreed the introduction of a single currency, with the Russian rouble to be introduced in Belarus by 2005 and a single currency in 2008. The draft agreement has to be ratified by the parliaments of the two countries.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the State Bank of Russia (Governor, Viktor Gerashchenko). The Russian Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the State Investment Company were created in 1993 to channel foreign and domestic investment. Foreign bank branches have been operating since Nov. 1992.

By 1995 the number of registered commercial banks had increased to around 5,000 but following the Aug. 1997 liquidity crisis, due to the ensuing bankruptcies, mergers and the Central Bank's revoking of licences, the number fell to 2,500. Approximately 80% of the commercial banks were state-owned through ministries or state enterprises. In 1997 the top 6 banks in terms of assets (in US$1m.) were: Sberbank, 29.1; Vneshtorgbank, 3.9; Uneximbank, 3.6; Inkombank, 3.4; National Reserve Bank, 2.0. Sberbank is the only Russian bank to appear in the world top 20.

By Jan. 1995, 166 exchanges were in operation, and 28,700 firms of brokers.

In the wake of one of the worst financial crises which Russia's market economy had experienced, the central bank tripled interest rates to 150% in May 1998 in an effort to restore stability to the financial system.

There are stock exchanges in St Petersburg and Vladivostok.

Russia was 1 of 15 countries and territories named in a report in June 2000 as failing to co-operate in the fight against international money laundering. The Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering was set up by the G7 group of major industrialized nations.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Court is the highest judicial body on civil, criminal and administrative law. The Supreme Arbitration Court deals with economic cases. The KGB, and the Federal Security Bureau which succeeded it, were replaced in Dec. 1992 by the Federal Counter-Intelligence Service. The legal system is, however, crippled by incompetence and corruption.

A new civil code was introduced in 1993 to replace the former Soviet code. It guarantees the inviolability of private property and includes provisions for the freedom of movement of capital and goods.

12-member juries were introduced in a number of courts after Nov. 1993, but there are jury trials in only 9 of the country's 89 regions. A new criminal code came into force on 1 Jan. 1997, based on respect for the rights and freedoms of the individual and the sanctity of private property. The death penalty is retained for 5 crimes against the person. It is not applied to minors, women or men over 65.

In 1996 there were 39,083 murders, giving a rate of 26.5 per 100,000 population. In 1994, 924,600 sentences were passed, of which 36% involved imprisonment. In 1996 there were 140 executions (86 in 1995; 1 in 1992). President Yeltsin placed a moratorium on capital punishment in 1996 when Russia joined the Council of Europe, but parliament has refused to abolish the death penalty. Organized crime groups control up to 40,000 commercial organizations. In 1998 there were 1,007,000 prisoners, or 685 prisoners per 100,000 population (the highest rate in the world).

In 1996 there were over 14,000 parishes, 136 monasteries, and 26 secondary and higher educational institutions. There are still many Old Believers, whose schism from the Orthodox Church dates from the 17th century. The Russian Church is headed by the Patriarch of Moscow and All Russia (Metropolitan Aleksii II of St Petersburg and Novgorod, b. 1929; elected June 1990), assisted by the Holy Synod, which has 7 members—the Patriarch himself and the Metropolitans of Krutitsy and Kolomna (Moscow), St Petersburg and Kiev ex officio, and 3 bishops alternating for 6 months in order of seniority from the 3 regions forming the Moscow Patriarchate. The Patriarchate of Moscow maintains jurisdiction over 119 eparchies, of which 59 are in Russia; there are parishes of Russian Orthodox abroad, in Belarus, Ukraine, Kazakhstan, Moldova, Uzbekistan, the Baltic states, and in Damascus, Geneva, Prague, New York and Japan. There is a spiritual mission in Jerusalem, and a monastery at Mt Athos in Greece. There are Jewish communities, primarily in Moscow and St Petersburg, that numbered 600,000 in 1997; there were also 14,720,000 Muslims and 1,340,000 Protestants.

In 1994–95 there were 822 grammar schools and 505 lycées with a combined total of 1m. students. In addition there were 447 private schools with 40,000 pupils.

In 1957 a Siberian branch of the Academy of Sciences was organized. Pre-dating the foundation of a Russian Academy of Sciences, St Petersburg and Urals branches were founded in 1990 and 1991 respectively. The Soviet became the Russian Academy of Sciences in Dec. 1991. There were 3,968 scientific institutes, of which 2,166 are independent research institutes.

In 1995 total expenditure on education came to 3.5% of GNP.

Welfare. Vouchers are issued to cover basic health care and pensions contributions. These may be topped up to buy better services. A transition from state-financed to insurance-based health care is taking place.

There were 37.1m. pensioners in 1996. A lump sum of 2,700 roubles was payable in 1992 to parents on the birth of a child. From Dec. 1996 the minimum pension was 75,900 roubles a month. The average monthly pension in June 1995 was 201,874 roubles.

Personal pensions conferred by the former Communist regime conferring special benefits on party or state personnel or awarded for services rendered were abolished in 1992.

There are an estimated 52.1m. private households (based on the 1994 micro-census). In 1995 the percentage of households which had various facilities was as follows: running water, 71; sewerage, 66; central heating, 68; bathroom, 61; gas, 69; hot running water, 54; electric cooker, 15.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1997 there were 57.3m. television receivers. Television broadcasting is still largely state-controlled, although an independent service began in 1993. There are 2 major channels, Ostankino and Russian Television (colour by SECAM H). In 1994, 98.8% of the population could receive TV broadcasts. There are also local city channels (e.g. 6 in Moscow in 1993). Access to cable TV varies with locality; satellite TV reached about 5% of the population in 1993. As well as state radio, 24% of the population in 1995 could receive commercial broadcasts. In 1997 there were 61.5m. radio receivers.

In the same year there were 4,596 non-daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 98,558,000 (665 per 1,000 population). A presidential decree of 22 Dec. 1993 brought the press agencies ITAR-TASS and RIA-Novosti under state control. In 1996, 30,200 titles (books and brochures) were published.

THE REPUBLICS

Status

The 21 republics that with Russia itself constitute the Russian Federation were part of the RSFSR in the Soviet period. The Chechens and Ingushes were conquered by Russia in the late 1850s. In 1918 each nationality separately established its 'National Soviet' within the Terek Autonomous Republic, and in 1920 (after the Civil War) were constituted areas within the Mountain Republic. The Chechens separated out as an Autonomous Region on 30 Nov. 1922 and the Ingushes on 7 July 1924. In Jan. 1934 the two regions were united, and on 5 Dec. 1936 constituted as an Autonomous Republic. This was dissolved in 1944 and the population was deported en masse, allegedly for collaboration with the German occupation forces. It was reconstituted on 9 Jan. 1957: 232,000 Chechens and Ingushes returned to their homes in the next 2 years. The population (1989 census) included 70.7% Chechens and Ingushes, 23.1% Russians, 1.2% Armenians and 1% Ukrainians.

A Chechen Republic declared its independence in Nov. 1991. (A separate Ingush Republic was declared in June 1993).

In April 1993 President Dudaev dissolved parliament. Hostilities continued throughout 1994 between the government and forces loosely grouped under the 'Provisional Chechen Council'. The Russian government, which had never recognized the Chechen declaration of independence of Nov. 1991, moved troops and armour into Chechnya on 11 Dec. 1994 'to re-establish constitutional order'. Grozny was bombed and attacked by Russian ground forces at the end of Dec. 1994 and the presidential palace was captured on 19 Jan. 1995, but fighting continued. On 30 July 1995 the Russian and Chechen authorities signed a ceasefire. On 8 Dec. 1995 an agreement between the Russian and Chechen prime ministers amnestied insurgents who laid down their arms. However, hostilities, raids and hostage-taking continued. The Chechen President was killed during fighting in April 1996. A further ceasefire was concluded on 30 Aug. 1996, and it was agreed that the status of Chechnya would be determined by a referendum in 2001. On 23 Nov. 1996 the Russian President decreed the withdrawal of all Russian troops by the end of 1996. Fighting broke out again in Sept. 1999 as Russian forces launched attacks on what it described as 'rebel bases'. The Russian defence ministry said that the attacks would continue until all Islamic militants in the breakaway republic were 'wiped out'. In the months that followed fighting intensified, with civilian casualties through bombing raids. More than 200,000 civilians were forced to flee their homes, most of them heading for neighbouring Ingushetia. After Russia seized Gudermes, the second largest town, in Nov. 1999 the Kremlin announced that it would henceforth be the new capital. By Feb. 2000 Grozny had been reduced to a heap of rubble. Wary of a possible counterstrike by rebels, the Russians closed the city. The war continues, with estimates of the number of deaths varying from 6,500 to 15,000.

Presidential and a first round of parliamentary elections were held on 27 Jan. 1997. The electorate was 513,000. There were 14 presidential candidates. There were some 150 foreign observers, including 72 from OSCE. The second round of parliamentary elections was declared invalid because turn-out failed to reach the necessary 50%. A third round was held in May 1997.

Ingush desire to separate from Chechnya led to fighting along the Chechen-Ingush border and a deployment of Russian troops. An agreement to withdraw was reached between Russia and Chechnya on 15 Nov. 1992. The separation of Chechnya and Ingushetia was formalized by an amendment of Dec. 1992 to the Russian Constitution.

Checheno-Ingushetia had a major oilfield, and a number of engineering works, chemical factories, building materials works and food canneries. There was a timber, woodworking and furniture industry. Industrial output in the two republics was valued at 213,000m. roubles in 1993, agricultural output at 79,000m. roubles.

nationalities (80.2%), Azerbaijanis (4.2%), Chechens (3.2%) and Jews (0.5%). Annexed from Persia in 1723, Dagestan was constituted an Autonomous Republic on 20 Jan. 1921. In 1991 the Supreme Soviet declared the area of republican, rather than autonomous republican, status. Many of the nationalities who live in Dagestan have organized armed militias, and in May 1998 rebels stormed the government building in Makhachkala. In Aug. 1999 Dagestan faced attacks from Islamic militants who invaded from Chechnya. Although Russian troops tried to restore order and discipline, the guerrilla campaign continued.

INGUSHETIA

The history of Ingushetia is interwoven with that of Chechnya (see above). Ingush desire to separate from Chechnya led to fighting along the Chechen-Ingush border and a deployment of Russian troops. The separation of Ingushetia from Chechnya was formalized by an amendment of Dec. 1992 to the Russian Constitution. On 15 May 1993 an extraordinary congress of the peoples of Ingushetia adopted a declaration of state sovereignty within the Russian Federation. Skirmishes between Ingush refugees and local police broke out in Aug. 1999 and tensions remained high with the danger of further outbreaks of fighting. The Russian attacks on neighbouring Chechnya in Sept. 1999 led to thousands of Chechen refugees fleeing to Ingushetia.

The capital is Magas (since 1999; formerly Nazran).

Area, 3,600 sq. km (1,390 sq. miles) (to be confirmed); estimated population, 1997, 301,900.

In April 1993 the Supreme Soviet was dissolved and replaced by a professional parliament consisting of 25 of the former deputies. On 5 April 1994 a specially-constituted 300-member constituent assembly adopted a 'Steppe Code' as Kalmykia's basic law. This is not a constitution and renounces the declaration of republican sovereignty of 18 Oct. 1990. It provides for a President elected for 5-year terms with the power to dissolve parliament, and a 27-member parliament, the People's Hural, elected every 4 years. Tension between the 2 ethnic groups increased after the first free presidential election in April 1999 was won by Vladimir Semyonov, an ethnic Karchayev. the Supreme Court. There were subsequently fears that the ethnic Cherkess opposition would attempt to set up breakaway government bodies.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1959 an uprising of the Hutu destroyed the Tutsi feudal hierarchy and overthrew the monarchy. Elections and a referendum under the auspices of the UN in Sept. 1961 resulted in an overwhelming majority for the republican party. The republic proclaimed by the Parmehutu on 28 Jan. 1961 was recognized by the Belgian administration in Oct. 1961. The Republic of Rwanda became independent on 1 July 1962.

Conflict between the Hutu and Tutsi was renewed with much bloodshed in 1972–73. A coup on 5 July 1973 led to a military government. There was gradual return to civilian rule and in 1978 a new constitution was accepted by a national referendum. In Oct. 1990 rebel Tutsi forces of the Rwandan Patriotic Front (RPF) invaded from Uganda. A peace agreement was signed on 4 Aug. 1993 at Arusha (Tanzania). On 5 Oct. the UN Security Council decided to send a peacekeeping force but rebel Tutsi forces of the RPF began an attack from the north of the country. Most UN forces were withdrawn during the fighting and massacres of April 1994 but following a UN Security Council resolution of 17 May 1994 a new force of 5,500 was sent in. On 22 June 1994 the UN Security Council approved France's dispatch of 2,000 troops on a humanitarian mission. The French forces maintained a 'safe zone' for refugees in the southwest of Rwanda until their withdrawal on 21 Aug. 1994. It is estimated that more than 1m. Rwandans were killed in 1994 through genocide and the civil war, and that more than 2m. were forced to flee to neighbouring countries. UN forces left Rwanda on 8 March 1996, and although progress has been made since then, the civil strife between the two factions continues, particularly in the northwest of the country. In Sept. 1998 Jean Kambanda, the former Prime Minister, was sentenced to life imprisonment for his part in the 1994 genocide.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The population was 7,164,994 at the 1991 census, of whom over 90% were Hutu, 9% Tutsi and 1% Twa (pygmy). Estimate (1996) 5,100,000; density, 193·6 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 9·72m.

In 1998 the percentage of the population considered as urban was the lowest of any country in the world, at 5·9%.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The islands of St Kitts (formerly St Christopher) and Nevis were discovered and named by Columbus in 1493. They were settled by Britain in 1623 and 1628 respectively, but ownership was disputed with France until 1783. In Feb. 1967 the colonial status was replaced by an 'association' with Britain, giving the islands full internal self-government. St Kitts and Nevis became fully independent on 19 Sept. 1983. In Oct. 1997 the 5-person Nevis legislature voted to end the federation with St Kitts. However, in a referendum held on 10 Aug. 1998 voters rejected independence, only 62% voting for secession when a two-thirds vote in favour was needed. In Sept. 1998 Hurricane Georges caused devastation, leaving 25,000 people homeless, with some 80% of the houses in the islands damaged.

SAMOA

O le Malo Tutoatasi o Samoa
(Independent State of Samoa)

Capital: Apia

Population estimate, 2000: 174,000

GDP per capita: (PPP$) 3,832

HDI/world rank: 0.711/95

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Polynesians settled in the Samoan group of islands in the southern Pacific from about 1000 BC. Although probably sighted by the Dutch in 1722, the first European visitor was French in 1768. Treaties were signed between the Chiefs and European nations in 1838–39. Continuing strife among the chiefs was compounded by British, German and US rivalry for influence. In the Treaty of Berlin 1889 the three powers agreed to Western Samoa's independence and neutrality.

When strife continued, the treaty was annulled and Western Samoa became a German protectorate until in 1914 it was occupied by a New Zealand expeditionary force. The island was administered by New Zealand from 1920 to 1961. On 1 Jan. 1962 Western Samoa became an independent sovereign state. In July 1997 the country renamed itself the Independent State of Samoa.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Samoa lies between 13° and 15° S. lat. and 171° and 173° W. long. It comprises the two large islands of Savai'i and Upolu, the small islands of Manono and Apolima, and several uninhabited islets lying off the coast. The total land area is 1,093 sq. miles (2,830.8 sq. km), of which 659.4 sq. miles (1,707.8 sq. km) are in Savai'i, and 431.5 sq. miles (1,117.6 sq. km) in Upolu; other islands, 2.1 sq. miles (5.4 sq. km). The islands are of volcanic origin, and the coasts are surrounded by coral reefs. Rugged mountain ranges form the core of both main islands. The large area laid waste by lava-flows in Savai'i is a primary cause of that island supporting less than one-third of the population of the islands despite its greater size than Upolu.

Population at the 1991 census, 161,298.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 208,000.

In 1998, 78.7% of the population lived in rural areas. The population at the 1991 census was 116,248 in Upolu (including Manono and Apolima) and 45,040 in Savai'i. The capital and chief port is Apia in Upolu (population 38,000 in 1999).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

San Marino is a small republic situated on the Adriatic side of central Italy. According to tradition, St Marinus and a group of Christians settled there to escape persecution. By the 12th century San Marino had developed into a commune ruled by its own statutes and consul. Unsuccessful attempts were made to annex the republic to the papal states in the 18th century and when Napoleon invaded Italy in 1797 he respected the rights of the republic and even offered to extend its territories. In

1815 the Congress of Vienna recognized the independence of the republic. SÃO TOMÉ E PRÍNCIPE

República Democrática de São Tomé e Príncipe

Capital: São Tomé

Population estimate, 2000: 149,000

GDP per capita: (PPP$) 1,469

HDI/world rank: 0.547/132

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The islands of São Tomé and Príncipe off the west coast of Africa were colonized by Portugal in the fifteenth century. There may have been a few African inhabitants or visitors earlier but most of the population arrived during the centuries when the islands served as an important slave-trading depot for South America. In the 19th century the islands became the first parts of Africa to grow cocoa. Although in 1876 Portugal abolished slavery in name, in practice it continued thereafter with many Angolans, Mozambicans and Cape Verdians being transported to work on the cocoa plantations. Because the slave-descended population was cut off from African culture, São Tomé had a higher proportion than other Portuguese colonies of assimilados (Africans acquiring full Portuguese culture and certain rights). São Tomé saw serious riots against Portuguese rule in 1953. From 1960 a Movement for the Liberation of São Tomé e Príncipe operated from neighbouring African territories. In 1970 Portugal formed a 16-member legislative council and a provincial consultative council. Following the Portuguese revolution of 1974 a transitional government was formed. Independence came on 12 July 1975. Independent São Tomé e Príncipe officially proclaimed Marxist-Leninist policies but maintained a non-aligned foreign policy and has received aid from Portugal.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The republic, which lies about 200 km off the west coast of Gabon, in the Gulf of Guinea, comprises the main islands of São Tomé (845 sq. km) and Príncipe and several smaller islets including Pedras Tinhosas and Rolas. KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia is a union of two regions, Nejd and Hejaz. In the 18th century, Nejd was an autonomous region governed from Diriya, the stronghold of the Wahhabis, a puritanical Islamic sect. It subsequently fell under Turkish rule but in 1913 Abdulaziz Ibn Abdul Rahman Al-Saud defeated the Turks and also captured the Turkish province of al Hasa. In 1920 he captured the Asir and in 1921 he added the Jebel Shammar territory of the Rashid family. In 1925 he completed the conquest of the Hejaz. Great Britain recognized Abdulaziz as an independent ruler by the Treaty of Jeddah on 20 May 1927. The name was changed to the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia in Sept. 1932. Although commencing before the Second World War, oil exploitation developed strongly with the support of the USA after 1945.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Saudi Arabia, which occupies nearly 80% of the Arabian peninsula, is bounded in the west by the Red Sea, east by the Arabian/Persian Gulf and the United Arab Emirates, north by Jordan, Iraq and Kuwait and south by Yemen and Oman. An agreement with Qatar of 26 Oct. 1996 provided for the definitive delimitation of their common frontier by 1998. For the border dispute with Yemen see YEMEN: Territory and Population. The total area is estimated to be 849,400 sq. miles (2.2m. sq. km). Riyadh is the political, and Mecca the religious, capital.

The total population at the 1992 census was 16,948,388. 1995 estimate, 17.88m.; density, 8.1 per sq. km. Approximately 76% of the population are Saudi nationals. In 1998, 84.7% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 29.22m.

Principal cities with 1995 population estimates (in 1m.): Riyadh, 3.18 (in 1999); Jeddah, 1.49; Mecca, 0.77; Taif, 0.41 (1991); Madinah, 0.4 (1991); Dammam, 0.35 (1991).

The Neutral Zone (3,560 sq. miles, 5,700 sq. km), jointly owned and administered by Kuwait and Saudi Arabia from 1922 to 1966, was partitioned between the two countries in 1966, but the exploitation of the oil and other natural resources continues to be shared.

The official language is Arabic.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 6.7% of GDP in 1999 and industry 9.8%.

The sixth 5-year development plan (1995–99) continues the emphasis on developing the private sector, and aims to increase and indigenize the workforce, enhance defence capacity, achieve a balanced economic development and protect the environment. The 1998 budget emphasized expenditure and capital projects such as roads and schools. 80% of the budget goes on public sector salaries.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 1.9% in 1997, but a recession followed, with the economy shrinking by 10.8% in 1998. However, a recovery followed, with growth in 1999 of 9.0%. Total GDP in 1999 was US$136.6bn. The current account surplus stood at US$254m. in 1997.

Budget. In 1986 the financial year became the calendar year. 1998 budget: revenue, SAR178bn.; expenditure, SAR196bn.

Sharia (the religious law of Islam) forbids the charging of interest; Islamic banking is based on sharing clients' profits and losses and imposing service charges. In 1999 total assets of commercial banks were 415.227m. rials.

A number of industry sectors are closed to foreign investors, including petroleum exploration, defence-related activities and financial services.

There is a stock exchange.

Calendar. Saudi Arabia follows the Islamic hegira (622 AD, when Mohammed left Mecca for Medina), which is based upon the lunar year of 354 days. The Islamic year 1422 corresponds to 26 March 2001–14 March 2002, and is the current lunar year.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. By 1995 over 100 electricity producers had been amalgamated into 4 companies. Installed capacity was 20.2m. kW in 1999. All electricity is thermally generated. Production was 105.6bn. kWh in 1999; consumption per capita was 5,492 kWh in 1997.

Oil and Gas. Proven oil reserves (1999) 263.5bn. bbls. (the highest of any country and around 25% of world resources). Oil production began in 1938 by Aramco, which is now 100% state-owned and accounts for about 97% of total crude oil production. Saudi Arabia is the largest oil producer in the world. Output in 1999 totalled 426m. tonnes and accounted for 12.4% of the world total oil output.

Production comes from 14 major oilfields, mostly in the Eastern Province and offshore, and including production from the Neutral Zone. The Ghawar oilfield, located between Riyadh and the Persian gulf, is the largest in the world, with estimated reserves of 70bn. bbls.

Saudi Arabia is dependent on oil earnings for over 70% of budget revenues. In 1996 oil export revenues were SAR130bn. compared to a planned SAR85bn., in 1997 they were SAR155bn. compared to a planned SAR115bn. but in 1998 they were forecast to be only SAR105bn. compared to a planned SAR125bn. In Oct. 1998 US oil companies were invited back to help develop Saudi Arabia's energy resources, nearly 20 years after they had been expelled. In 1998 revenue fell by a third following the collapse of the price of oil. Oil reserves are expected to run out by 2090.

In 2000 natural gas reserves were 5,800bn. cu. metres; output in 1999 was 46.2bn. cu. metres.

Water. Efforts are under way to provide adequate supplies of water for urban, industrial, rural and agricultural use. Most investment has gone into sea-water desalination. In 1996, 33 plants produced 1.9m. cu. metres a day, meeting 70% of drinking water needs. Total annual consumption was 18,200m. cu. metres in 1995. Irrigation for agriculture consumes the largest amount, from fossil reserves (the country's principal water source), and from surface water collected during seasonal floods. In 1996 there were 183 dams with a holding capacity of 450m. cu. metres. Treated urban waste water is an increasing resource for domestic purposes; in 1996 there were 2 recycling plants in operation.

Minerals. Production began in 1988 at Mahd Al-Dahab gold mine, the largest in the country, which produces 170,000 oz of gold a year. In July 1998 plans were announced for the investment of US$98m. to double gold production by 2001. In 1997 production totalled 7,530 kg. Deposits of iron, phosphate, bauxite, uranium, silver, tin, tungsten, nickel, chrome, zinc, lead, potassium ore and copper have also been found.

Agriculture. Since 1970 the government has spent substantially on desert reclamation, irrigation schemes, drainage and control of surface water and of moving sands. Undeveloped land has been distributed to farmers and there are research and extension programmes. Large scale private investment has concentrated on wheat, poultry and dairy production.

In 1997 there were 3.7m. ha of arable land and 130,000 ha of permanent cropland. In 1995, 13.9% of the economically active population were engaged in agriculture.

The government encourages the establishment of manufacturing industries. Its policy focuses on establishing industries that use petroleum products, petrochemicals and minerals. Petrochemical and oil-based industries have been concentrated at 8 new industrial cities, with the 2 principal cities at Jubail and Yanbu. In 1996 there were 15 major plants and other industrial facilities, a dedicated desalination plant, a vocational training institute and a college at Jubail, and 3 major refineries, a petrochemical complex and many manufacturing and support enterprises at Yanbu. KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

While in the mid-1400s the Portuguese were the first Europeans to reach the area around the Senegal river estuary, in succeeding centuries the French became the dominant Europeans on the coast in that area, except for The Gambia, where the British were installed. The French founded Saint-Louis in 1659 and also occupied the island of Goree, an important slave-trading depot. In the 19th century French rule, interrupted earlier by occasional British occupation, was confirmed over Saint-

Louis and Goree. Free Africans received the vote in 1833 and the franchise was further extended in 1848 when slavery was abolished in all French colonies. The Africans in Saint-Louis and Goree, and also in Dakar and Rufisque, were called the originaires and had the rights of French citizens. They elected a deputy to the French national Assembly and voted for local communes.

From the late 1870s France began a sustained push up the river and into the interior. Here, groundnuts were already being grown for export to France but African monarchs still ruled and there was strong resistance. French rule was established by the mid-1890s, while the British consolidated their rule inland in The Gambia. On 4 April 1959 Senegal joined with French Sudan to form the Federation of Mali, which achieved independence on 20 June 1960. On 22 Aug. Senegal withdrew from the Federation and became a separate independent republic. Senegal was a one-Party state from 1966 until 1974, when a pluralist system was re-established.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Senegal is bounded by Mauritania to the north and northeast, Mali to the east, Guinea and Guinea-Bissau to the south and the Atlantic to the west with The Gambia forming an enclave along that shore. Age structure: 1-14 years, 48%; 15-64, 49%; 65 and over, 3%.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 12.24m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Seychelles were colonized by the French in 1756 to establish spice plantations to compete with the Dutch monopoly. The islands were captured by the English in 1794. Subsequently, Britain offered to return Mauritius and its dependencies which included the Seychelles to France if that country would renounce all claims to her possessions in India. France refused and the Seychelles were formally ceded to Britain as a dependency of Mauritius. In Nov. 1903 the Seychelles archipelago became a separate British Crown Colony. Internal self-government was achieved on 1 Oct. 1975 and independence as a republic within the British Commonwealth on 29 June 1976.

The first president, James Mancham, was deposed in a coup on 5 June 1977. Under the new constitution, the Seychelles People's Progressive Front became the sole legal party. There were several attempts to overthrow the regime, but in 1979 and 1984 Albert René was the only candidate in the presidential elections. Under the new constitution approved in June 1993, President René was re-elected against two opponents.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Seychelles consists of 115 islands in the Indian Ocean, north of Madagascar, with a combined area of 175 sq. miles (455 sq. km) in two distinct groups. The Granitic group of 40 islands cover 92 sq. miles (239 sq. km); the principal island is Mahé, with 59 sq. miles (153 sq. km) and 75,876 inhabitants at the 1997 census, the other inhabited islands of the group being Praslin, La Digue, Silhouette, Fregate and North, which together had 7,100 inhabitants.

The Outer or Coralline group comprises 75 islands spread over a wide area of ocean between the Mahé group and Madagascar, with a total land area of 83 sq. miles (214 sq. km) and a population of about 450 at the 1997 census. The main islands are the Amirante Isles (including Desroches, Poivre, Daros and Alphonse), Coetivy Island and Platte Island, all lying south of the Mahé group; the Farquhar, St Pierre and Providence Islands, north of Madagascar; and Aldabra, Astove, Assumption and the Cosmoledo Islands, about 1,000 km southwest of the Mahé group. Aldabra (whose lagoon covers 55 sq. miles), Farquhar and Desroches were transferred to the new British Indian Ocean Territory in 1965, but were returned by Britain to the Seychelles on the latter's independence in 1976. Population, 76,400 (1996); 56.9% urban (1998). Victoria, the chief town, had an estimated population of 28,000 in 1999.

The official languages are Creole, English and French but 95% of the population speak Creole.

Temperatures are high throughout the year, but the islands lie outside the cyclone belt. Victoria, Jan. 80°F (26.7°C), July 78°F (25.6°C). Annual rainfall 95" (2,287 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the 1979 Constitution the Seychelles People's Progressive Front (SPPF) was the sole legal Party. There is a unicameral People's Assembly consisting of 33 seats, of which 25 are directly elected and 8 are allocated on a proportional basis, and an executive president directly elected for a 5-year term. A constitutional amendment of Dec. 1991 legalized other parties. A commission was elected in July 1992 to draft a new constitution. The electorate was some 50,000; turn-out was 90%. The SPPF gained 14 seats on the commission, the Democratic Party, 8; the latter, however, eventually withdrew. At a referendum in Nov. 1992 the new draft constitution failed to obtain the necessary 60% approval votes. The commission was reconvened in Jan. 1993. At a further referendum on 18 June 1993 the constitution was approved by 73.6% of votes cast.

SIERRA LEONE

Republic of Sierra Leone

Capital: Freetown
Population estimate, 2000: 4.87m.
GDP per capita: (PPP$) 458
HDI/world rank: 0.252/174

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Colony of Sierra Leone originated in 1787 when English settlers bought a piece of land intended as a home for natives of Africa who were waifs in London. The land was later used as a settlement for Africans rescued from slave-ships. The hinterland was declared a British protectorate on 21 Aug. 1896. Sierra Leone became independent as a member state of the British Commonwealth on 27 April 1961. In a general election in March 1967, Dr Siaka Stevens' All People's Congress came to power and was installed despite a military coup to prevent his taking office. Sierra Leone became a republic on 19 April 1971 with Dr Siaka Stevens as executive president. Following a referendum in June 1978, a new constitution was instituted under which the ruling All People's Congress became the sole legal party.

A military coup on 29 April 1992 deposed the president and set up a National Provisional Ruling Council whose chairman was in turn deposed in a military coup on 16 Jan. 1996. Presidential and parliamentary elections in Feb.–March 1996 resulted in a new government led by President Ahmed Tejan Kabbah. He was ousted in May 1997 by a group of junior officers. In Feb. 1998 a Nigerian-led intervention force launched an air and artillery offensive against the military junta. For the first time a group of African states joined together to restore a democratically-elected president. On 10 March President Kabbah returned from exile in Guinea, promising a 'new beginning'. But in Jan. 1999 the country again erupted into civil war. Nigeria sent troops to support President Kabbah but having lost control of the diamond fields and with no other resources, the government was powerless. The war, which continued for nearly 10 years, has reduced Sierra Leone to one of the poorest countries in the world.

The government reached an agreement with the rebel movement in July 1999 to bring the civil war to an end. Under the terms of the accord the Revolutionary United Front (RUF) was to gain 4 key government posts along with effective control of the country's mineral resources. In return the RUF was to surrender its weapons. However, civil war broke out again in early 2000. Responding to a government appeal British forces were sent to back up the small UN peacekeeping force. Foday Sankoh, rebel leader of the RUF, was captured and handed over to UN forces in May 2000.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Sierra Leone is bounded on the northwest, north and northeast by Guinea, on the southeast by Liberia and on the southwest by the Atlantic Ocean. The area is 27,925 sq. miles (73,326 sq. km). Population (census 1985), 3,517,530, of whom about 2,000 were Europeans, 3,500 Asiatics and 30,000 non-native Africans. Estimate (1995), 4,509,000; density, 61.5 per sq. km. In 1998, 35.3% of the population were urban.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 6.06m.

The capital is Freetown, with 822,000 inhabitants in 1999.

Sierra Leone is divided into 4 provinces:

	Sq. km	Census 1985	Capital	Estimate 1988
Eastern Province	15,553	960,551	Kenema	13,000
Northern Province	35,936	1,262,226	Makeni	12,000
Southern Province	19,694	740,510	Bo	26,000
Western Province	557	554,243	Freetown	469,776

The provinces are divided into districts as follows: Bo, Bonthe, Moyamba, Pujehun (Southern Province); Kailahun, Kenema, Kono (Eastern Province); Bombali, Kambia, Koinaduga, Port Loko, Toukolili (Northern Province).

The principal peoples are the Mendes (34% of the total) in the south, the Temnes (31%) in the north and centre, the Konos, Fulanis, Bulloms, Korankos, Limbas and Kissis. English is the official language; a Creole (Krio) is spoken.

Infant mortality was 182 per 1,000 live births in 1998. Fertility rate, 1999, 5·9 births per woman.

Agriculture accounted for 44.2% of GDP in 1998, industry 23.8% and services 32.0%.

Performance. GNP per capita was US$200 in 1996 compared to US$390 in 1982. Real GDP growth was 0.7% in 1998, but the civil war resulted in the economy shrinking by 8.1% in 1999. Total GDP in 1998 was US$0.6bn. Sierra Leone is among the world's bottom five countries in income and life expectancy. Corruption is rife.

Budget. The fiscal year is from 1 July to 30 June. Revenue and expenditures in 1m. leones:

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Singapore Island became part of the Javanese Majapahit Empire in the 14th century. The Portuguese took control of the area in the 16th century, followed by the Dutch a hundred years later. In 1819 Sir Thomas Stamford Raffles, the British East India Administrator, established a trading settlement. The lease to the British East India Company by the Sultan of Johore was followed by the treaty of 2 Aug. 1824 ceding the entire island in perpetuity to the company. In 1826 Penang, Malacca and Singapore were combined as the Straits Settlements. With the opening of the Suez Canal in 1869 and the advent of the steamship, an era of prosperity began for Singapore. Growth continued with the export of tin and rubber from the Malay peninsula.

Singapore fell to the Japanese in 1942 whose occupation continued until the end of the Second World War. In 1945 Singapore became a Crown Colony, being separated from Penang and Malacca. In June 1959 the state was granted internal self-government. When the Federation of Malaysia was formed in Sept. 1963, Singapore became one of the 14 states of the newly created country. On 7 Aug. 1965, by agreement with the Malaysian government, Singapore left the Federation of Malaysia and became an independent sovereign state.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Republic of Singapore consists of Singapore Island and some 63 smaller islands. Singapore Island is situated off the southern extremity of the Malay peninsula, to which it is joined by a 1·1 km causeway carrying a road, railway and water pipeline across the Strait of Johor and by a 1·9 km bridge at Tuas, opened on 2 Jan. 1998. The Straits of Johor between the island and the mainland are 914 metres wide. The island is 659·9 sq. km in area, including the offshore islands.

Census of population (2000): Chinese residents 2,505,379 (76·8%), Malays 453,633 (13·9%), Indians 257,791 (7·9%) and others 46,406 (1·45%); resident population, 3,263,209. Total population in June 2000 was 4,017,733. The population is 100% urban. Population density, 6,088 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected resident population for 2010 of 3·91m. (excluding the non-resident population, consisting of foreign workers and students and other foreigners who have not been granted permanent residence in Singapore).

Malay, Chinese (Mandarin), Tamil and English are the official languages; Malay is the national language and English is the language of administration.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Singapore is a republic with a parliamentary system of government. The organs of state—the executive, the legislature and the judiciary—are provided for by a written constitution. The Constitution is the supreme law of Singapore and any law enacted after the date of its commencement, which is inconsistent with its provisions, is void.

The Head of State is the President. The administration of the government is vested in the Cabinet headed by the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister and the other Cabinet Members are appointed by the President from among the Members of Parliament (MPs). The Cabinet is collectively responsible to Parliament.

Parliament is unicameral consisting of 83 elected members and 1 Non-Constituency MP (NCMP), elected by secret ballot from single-member and group representation constituencies as well as 9 Nominated Members of Parliament (NMPs) who are appointed for a 2 year term on the recommendation of a Special Select Committee of Parliament. With the customary exception of those serving criminal sentences, all citizens over 21 are eligible to vote. Voting in an election is compulsory. Group representation constituencies may return up to 6 Members of Parliament (4 before 1996), one of whom must be from the Malay community, the Indian or other minority communities. To ensure representation of parties not in the government, provision is made for the appointment of 3 (or up to a maximum of 6) NCMPs. The number of NCMPs is reduced by one for each opposition candidate returned. There is a common roll without communal electorates.

A Presidential Council to consider and report on minorities' rights was established in 1970. The particular function of this council is to draw attention to any Bill or to any subsidiary legislation which, in its opinion, discriminates against any racial or religious community.

National Anthem. 'Majulah Singapura' ('Onward Singapore'); words and tune by Zubir Said.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 2 Jan. 1997 opposition parties contested only 36 seats. The People's Action Party (PAP) won 81 seats with 65% of votes cast (77 and 61% in 1991); the Singapore People's Party gained 1 seat and the Workers' Party 1 seat. As 2 members from opposition parties were returned, a further non-constituency seat was awarded to the Workers' Party.

Presidential elections were scheduled for 24 Aug. 1999. However, these were cancelled after S. R. Nathan emerged as the only candidate who satisfied the requirements of the certificate of eligibility. He thus gained the presidency unopposed.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Czechoslovak State came into existence on 28 Oct. 1918 after the dissolution of Austria-Hungary. Two days later the Slovak National Council declared its wish to unite with the Czechs. The Treaty of St Germain-en-Laye (1919) recognized the Czechoslovak Republic, consisting of the Czech lands (Bohemia, Moravia, part of Silesia) and Slovakia. In March 1939 the German-sponsored Slovak government proclaimed Slovakia independent and Germany incorporated the Czech lands into the Reich as the 'Protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia'. A government-in-exile, headed by Dr Edvard Beneš, was set up in London. Liberation by the Soviet Army and US Forces was completed by May 1945. Territories taken by the Germans, Poles and Hungarians were restored to Czechoslovak sovereignty. Elections were held in May 1946 following which a coalition government under a Communist Prime Minister, Klement Gottwald, remained in power until 20 Feb. 1948, when 12 of the non-Communist ministers resigned in protest against infiltration of Communists into the police. In Feb. a predominantly Communist government was formed by Gottwald. In May elections resulted in an 89% majority for the government and President Beneš resigned.

In 1968 pressure for liberalization culminated in the overthrow of the Stalinist leader, Antonín Novotný, and his associates. Under Alexander Dubček's leadership the 'Prague Spring' began to take shape and the outlines of a new political system described as 'socialism with a human face' began to appear as the Communist Party introduced an 'Action Programme' of far-reaching reforms. Soviet pressure to abandon this programme was exerted between May and Aug. 1968 and finally Warsaw Pact forces occupied Czechoslovakia on 21 Aug. The Czechoslovak government was compelled to accept a policy of 'normalization' (i.e., abandonment of most reforms) and the stationing of Soviet forces.

Mass demonstrations demanding political reform began in Nov. 1989. After the authorities' use of violence to break up a demonstration on 17 Nov., the Communist leader resigned. On 30 Nov. the Federal Assembly abolished the Communist Party's sole right to govern, and a new Government was formed on 3 Dec. The protest movement continued to grow and on 10 Dec. another Government was formed. Gustáv Husák resigned as President and was replaced by Václav Havel on the unanimous vote of 323 members of the Federal Assembly on 29 Dec.

At the June 1992 elections the Movement for Democratic Slovakia led by Vladimír Mečiar campaigned on the issue of Slovak independence, and on 17 July the Slovak National Council adopted a declaration of sovereignty by 113 to 24 votes. President Havel resigned as Federal president on 20 July. On 1 Sept. 1992 the Slovak National Council adopted, by 114 votes to 16 with 4 abstentions (and a boycott by the Hungarian deputies), a Constitution for an independent Slovakia to come into being on 1 Jan. 1993. Economic property was divided between Slovakia and the Czech Republic in accordance with a Czechoslovakian law of 13 Nov. 1992. Government real estate became the property of the republic in which it was located. Other property was divided by specially-constituted commissions in the proportion of 2 (Czech Republic) to 1 (Slovakia) on the basis of population size. Military material was divided on the 2:1 principle. Regular military personnel were invited to choose which armed force they would serve in.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Slovakia is bounded in the northwest by the Czech Republic, north by Poland, east by Ukraine, south by Hungary and southwest by Austria. Estimated population in 1995, 5,368,000 (48·7% male, 51·3% female); density, 109 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 5·45m.

In 1998, 60.2% of the population lived in urban areas. There are 8 administrative regions (Kraj), one of which is the capital, Bratislava. They have the same name as the main city of the region.

Region	Area in sq. km	1997 population
Banská Bystrica	9,455	663,845

An application to join the EU was made in June 1995. A referendum on whether Slovakia should apply to join NATO took place on 23–24 May 1997. Turn-out was 9.8% and the results were declared invalid. 55% of votes cast were against participation. Following the Sept. 1998 general election interest in joining NATO increased and Slovakia was added to the list of aspirant members. At the European Union's Helsinki Summit in Dec. 1999 Slovakia, along with 5 other countries, was invited to begin full negotiations for membership in Feb. 2000.

Slovakia has had a long-standing dispute with Hungary over the Gabčíkovo-Nagymaros Project, involving the building of dam structures in both countries for the production of electric power, flood control and improvement of navigation on the Danube as agreed in a treaty signed in 1977 between Czechoslovakia and Hungary. In late 1998 Slovakia and Hungary signed a protocol easing tensions between the 2 nations and settling differences over the dam.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 4.4% of GDP in 1998, industry 31.6% and services 64.0%.

Policy. New economic policy in 1998 had the key aims of the substantial reduction of the fiscal deficit, an increase in regulated prices towards international levels and the acceleration of the restructuring of state-owned banks and enterprises. Following Rudolf Schuster's victory in the presidential election in May 1999 hopes were high that Slovakia could begin accession negotiations with the European Union. By mid-1999 approximately 85% of the economy was in private hands, but although 1,000 sell-offs of state assets had been approved over the previous 4 years, only 3 had been bought by foreign investors.

Legislation of July 1995 ended privatization by vouchers, which became exchangeable instead against state securities. At the end of 1995 the private sector share of total GDP reached 64.9%.

Performance. In 1998 real GDP growth was 4.4%, but then just 1.0% in 1999. Zero growth was forecast for 2000. Slovakia's total GDP in 1998 was US$20.4bn. At May 1998 the current account balance stood at US$-1.3bn.

Budget. Government revenue and expenditure (in Ks. 1m.):

	1996	1997	1998	1999
Revenue	239,630	252,946	261,486	301,343
Expenditure	251,963	277,834	293,421	303,360

VAT, personal and company income tax, real estate taxes and inheritance taxes came into force in Jan. 1993. In July 1999 the lower level of VAT was raised from 6% to 10%.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Slovak koruna or crown (SKK) of 100 haliers, introduced on 8 Feb. 1993. The koruna was revalued 4% in May 1995. Foreign exchange reserves were US$7.469m. in May 1998, and gold reserves 1.29m. troy oz in Jan. 2000. Inflation was 6.6% in 1997 and an estimated 5.4% in 1998. For 1999 it was forecast to rise to 9.2%. Total money supply in Nov. 1997 was Ks. 159,376m.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Slovak National Bank, founded in 1993 (Governor, Marian Jusko). It has an autonomous statute modelled on the German Bundesbank, with the duties of maintaining control over monetary policy and inflation, ensuring the stability of the currency, and supervising commercial banks. However, it is now proposed to amend the central bank law to allow the government to appoint half the members of the board and force the bank to increase its financing of the budget deficit.

In Oct. 1998 the Slovak National Bank abandoned its fixed exchange rate system, whereby the crown's value was fixed within a fluctuation band against a number of currencies, and chose to float the currency.

Decentralization of the banking system began in 1991, and private banks began to operate. In May 1999 it was announced that the sales of 3 of the biggest banks would be completed by the end of 2000. Among these would be the 2 largest commercial banks—Slovenská Sporiteľňa (Slovak Savings Bank) and Všeobecná úverová banka (General Credit Bank). In 2000 Slovenská Sporiteľňa had assets of US$3.3bn. and Všeobecná úverová banka US$2.8bn. Foreign investors may acquire up to 25% of major banks' assets (100% of small banks), but no single investor may acquire more than 10%. There were 26 commercial banks in 1993, and 9 foreign bank branches. Total subscribed bank capital was Ks. 11,800m. in 1993. Savings accounts totalled Ks. 94,859m. in 1992.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The lands originally settled by Slovenes in the 6th century were steadily encroached upon by Germans. Slovenia developed as part of Austria-Hungary, after the defeat of the latter in the First World War becoming part of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes (Yugoslavia) on 1 Dec. 1918.

In Oct. 1989 the Slovene Assembly voted a constitutional amendment giving it the right to secede from Yugoslavia. On 2 July 1990 the Assembly adopted a 'declaration of sovereignty' and at a referendum on 23 Dec. 88·5% of participants voted for independence. On 25 June 1991 Slovenia declared independence but agreed to suspend this for 3 months at peace talks sponsored by the EU. Federal troops moved into Slovenia on 27 June to secure Yugoslavia's external borders, but after some fighting withdrew by the end of July. After the agreed 3-month moratorium Slovenia (and Croatia) declared their independence from the Yugoslav Federation on 8 Oct. 1991.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Solomon Islands were discovered by Europeans in 1568 but 200 years passed before contact was made again. The southern Solomon Islands were placed under British protection in 1893; the eastern and southern outliers were added in 1898 and 1899. Santa Isabel and the other islands to the north were ceded by Germany in 1900. Full internal self-government was achieved on 2 Jan. 1976 and independence on 7 July 1978.

In June 2000 there was a coup by rebels from the island of Malaita. Prime Minister Bartholomew Ulufa'alu was held at gunpoint for 2 days. The conflict between the so-called Malaita Eagles and the Isatabu Freedom Movement threatens civil war.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Solomon Islands lie within the area 5° to 12° 30' S. lat. and 155° 30' to 169° 45' E. long. The group includes the main islands of Guadalcanal, Malaita, New Georgia, San Cristobal (now Makira), Santa Isabel and Choiseul; the smaller Florida and Russell groups; the Shortland, Mono (or Treasury), Vella La Vella, Kolombangara, Ranongga, Gizo and Rendova Islands; to the east, Santa Cruz, Tikopia, the Reef and Duff groups; Rennell and Bellona in the south; Ontong Java or Lord Howe to the north; and many smaller islands. The land area is estimated at 10,954 sq. miles (28,370 sq. km). The larger islands are mountainous and forest clad, with flood-prone rivers of considerable energy potential. Guadalcanal has the largest land area and the greatest amount of flat coastal plain. Population (1997 estimate), 426,900; density per sq. km, 15.0. In 1998, 81.4% of the population lived in rural areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 596,000.

The islands are administratively divided into a Capital Territory and 9 provinces.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Solomon Islands is a constitutional monarchy with the British Sovereign (represented locally by a Governor-General, who must be a Solomon Island citizen) as Head of State. Legislative power is vested in the single-chamber National Parliament composed of 50 members, elected by universal adult suffrage for 5 years. Parliamentary democracy is based on a multi-party system. Executive authority is effectively held by the Cabinet, led by the Prime Minister.

The Governor-General is appointed for up to five years, on the advice of Parliament, and acts in almost all matters on the advice of the Cabinet. The Prime Minister is elected by and from members of Parliament. Other Ministers are appointed by the Governor-General on the Prime Minister's recommendation, from members of Parliament. The Cabinet is responsible to Parliament. Emphasis is laid on the devolution of power to provincial governments, and traditional chiefs and leaders have a special role within the arrangement.

When the Solomon Islands Alliance for Change (SIAC) coalition assumed office in Aug. 1997, the government had SI$200m. in debts despite a 6% growth rate of the economy during the previous year. The debt was reduced to SI$147m. by Sept. 1998 in a debt-servicing programme established jointly with the Central Bank of the Solomon Islands. The SIAC coalition embarked on a reform programme to encourage private enterprise which included a reduction of the civil service and a tightening of government revenue collection. The 1998 and 1999 government estimates are based on balanced budgeting. In Dec. 1997 the Solomon Islands dollar was devalued by 20%.

Agriculture. Land is held either as customary land (88% of holdings) or registered land. Customary land rights depend on clan membership or kinship. Only Solomon Islanders own customary land; only Islanders or government members may hold perpetual estates of registered land. Coconuts, cocoa, rice and other minor crops are grown. Timber production was 872,000 cu. metres in 1998.

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in 1996 were the equivalent of 0.4 tonnes per capita.

Fisheries. Solomon Islands' waters are among the richest in tuna. Catches have remained well below the maximum sustainable catch limits. (Somali Democratic Republic)

Capital: Mogadishu
Population estimate, 2000: 11.53m.
Estimated GDP: $46bn.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The origins of the Somali people can be traced back 2,000 years when they displaced an earlier Arabic people. They converted to Islam in the 10th century and were organized in loose Islamic states by the 19th century. The northern part of Somaliland was created a British protectorate in 1884. The southern part belonged to two local rulers who, in 1889, accepted Italian protection for their lands. The Italian invasion of Ethiopia in 1935 was launched from Somaliland and in 1936 Somaliland was incorporated with Eritrea and Ethiopia to become Italian East Africa. In 1940 Italian forces invaded British Somaliland but in 1941 the British, with South African and Indian troops, recaptured this territory as well as occupying Italian Somaliland. After the Second World War British Somaliland reverted to its colonial status and ex-Italian Somaliland became the UN Trust Territory of Somaliland, administered by Italy.

The independent Somali Republic came into being on 1 July 1960 as a result of the merger of the British Somaliland Protectorate, which first became independent on 26 June 1960, and the Italian Trusteeship Territory of Somaliland. On 21 Oct. 1969 Maj.-Gen. Mohammed Siyad Barre took power in a coup. Various insurgent forces combined to oppose the Barre regime in a bloody civil war. Barre fled on 27 Jan. 1991 but interfactional fighting continued. In Aug. 1992 a new coalition government agreed a UN military presence to back up relief efforts to help the estimated 1.5–2m. victims of famine. On 11 Dec. 1992 the leaders of the two most prominent of the warring factions, Ali Mahdi Muhammad and Muhammad Farah Aidid, agreed to a peace plan under the aegis of the UN and a pact was signed on 15 Jan. 1993. At the end of March, the warring factions agreed to disarm and form a 74-member National Transitional Council. On 4 Nov. 1994 the UN Security Council unanimously decided to withdraw UN forces; the last of these left on 2 March 1995.

The principal insurgent group in the north of the country, the Somali National Movement, declared the secession of an independent 'Somaliland Republic' on 17 May 1991, based on the territory of the former British protectorate, with a capital at Hargeysa and a port at Berbera. The Somalian government rejected the secession and Muhammad Aidid's forces launched a campaign to reoccupy the 'Republic' in Jan. 1996. Muhammad Farah Aidid was assassinated in July 1996 and succeeded by his son Hussein Aidid (b. 1965).

Peace efforts in neighbouring Djibouti culminated in July 2000 in the establishment of a power-sharing agreement and a national constitution to see Somalia through a 3-year transitional period. The election of members of parliament and a civilian government followed in Aug. 2000, and in Oct. the new government moved from Djibouti back to Somalia.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Somalia is bounded north by the Gulf of Aden, east and south by the Indian ocean, and west by Kenya, Ethiopia and Djibouti. Total area 637,657 sq. km (246,201 sq. miles). Estimated population: 10,070,000 (1997); density, 15.8 per sq. km. Population counting is complicated due to large numbers of nomads and refugee movements as a result of famine and clan warfare.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 15.73m.

In 1995 an estimated 74.4% of the population were rural.

The country is administratively divided into 18 regions (with chief cities): Awdal (Saylac), Bakol (Xuddur), Bay (Baydhabo), Benadir (Mogadishu), East (Boosaso), Galgudug (Duusa Marreeb), Gedo (Garbahaarrey), Hiran (Beledweyne), Central Juba (Jilib), Lower Juba (Kismayo), Mudug (Gaalkacyo), Nogal (Gaarowe), North-West (Hargeysa), Sanaag (Ceerigabo), Central Shabele (Jawhar), Lower Shabele (Marka), Sol (Las Anod), Togder (Burao). The capital is Mogadishu (1999 population, 1,162,000). Other large towns are (with 1990 estimates) Hargeysa (90,000), Kismayo (90,000), Berbera (70,000) and Marka (62,000).

The national language is Somali. Arabic is also an official language and English and Italian are spoken extensively.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 1997 estimate, 300,000; deaths, 121,000. Rates, 1997 estimate (per 1,000 population): birth, 45.5; death, 18.3. Infant mortality, 1997, 126 per 1,000 live births. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2.5%. Life expectancy in 1997, 46.2 years. Fertility rate, 1999, 7.2 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Much of the country is arid, though rainfall is more adequate towards the south. Temperatures are very high on the northern coasts. Mogadishu, Jan. 79°F (26.1°C), July 78°F (25.6°C). Annual rainfall 17" (429 mm). Berbera, Jan. 76°F (24.4°C), July 97°F (36.1°C). Annual rainfall 2" (51 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution of 1984 authorized a sole legal party, the Somali Revolutionary Socialist Party. There was an elected President and People's Assembly.

A conference of national reconciliation in July 1991 and again in March 1993 allowed for the setting up of a transitional government charged with reorganizing free elections, but inter-factional fighting and anarchy have replaced settled government.

In Aug. 2000 the country's first parliament for 9 years was inaugurated in neighbouring Djibouti. Under an agreed charter the transitional assembly was to elect a president who in turn was to form a government. However, ongoing wrangling between Somalia's rival factions continues.

There is at present no seat of government, so when the new parliament had its first session in Nov. 2000 the 245 members used a hotel in Mogadishu.

RECENT ELECTIONS

For nearly 10 years Somalia had no functioning government as such, but on 25 Aug. 2000 Abdiqassim Salad Hassan was elected President by the interim government. He defeated Abdillahi Ahmed Adow in a third ballot by 145 votes to 92.

Army. Following the 1991 revolution there are no national armed forces. In Northern Somalia the Somali National Movement controls an armed clan of 5–6,000 out of a total of 12,900 armed forces in the area. In the rest of the country several local groups control forces of which the Ali Mahdi Faction controls the largest, an armed clan of 10,000.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Dutch first established a trading post at the Cape in 1652. The hinterland was then inhabited by the Khoisan peoples and, further east and north, by Bantu-speaking peoples. There was some white settlement over the next century. During the Napoleonic Wars, Britain took possession of the Cape and later many Boer (Dutch) settlers migrated northeast in the Great Trek. In the mid-19th century Britain ruled the Cape Colony and Natal along the coast of southern Africa, while in the interior the Afrikaners or Boers, descendants of Dutch settlers, established their own independent republics in the Transvaal and the Orange Free State. Some Bantu African peoples remained unconquered, notably the Xhosas east of the Cape Colony and, north of Natal, the Zulus. Meanwhile, British settlers emigrated to Cape Colony and Natal in the 19th century, and from the 1860s many Indians were brought to Natal as indentured labourers on the sugar plantations. The population of the Cape Colony included many Afrikaners as well as the 'Coloured' community, descendants of Dutch settlers and indigenous Khoisan women and of Malay slaves. Most coloureds spoke Afrikaans, the offshoot of Dutch spoken by the Boers.

Britain annexed the Transvaal in 1877, and fought in 1879 with the Zulus who, under King Ketswayo, won a victory at Isandhlwana but were then defeated at Ulundi. Britain restored independence to the Transvaal (South African Republic) in 1884 and annexed Zululand in 1887. Both the British and the Boers fought African resistance for many years, the last major rising being in Natal in 1906. However, the British and Boers were also rivals for supremacy, especially after the discovery of diamonds at Kimberley in 1867 and of gold in the Transvaal in 1884. This led to an economic boom and wealth for many, of whom Cecil Rhodes, for a time prime minister of the Cape, was the dominant entrepreneurial figure.

In the South African War of 1899–1902 the British defeated and annexed the Boer republics. The Boer republics were given self-government again in 1907 and on 31 May 1910 Cape Colony, Natal, the Transvaal and the Orange Free State combined to form the Union of South Africa, a self-governing dominion under the British Crown. The Union's economy was based on gold and diamond mining, for which there was organized recruitment of migrant African labourers from Union territory and other parts of Africa. Pass Laws were in operation, controlling Africans' movements in the towns and industrial areas, where they were regarded officially as temporary residents and segregated in 'townships'. By an Act of 1913, 87% of the land was reserved for white ownership only, much of it being owned by white farmers, while Africans farmed as tenants or squatters. African protests at segregation and lack of political rights were led by the African National Congress (ANC).

African rights were further suppressed after the coming to power in 1924 of the Afrikaner Nationalist Party, led by J. B. Hertzog. Hertzog's government secured recognition of full independence for South Africa by the Statute of Westminster on 11 Dec. 1931. It also promoted the status of the Afrikaans language and introduced new segregation measures. From 1948 the National Party government reinforced the segregation system, developing it into the system of Apartheid. The shooting by police of protesters against the Pass Laws at Sharpeville on 21 March 1960 led to a major crisis from which, however, the government emerged only stronger. The ANC and the Pan African Congress were banned, and the leaders forced to operate from exile after internal ANC leaders, including Nelson Mandela, were jailed in 1964. On 31 May 1961 South Africa became a Republic outside the Commonwealth.

When P. W. Botha became prime minister in 1978, elements of the Apartheid system were modified. Africans were allowed to form legal trade unions and the Acts banning marriage and sexual relations between people of different races were repealed.

A new constitution, approved in a referendum of white voters on 2 Nov. 1983 and in force from 3 Sept. 1984, created a new three-part parliament, with a House of Assembly for the Whites, a House of Representatives for the Coloureds and a House of Delegates for the Indians; Africans remained without representation. From late 1984 Blacks in the cities and industrial areas staged large-scale protests. In June 1986 a state of emergency was imposed. Foreign condemnation of this led to the first economic sanctions against South Africa, imposed by a number of countries including the USA.

By 1989 a start had been made on dismantling Apartheid, and the government announced its willingness to consider the extension of Black South Africans' political rights. In Feb. 1990 a 30-year ban on the African National Congress (ANC) was lifted and its leader, Nelson Mandela, released from prison. At the Whites-only referendum on 17 March 1992, on the granting of constitutional equality to all races, 1,924,186 (68.7%) votes were in favour; 875,619 against.

On 22 Dec. 1993 parliament approved (by 237 votes to 45) a Transitional Constitution paving the way for a new multi-racial parliament which was elected on 26–29 April 1994, and South Africa rejoined the Commonwealth. On 9 May 1994 Nelson Mandela was elected President. He was succeeded by Thabo Mbeki on 16 June 1999.

The Union Buildings are the home of the South African Administration and was the site of the swearing in of President Nelson Mandela on 10 May 1994.

Cape Town: Situated on the southwest coast of Africa, Cape Town is home to South Africa's Parliament. The city is dominated by Table Mountain, over 1,000 metres high. Table Mountain was declared a National Monument in 1998 and is a World Heritage site. Robben Island (Seal Island), a former asylum and leper colony before becoming a prison, is also a National Monument.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births: the number of recorded births has decreased from 654,121 in 1990 to 379,331 in 1999.

Officially recorded marriages: the following statistics reflect marriages contracted and divorces granted during 1996, as registered by the civil registration system. (Customary and traditional marriages are excluded since they were not being registered in 1996. However, from 1998, under a new bill, customary and traditional marriages are recognized in law.) The total number of marriages recorded in 1996 was 146,732. The crude marriage rate was 362 per 100,000 of the population. Western Cape had the highest rate (636 per 100,000), Gauteng the second highest (543 per 100,000) followed by Northern Cape (439 per 100,000). Eastern Cape had the lowest rate (221 per 100,000), due in part to unregistered customary and traditional marriages occurring mostly in this largely rural province. Of the total marriages officially recorded in 1996, 74,373 (51.0%) were solemnized in magistrates' courts and 55,809 (38.0%) in religious ceremonies. 16,550 (11.9%) were classed under 'unspecified'. In 1995 the most popular age for marrying was 25–29 for both men and women.

Deaths: the recorded number of deaths increased by 26% from 213,279 in 1994 to 268,025 in 1995 and further increased by 22% to 327,821 in 1996. According to the State of SA's Population Report 2000 the annual population growth rate, 1996–2001, is 2.2% and the fertility rate 2.9 births per woman. Life expectancy at birth, 1998, was 50.3 years for males and 56.2 for females.

CLIMATE

There is abundant sunshine and relatively low rainfall. The southwest has a Mediterranean climate, with rain mainly in winter, but most of the country has a summer maximum, though quantities show a decrease from east to west. Pretoria, Jan. 73.4°F (23.0°C), July 53.6°F (12.0°C). Annual rainfall 26.5" (674 mm). Bloemfontein, Jan. 73.4°F (23.0°C), July 45.9°F (7.7°C). Annual rainfall 22" (559 mm). Cape Town, Jan. 69.6°F (20.9°C), July 54.0°F (12.2°C). Annual rainfall 20.3" (515 mm). Johannesburg, Jan. 68.2°F (20.1°C), July 50.7°F (10.4°C). Annual rainfall 28.1" (713 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A Transitional Constitution came into effect on 27 April 1994 and was in force until 3 Feb. 1997. Under it, the National Assembly and Senate formed a Constitutional Assembly which had the task of drafting a definitive Constitution. This was adopted on 9 May 1996 and signed into law in Dec. 1996. The 1996 Constitution defines the powers of the President, Parliament (consisting of the National Assembly and the new National Council of Provinces), the national executive, the judiciary, public administration, the security services and the relationship between the 3 spheres of government. It incorporates a Bill of Rights pertaining to, inter alia, education, housing, food and water supply, security as well as political rights.

A Constitutional Court, consisting of a president, a deputy president and 9 other judges, was inaugurated in Feb. 1995. The Court's judges are appointed by the President of the Republic from a list provided by the Judicial Service Commission, after consulting the President of the Constitutional Court and the leaders of parties represented in the National Assembly. A Constitutional Court judge is appointed for a non-renewable term of 12 years but must retire at the age of 70. The Court reviews the actions of the legislature, executive and judiciary in the light of the Bill of Rights and the Constitution, and can overturn legislation.

The National Assembly consists of no fewer than 350 and no more than 400 members directly elected for 5 years, 200 from a national list and 200 from provincial lists in the following proportions: Eastern Cape, 28; Free State, 14; Gauteng, 44; KwaZulu-Natal, 42; Mpumalanga, 11; Northern Cape, 4; Northern Province, 25; North-West, 12; Western Cape, 20. In terms of the 1993 Constitution, which still regulated the 1999 elections, the 9 provincial legislatures are elected at the same time and candidates may stand for both. If elected to both, they have to choose between sitting in the national or provincial assembly. In the former case, the runner-up is elected to the Provincial Assembly. The National Council of Provinces (NCOP) consists of 90 members (10 from each province) elected indirectly by the provincial legislatures by proportional representation.

Bills (except finance bills) may be introduced in either house but must be passed by both. A finance bill may only be introduced in the National Assembly. If a bill is rejected by one house it is referred back to both after consideration by a joint National Assembly-NCOP committee called the Mediation Committee. Bills relating to the provinces must be passed by the NCOP.

National Anthem. A combination of shortened forms of 'Die Stem van Suid-Afrika'/'The Call of South Africa' (words by C. J. Langenhoven; tune by M. L. de Villiers) and the ANC anthem 'Nkosi sikelel' iAfrika'/'God bless Africa' (words and tune by Enos Santonga).

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 2 June 1999. The electorate was 22.7m.; turnout, 89%. Of the 19 parties which took part in the elections, 13 are represented in Parliament, based on the election results. The African National Congress (ANC) won 266 seats in Parliament's National Assembly with 66.35% of votes cast, the Democratic Party (DP) 38 with 9.56%, the Inkatha Freedom Party (IFP) 34 with 8.58%, the New National Party (NNP) 28 with 6.87%, the United Democratic Movement (UDM) 14 with 3.42%, the African Christian Democratic Party (ACDP) 6 with 1.43%, the Freedom Front (FF) 3 with 0.8%, the United Christian Democratic Party (UCDP) 3 with 0.78%, the Pan-Africanist Congress (PAC) 3 with 0.71%, the Freedom Alliance (FA) 2 with 0.54%, the Minority Front (MF) 1 with 0.3%, the Afrikaner Eenheidsbeweging (AEB) 1 with 0.29% and the Azanian People's Organization (AZAPO) 1 with 0.17%.

DEFENCE

There are 4 Services constituting the South African National Defence Force (SANDF), namely the SA Army, the SA Air Force, the SA Navy and the SA Military Health Service (SAMHS). SAMHS personnel at the end of 2000 totalled 7,328 (3,900 women) and 725 reserves. The final strength of the SANDF is still under discussion although reduction in total force strength is envisaged.

Defence expenditure totalled US$1,755m. in 1999, the highest of any country in sub-Saharan Africa (equivalent to US$44 per capita), and represented 1.3% of GDP. Defence expenditure in 1985 was US$4,256m. (US$127 per capita and 2.7% of GDP).

Army. Personnel of the SA Army Regular Force in 2000 totalled 38,942 (including 6,032 civilian personnel); Reserve Force personnel totalled 85,074.

Navy. Navy personnel in 2000 totalled 5,000 uniformed, 2,500 civilian and 1,000 active reserve members. The fleet is based at the naval bases at Simon's Town on the west coast and Durban on the east and includes 6 Warrior class fast attack craft (missile) and 2 Daphne class submarines (to be supplemented from 2005 with 3 submarines on order from the German Submarine Consortium).

Air Force. Personnel in 2000 totalled 11,574. 12 attack and reconnaissance helicopters are due to be based at Air Force Base Bloemfontein.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

South Africa is a member of the UN, the Commonwealth (except during 1961–94), OAU, the Southern African Development Community, the Non-Aligned Movement, the African Development Bank, the Antarctic Treaty and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship. South Africa played an active role in negotiating and drafting the Lusaka Ceasefire Agreement and was present when the document was signed on 10 July 1999. On 1 Dec. 1999 the eighth Regional Summit appointed Nelson Mandela facilitator of the Arusha peace process.

ECONOMY

Policy. South Africa's social and economic policies are founded on the 'Reconstruction and Development Programme (RDP)' endorsed by the new government after the 1994 elections. The RDP focuses on meeting basic needs, developing human resources, building the economy and democratizing the state and society. Key programmes have included land redistribution (see Agriculture), housing development, rural water supply, an electrification programme, universal access to schooling and provision of free primary health care. The goals of RDP continue to be the core principles underlying social and development policies and programmes.

Further impetus to economic growth was given by the announcement of a macro-economic strategy, 'Growth, Employment and Redistribution', in 1996. This economic policy framework includes a commitment to lowering tariffs, reducing the budget deficit, phasing out exchange controls, increasing investment in infrastructure and privatization or restructuring of state-owned enterprises.

Performance. Economic growth averaged about 3% a year between 1994–97. The emerging market financial crisis led to a slowdown in growth in 1998 and a marked depreciation of the rand. In 1999 growth was 1.2%. In Oct. 1999 projected economic growth was estimated at 3.5% in 2000, and inflation about 5%.

In the late 1990s the budget deficit was steadily reduced to under 3% of GDP, and is projected to fall further over the next 3 years. The government's Medium Term Expenditure Framework prioritizes spending on education, health and welfare, while also providing for stronger police and justice expenditure.

A broad recovery of growth in manufacturing is expected over the next 3 years, as is a continuation of the strong financial and retail sector growth seen through most of the 1990s. Rising commodity prices will also benefit the economy. However, the low level of employment growth continues to be a concern.

Total GDP in 1998 was US$133.5bn. The growth in real GDP for 1999 was 1.9%. For the first 9 months of 2000 it was 3.0% compared with the corresponding period of 1999. Gross international reserves were about R47bn. in late 1999.

Budget. Total revenue and expenditure of the central government's State Revenue Account in R1bn.:

	1997-98	1998-99	1999-2000	2000-01

The 2000 budget provided for expenditure of R233.5bn. or 26.4% of GDP; revenue, R210.4bn. or 23.8% of GDP. South Africa's deficit is revised down to 2.4% in 1999-2000 and is projected to decrease to 2.2% by 2002-03. R46.5bn. or 5.2% of GDP is spent on debt servicing.

National government gets R87.7bn. (47% of the total non-interest spending); provincial governments, R94.4bn. (51%); local government, R2.8bn. (2%). The national share includes R11.6bn. in conditional grants to provincial and local government. R1bn. was allocated for targeted poverty relief; Job Summit initiatives allocation rises to R1.2bn. in 2000-01, R1.5bn. in 2002-03 and beyond. R500m. is made available for HIV/Aids initiatives over and above existing allocations. Spending on social services (education, health, welfare and housing) makes up 56% of total non-interest expenditure.

The tax system changed from source-based to residence-based from 1 April 2001. VAT has remained at 14% since 1993. Corporate taxes were reduced to 30% in 1999. A tiered corporate tax was introduced in 2000 with taxes for small businesses reduced by half. R9.9bn. was returned to taxpayers in reduced personal income tax for all income groups but particularly lower and middle income groups. The marginal tax rate for high-income earners was cut to 42% from 45%. A capital gains tax was introduced from 1 April 2001.

Currency. The unit of currency is the rand (ZAR) of 100 cents. A single free-floating exchange rate replaced the former 2-tier system on 13 March 1995. The core inflation rate for Nov. 2000 was down 0.1 point at 8.2% from 8.3% previously. The official inflation rate, i.e. the 12-month rate of change in the consumer price index (CPI) for metropolitan areas, was 7.1% in both Oct. and Nov. 2000 compared with 6.8% in Sept. The year-on-year rate of increase in the SPIX, the new measure of consumer price inflation for inflation targeting purposes, which excludes home mortgage rates from the overall consumer price index for metropolitan and other urban areas, declined from 8.2% in Aug. 2000 to 7.7% in Nov. 2000. In Sept. 2000 gross gold and other foreign exchange reserves were US$11,120m. and in Oct. 2000 gold reserves were 5.86m. troy oz.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the South African Reserve Bank (established 1920), which functions independently. Its Governor is Tito Mboweni. Total deposits, 30 Nov. 1999, R18,249m.; assets, R76,369m.

In 1999, 54 banks, including 12 branches of foreign banks and 4 mutual banks, were registered with the Office of the Registrar of Banks. 58 foreign banks have authorized representative offices in South Africa.

At 30 Nov. 1999 the 57 banks, including 12 branches of foreign banks and 3 mutual banks, were registered with the Office of the Registrar of Banks, 57 foreign banks have authorized representative offices in South Africa. At 31 Dec. 1999 the 57 registered banking institutions collectively employed around 124,925 workers and had combined assets amounting to R724.9bn. Their offices (including both branches and agencies) totalled 4,694. If the 2,464 post offices through which the Postbank's services are rendered are included, banking services are provided at some 5,736 offices throughout the country. The Postbank receives deposits from but does not provide credit to the public.

The Banks Act, 1990 (Act No. 94 of 1990) governs the operations and prudential requirements of banks. As at 31 Oct. 1997 the minimum capital adequacy requirement was 8%.

There is a stock exchange at Johannesburg (JSE). Foreign nationals have been eligible for membership since Nov. 1995.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. South Africa supplies two-thirds of Africa's electricity. 92% is produced from coal, with generation dominated by the public utility Eskom which also owns and operates the national electricity grid. Eskom supplies more than 95% of South Africa's electricity and more than 60% of electricity consumed throughout Africa. The total power station nominal capacity was 39,154 MW in 1997. There were 13 coal-fired power stations, 1 nuclear (located in the Western Cape, operating 2 PWR reactors of 1,840 MW), 1 bagasse, 6 hydro-electric, 2 pumped storage and 2 gas turbine in service in 1997. Production in 1998 was 192,015m. kWh. Total consumption was 187,514 GWh in 1998.

In 1999, 66.3% of households had electricity. There are still over 3.2m. unelectrified households (2.1m. in rural areas).

Oil and Gas. Petroleum and gas production is currently limited to the F-A and EM gas fields off Mossel Bay from the Mossgas facility. The expected life of the plant is 25 years. With the development of the EM gas field, there are sufficient resources of off-shore natural gas to yield 30,000 bbls. a day of petroleum products until 2006. During 1999 the total volume of crude oil produced from the Oribi Field off the Cape south coast was 5,455,599 bbls. Mossgas supplies about 7% of South Africa's liquid fuel needs. In addition to coal gas and liquid petroleum gas around 1,616,462 tonnes of natural gas and 300,886 tonnes of condensate liquid fuels were produced in 1999. Petronet owns, maintains and operates a network of 3,000 km of high-pressure petroleum and gas pipelines. In the 1998-99 financial year Petronet transported 16bn. litres of fuel from coastal and inland refineries to the main business centres in Gauteng and surrounding areas and some 200m. cu. metres of gas from Secunda to KwaZulu-Natal. Petronet's customers are the major oil companies in South Africa.

Water. Rivers are the main source of water in South Africa. Average annual rainfall is a little less than 500 mm compared to the world average of about 860 mm. On average, only some 9% of rainfall reaches the rivers. 65% of the country receives less than 500 mm, which is generally accepted as the minimum required for successful dryland farming. 21% of the country, mainly in the arid west, receives less than 200 mm annually. The resultant surface water run-off is estimated to be about 53,500m. cu. metres, including that flowing out of Lesotho. Along with surface water, about 5,400m. kilolitres of water a year may be sustainably obtainable from groundwater, often of low yields and not suitable for drinking. Only about 32,000m. kilolitres of the annual run-off can be economically exploited using current methods.

Irrigation and stock watering accounts for about 52% of the water used, 12% for domestic and municipal purposes, 7.6% by industry, 2.7% by mining and 2.3% for power generation. More than 12m. people are without access to adequate water supplies. Between 1994 and March 1999 some 3.5m. people gained access to basic water services.

The first phase of the Working for Water Programme to rid South Africa of invasive alien plants was completed in May 1998. The plants are a major threat to water resources and reduce the amount of water available for other purposes. It is estimated that as much as 10% of the country's mean annual water run-off is lost to alien plants.

A water research commission was established in 1971 to co-ordinate and promote water research and in 1999 a new National Water Act came into effect with the nation's water resources becoming a national resource belonging to the nation as a whole. Water availability has been distributed poorly in relation to regions of economic growth and, as a result, major inter-basin water transfer schemes are a feature of the South African infrastructure. The latest such scheme, the first of which has been completed, is the Lesotho Highlands Water Project. This diverts the Orange River headwaters within Lesotho through tunnels into the Vaal River System, which serves an area where about 60% of the gross domestic product of the country is generated. Lesotho receives royalties in exchange.

Total value of all minerals sold, 1999: R76,387.1m.; 1998: R72,636.7m.

Mineral production (in tonnes), 1999: coal, 220.7m.; silver, 160.9; and in 1998, iron ore, 33.0m.; manganese, 3.0m.; chrome ore, 6.5m.; aluminium, 650,000; copper, 165,661; limestone, 19.8m.; nickel, 36,680; platinum-group metals, 200; diamonds, 10,705,221 carats.

South African gold production continued to slide in 1999, with output falling 4.5% to 443 tonnes, while total revenue increased by 3.5% to R25.1bn. Owing to the accelerated weakening of the rand, the average rand price of gold improved by 5.5% from R1,622.9 per oz in 1998 to R1,711.7 per oz in 1999. In 1998 the number of persons engaged in the mining industry was 469,045, of whom 181,144 were involved in underground gold-mining operations.

Agriculture. The redistribution of 30% of land, expropriated since 1913, is envisaged by the Reconstruction and Development Programme. By 1999, 58,921 households had received 745,015 ha of land in both the redistribution and restitution programmes. Dispossessed landowners are entitled to restitution from the state, though the rights of present landowners must be respected and compensation paid.

Much of the land suitable for mechanized farming has unreliable rainfall. Of the total farming area, natural pasture occupies 81% (69.6m. ha) and planted pasture 2.3% (2m. ha). About 13% of South Africa's surface area can be used for crop production. High potential arable land comprises only 22% of the total arable land. Annual crops and orchards are cultivated on 9.9m. ha of dry land and 1.3m. ha under irrigation.

The following data exist on Black farmers: smallholders who produce at or near to subsistence level, 1.03m. households; progressive small-scale farmers who consistently market agricultural products but for whom agriculture is not the sole or main source of income, 238,000 households; market-orientated commercial farmers for whom agriculture is the sole or main source of income, 3,100 households.

In 1999 agriculture, forestry and fisheries contributed 3.4% of GDP.

Production (1999, in 1,000 tonnes): maize, 7,946; sorghum, 224; wheat, 1,733; groundnuts, 138; sunflower seeds 1,212; sugarcane, 21,223; oranges, 1,046; potatoes, 1,674; other vegetables, 1,585; grapes, 212; apples, 618.

Livestock, in 1,000 (2000): 13,461 cattle, 28,551 sheep, 6,706 goats, 1,555 pigs.

The 2000 production of red meat was 705,000 tonnes; poultry meat, 947,000 tonnes; wool (1999), 46,994 tonnes; eggs, 308,000 tonnes; milk, 2,670m. tonnes.

The value of agricultural imports decreased by 4.4% while the value of exports increased by 7.3% for 1999 compared to 1998. Based on 1999 export values, citrus fruit (R1,867m.), sugar (R1,470m.), grapes (R1,279m.), wine (R1,223m.), apples, pears and quinces (R888m.) were the most important export products. Rice (R864m.), whiskies and other spirits (R583m.), sunflower and cotton seed oil (R444m.), tobacco (R416m.) and wheat (R401m.) were the most important import products. During 1999 the UK, the Netherlands, Belgium, Mozambique and Japan were the 5 largest trading partners in terms of export destinations for South African products.

In 1999 the gross value of agricultural production was R43,647m. (field crops, R14,302m.; livestock products, R17,669m.; horticulture, R11,676m.).

Forestry. South Africa has developed one of the largest man-made forestry resources in the world. Production from these plantations approached 16m. cu. metres valued at R2.3bn. in 1998-99. Together with the products processed from it, the total industry turnover in 1998-99 was around R17bn. Collectively, the industry employs more than 150,000 people. In 1998 timber production totalled 33.17m. cu. metres.

The forestry industry was a net exporter to the value of more than R3.4bn. in 1998, over 98% of which was in the form of converted value-added products. Raw material exports (i.e. logs) made up only 1.8% of these exports. The forestry industry currently ranks among the top exporting industries in the country, contributing some 4.7% to the overall export of manufactured goods in 1998. The turnover of the industry amounts to an annualized R17bn.

Indigenous high forest covers only about 350,00 ha or 0.3% of the country's surface. The private sector owns 1,067,000 ha of exotic plantations (especially pine, eucalyptus and wattle) or 70% of the total plantation area, as well as virtually all the processing plants in the country. In 1998 there were 1,800 registered private timber growers and more than 14,000 unregistered growers, the latter being small emergent black timber growers.

Of the 1,518,610 ha of plantations in 1997, 53% were pine, 39% eucalyptus, 7% wattle and less than 1% various minor species. 40% of the trees are grown for the production of pulpwood, 37% for sawlogs and 17% for mining timber, while the balance of 6% is grown for the production of poles, matchwood (poplar) and other minor products.

Wood is the primary source of fuel for around 12m. rural and urban dwellers. More than 13m. cu. metres of firewood are chopped annually for fuel, some 2.8m. cu. metres of which is used in KwaZulu-Natal.

Food and Trees for Africa (formerly Trees for Africa) is the sub-Saharan African partner of the international Global Relief greening organization. Since its inception in 1990 some 1m. trees have been planted.

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas South Africa's carbon dioxide emissions in 1996 were the equivalent of 7.3 tonnes per capita.

Fisheries. The commercial marine fishing industry is valued at R2bn. annually and employs 27,000 people, while recreational fishing attracts some 750,000 enthusiasts, employs over 130,000 people and generates more than R1.4bn. revenue. Some 3.6m. people depend largely on coastal food sources through subsistence activities that are worth about R1.1bn. annually.

In 1998 the commercial fishing fleet consisted of 4,477 vessels licensed by the Department of Environmental Affairs and Tourism. Whereas in 1998 commercial and semi-commercial line-fishing vessels numbered 2,731, conservation measures in 2001 reduced this sector to 580 vessels accommodating 4,235 fishers. The number of tuna vessels was reduced to 200 with provision to accommodate 3,600 fishers. Squid-jigging fishery had 204 catchers and a further 154 craft that could both catch and process.

INDUSTRY

According to the Financial Times Survey (FT 500) published in May 2000, the largest companies in South Africa in Jan. 2000 were De Beers (market capitalization of US$11,646.6m.), Firststrand (market capitalization of US$7,692.7m.) and Anglo American Platinum Corp. (market capitalization of US$6,609.6m.).

Net value of sales of the principal groups of industries (in R1m.) in 1999: food and food products, 57,136; chemicals and products, 45,353; vehicles and vehicle parts, 42,719; basic iron and steel products, 25,867; fabricated metal products except machinery, 23,536; beverages, 20,653; petroleum products, 20,464; paper and products, 20,400; basic precious and non-ferrous metal products, 13,107; electrical machinery, 11,834; printing and publishing, 11,664; clothing, 10,951; textiles, 9,770; wood and wood products, 8,017. Total net value including other groups, R397,320m. Manufacturing contributed R108,470m. towards GDP of R544,654m. in 1999, and thus accounted for 20% of the total.

Labour. The Employment Equity Act, 1998 signalled the beginning of the final phase of transformation in the job market, which began with the implementation of the Labour Relations Act. It aims to avoid all discrimination in employment. The Basic Conditions of Employment Act, 1997 applies to all workers except for the South African National Defence Force (SANDF), the South African Secret Service (SASS) and the National Intelligence Agency (NIA). The new provisions include the following: a reduction in the maximum hours of work from 46 to 45 hours per week (however, the Act includes a process for the progressive reduction of working hours to 40 per week); an increase in the rate of overtime from 133% to 150%; payment for working Sundays is 200% if Sunday is not a normal working day (if Sunday is a normal working day, payment is at 150%); night work attracts a premium in pay or additional time off; maternity leave increases to 4 months (but payment is not prescribed); annual leave increases from 2 to 3 weeks; family responsibility leave allows for 3 days paid leave to attend the birth or illness of children, or death of an immediate family member; employers must provide workers with written Particulars of Employment; provision for establishing minimum wages and conditions for groups of workers in vulnerable sectors such as domestic, farms, security, clothing; children under 15 years of age are prohibited from working and children between 15 and 18 will be better protected while being prohibited from working in certain jobs such as mining and manufacturing.

In 1999 about 23.3% of the economically active population were unemployed (25.2% in 1998). The majority of the unemployed are black men and women under the age of 35 years.

Of the economically active population, only 3m. are skilled or highly skilled (some 20%) while 7m. are employed in semi-skilled or unskilled jobs (totalling some 80% of the economically active population). The Skills Development Act, aspects of which came into effect on 2 Feb. 1999, aims to address the shortage of skills. South African professionals constitute fewer than 4% of the labour force; in craft and related trade, the percentage is 12%.

Industrial employment (except mining) at Sept. 1998: manufacturing employed 1,375,072 workers; trade and accommodation services, 680,267; construction, 378,018.

By 2005 at least 2% of public servants must be disabled people.

Trade Unions. At the end of 1999 there were 499 registered trade unions and membership had decreased to 3.35m. Total membership comprises approximately 30.8% of the estimated 15.8m. economically active population. During 1998, 16,553 disputes were handled by bargaining councils and 5,042 settled (a 50% increase on the number of disputes handled in 1997). The most important trade union groups or federations are FEDUSA, NACTU and COSATU. The 3 largest trade unions are the National Union of Mineworkers (NUM), the National Union of Metalworkers of South Africa (Numsa), both COSATU affiliates, and the Public Servants Association, an affiliate of FEDUSA. Employers also have the right to associate with employer organizations and register their organizations with the Department of Labour. In Jan. 2000 there were 242 registered employer organizations and 10 federations of employer organizations. The Labour Court has been operating since Nov. 1996. In 1998, 6,056 cases were lodged with the Court and 153 appeals with the Labour Appeal Court.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

South Africa's 4 main trading partners in 1999 were the UK, US, Germany and Japan. In regional terms Europe is the leading trading partner, taking more than one third of exports, followed by Asia (18.5%), Africa (13.6%) and North America (13.2%). Trade with Africa has increased rapidly since 1994 with South Africa running a surplus in the range of 5:1. In 1999 merchandise exports represented 86% (R148.9bn.) of total exports (merchandise plus net gold exports and excluding receipts for services).

Total net gold exports in 1999 amounted to R24.2bn. During 1999 the value of merchandise imports was R150.3bn.

Although a Trade, Co-operation and Development Agreement with the European Union was signed by the EU and South Africa in 1999 it is yet to be implemented because of objections raised by Greece and Italy regarding the use of the terms 'ouzo' and 'grappa'. The agreement will result in the abolition of tariffs on more than 90% of trade, currently worth in excess of R10bn. annually, between the 15 EU countries and South Africa within 12 years. Trade and development co-operation agreements worth R635m. were signed by South Africa and the EU in April 1999. EU grants made between 1995 and 1998 exceeded R3bn.

In Feb. 1998 South Africa was formally accepted into the Cairns Group, an association of agricultural exporting countries seeking fair and free trade in global agricultural markets.

South Africa has also concluded a free trade agreement with the Southern Africa Development Community (SADC) with which it ran a trade surplus of over R13bn. in 1998.

In Oct. 1998 a transshipment facility for containers opened at Kidatu, southwest of Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, providing a link between the 1,067 mm gauge railways of the southern part of Africa and the 1,000 mm gauge lines of the north. With the opening up of new markets for South Africa elsewhere in the continent, it will help to boost trade and facilitate the shipment of cargo to countries to the north.

COMMUNICATIONS

The public company Transnet Limited was established on 1 April 1990. Annually, Transnet handles 180m. tonnes of rail freight, 2.6m. tonnes of road freight, 2.4m. passengers by road, 185m. tonnes through the harbours; and 16,000m. litres are pumped through its petrol pipelines. The company flies 5.3m. domestic, international and regional passengers per year. In total, Transnet is worth R49.5bn. in fixed assets and has a workforce of some 95,000 employees.

Transnet consists of 7 transport businesses—Spoornet (rail transport), Portnet (harbours), Autonet (road transport), Petronet (liquid petroleum transport), SAA (air transport), Fast Forward (container shipments) and Metrorail (commuter rail services)—and a number of related and support businesses. For the financial year ended 31 March 2000 Transnet reported a profit of R779m. (compared to a net loss of R426m. for 1999).

Roads. There is a national road network of 8,000 km with plans to extend this to 20,000 km of primary roads. Toll-roads, which are serviced by 21 toll-plazas, cover about 1,000 km. The network includes 1,440 km of dual-carriage freeway, 292 km of single-carriage freeway and 4,401 km of single-carriage main road with unlimited access. In 1998 the total road network amounted to 534,131 km with 2,032 km of motorways. South Africa has the longest motorway network of any country in Africa. As at 28 Feb. 1998 there were 6.5m. registered motor vehicles, more than 3.8m. of which were motor cars. Minibus-taxis provide 65% of the 2.5bn. annual passenger trips in urban areas and a high percentage of rural and intercity transport. More than 480 taxi associations operate throughout the country. In 1997 there were 505,988 road accidents with 9,691 fatalities.

Rail. Metrorail is responsible for around 19% of all public transport carrying approximately 2m. passengers daily. It serves 473 stations with 2,400 train services. Commuter rail services operate on 2,228 km of electrified track (1,065 mm gauge) and have a rolling fleet of about 45,000. Operating assets to the value of R69m. are managed on behalf of the State. Metrorail has set aside R2.8bn. to upgrade its coaches over the next 15 years. Passenger-km travelled in 1998 came to 1.8bn. and freight tonne-km to 103.9bn.

Civil Aviation. Responsibility for civil aviation safety and security lies with the South African Civil Aviation Authority (SACAA). Airport and air traffic and navigation services were privatized in 1993. The Airports Company of SA (ACSA) owns and has responsibility for the planning, construction and operation of the 9 previously State-operated airports—Johannesburg, Cape Town and Durban international airports, and the airports at Kimberley, Port Elizabeth, Bloemfontein, George, East London and Upington. Around 15m. passengers use these airports every year. Johannesburg is expected to deal with 18m. passengers a year by 2005.

South African Airways (SAA), Comair, SA Express and SA Airlink operate scheduled international air services within Africa and to Europe, Latin America and the Middle and Far East. 13 independent operators provide internal flights which link up with the internal network of SAA, Comair and SA Express. Air services are also provided by Aero Zambia, Aeroflot, Aerolíneas Argentinas, Air Afrique, Air Austral, Air Botswana, Air France, Air Gabon, Air Madagascar, Air Malawi, Air Mauritius, Air Namibia, Air Seychelles, Air Tanzania, Air Zimbabwe, Airlink, Alitalia, American Airlines, Austrian Airlines, Balkan, British Airways, Cameroon Airways, Care Airlines, Cathay Pacific, Commercial Airways, Egyptair, El Al, Emirates, Ethiopian Airlines, Ghana Airways, Gulf Air, Iberia, Kenya Airways, LAM, Lesotho Airways, LTU, Lufthansa, Malaysia Airlines, Martin Air, Metavia Airlines, Northwest Airlines, Olympic Airways, QANTAS, Royal Air Maroc, Royal Swazi Airways, Sabena, SAS, Singapore Airlines, Swissair, TAAG, TAP, Uganda Airlines, United Airlines and Virgin Atlantic.

In 1998 the total number of departing passengers from South African airports was 8,810,873 (domestic, 6,199,214; international, 2,389,513; regional, 189,994; non-scheduled, 32,152).

Shipping. The South African Maritime Safety Authority (SAMSA) was established on 1 April 1998 as the authority responsible for ensuring the safety of life and property at sea and the prevention of sea pollution of the marine environment from ships. Portnet is the largest port authority in greater southern Africa, controlling 7 of the 16 biggest ports in the region. These are Richards Bay, Durban, East London, Port Elizabeth, Mossel Bay, Cape Town and Saldanha. The ports of Durban, Port Elizabeth and Cape Town provide large container terminals for deep-sea and coastal container traffic. East London has a small terminal to handle conventional and coaster feeder vessels carrying containers. Durban is the busiest port and the largest conduit for containerized cargo in southern Africa. It is responsible for more than 70% of South Africa's containerized traffic with the daily handling capacity of 3,500 containers. Saldanha Bay is the largest port on the west coast of Africa. Richards Bay Port, which handles bulk cargoes such as bituminous coal and anthracite, is 193 km north of Durban. It is the biggest port in South Africa and the world's largest bulk-coal terminal, handling 53% of the country's total tonnage of coal.

In 1998 the merchant fleet totalled 631,059,096 GRT. During 1998 the major ports handled a total of 187,008,889 tonnes of cargo, and a total of 13,559 ships' calls were registered.

Telecommunications. In world ranking South Africa comes 23rd in telecommunications development and 17th in Internet use. In July 2000 there were 1.8m. PCs and Internet users (42 per 1,000 population) and 150,000 fax machines. It has approximately 5.3m. installed telephones and 4.3m. installed exchange lines, representing 39% of total lines installed in Africa.

Telkom SA, the national operator, was awarded a 5-year licence in May 1997 giving the company the exclusive right to provide telecommunications services. It is required to install 2.8m. new lines, including 120,000 payphones in the 5 years to March 2002. Over the same period it must provide first-time telephone services for over 3,000 villages, install more than 20,000 new lines for priority customers such as schools and hospitals and replace around 1,200m. analogue lines with digital technology. The transmission network is almost wholly digital.

South Africa, with the operators Vodacom and MTN, is the fourth fastest-growing GSM (Global Systems for Mobile Communications) market in the world. It is currently worth R13bn. and will grow to around R20bn. by 2004. In 1999 the revenue generated by Vodacom and MTN was R5bn. and R4bn. respectively. In Dec. 2000 there were 7.06m. mobile phone subscribers with the potential by 2005 of 11m.-12m. users.

Postal Services. In the period 1995-99 the volume of standard mail items dropped by around 21% from 1,949m. to 1,540m. items. In 1999-2000 the Post Office processed 2,050m. mail items for delivery to 7.5m. delivery points. By March 2000 there were 2,588 postal outlets country-wide and 30 mail processing centres. South Africa has joined the Pan African Postal Union, a specialized agency of the OAU. The Post Office, with the Department of Communications, is involved in setting up Public Information Terminals (PIT). The installation of these Internet-linked kiosks throughout the country is aimed at giving everyone access to the Internet, government information and e-mail services.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The common law of the republic is the Roman-Dutch law—that is, the uncoded law of Holland as it was at the date of the cession of the Cape in 1806. The law of England as such is not recognized as authoritative, though by statute the principles of English law relating to evidence and to mercantile matters, e.g., companies, patents, trademarks, insolvency and the like, have been introduced. In shipping and insurance, English law is followed in the former Cape Province, and it has also largely influenced civil and criminal procedure throughout the republic. In all other matters, family relations, property, succession, contract, etc., Roman-Dutch law rules, English decisions being valued only so far as they agree therewith.

The Judicial system in South Africa is constituted as follows: (a) the Constitutional Court, consisting of a President, Deputy President and 9 other judges; (b) the Supreme Court of Appeal, consisting of a Chief Justice, a Deputy Chief Justice and the number of judges of appeal determined by an Act of Parliament. It is the highest court of appeal, except in constitutional matters; (c) the High Courts, including any high court of appeal that may be established by an Act of Parliament to hear appeals from the High Courts. The High Courts may decide any constitutional matter, except a matter that only the Constitutional Court may decide, or a matter which is assigned to another court of a status similar to a High Court by an Act of Parliament. The Judge President of a provincial division may divide the area under his jurisdiction into circuit districts. In each such district there shall be held at least twice in every year and at such times and places determined by the Judge President, a court which shall be presided over by a judge of the division in which that district is situated. Such a court is known as the circuit local division for the district in question and is deemed to be a local division. The judges hold office till they attain the age of 70 years. A judge is expected to be available to perform service for an aggregate of 3 months a year until the age of 75. No judge can be removed from office except by the President after the National Assembly (at least two-thirds support from its members) has called for such judge to be removed on the grounds of incapacity, incompetence or gross misconduct; (d) Magistrates' Courts; and (e) any other court established or recognized in terms of an Act of Parliament, including any court of a status similar to either the High Courts or the Magistrates' Courts. The Magistrates' Court and all other courts may decide any matter determined by an Act of Parliament but a court of a status lower than a High Court may not enquire into or rule on the constitutionality of any legislation or any conduct of the President.

The 9 provinces are further divided into 435 magisterial districts each with a magistrates' court having a prescribed civil and criminal jurisdiction. In 1998, 1,566 magistrates were appointed. From this court there is an appeal to the provincial division of the High Court and then to the Court of Appeal. Magistrates' convictions carrying above a prescribed limit are subject to automatic review by a judge. Magisterial districts have been grouped into 14 clusters headed by Chief Magistrates and in a few cases by Senior Magistrates. This system streamlined, simplified and provided uniform court management systems applicable throughout South Africa.

All criminal and civil cases are dealt with by judges (in the High Court) and magistrates (in the low court). Judges and magistrates are entitled to take judicial cognizance of customary (indigenous) laws and must, where relevant, apply them. A limited civil and criminal jurisdiction is conferred upon the courts of traditional leaders over his own tribe.

In 1998 there were 121 small claims courts, which have been introduced in a number of areas since 1984. These courts (where Commissioners preside) have jurisdiction only, limited by the quantum of damages and the nature of the claim.

The death penalty was abolished in June 1995. No executions have taken place since 1989.

The Land Claims Court, established under the Restitution of Land Rights Act of 1994, have jurisdiction throughout the Republic and have all such powers in relation to matters falling within its jurisdiction as are possessed by a High Court having jurisdiction in civil proceedings at the place where the land in question is situated, including the powers of a High Court, in relation to any contempt of court; and all the ancillary powers necessary or reasonably incidental to the performance of its functions, including the power to grant interlocutory orders and interdicts. The Courts have the power: to determine a right to restitution of any right in land accordance with this Act; to determine or approve compensation payable in respect of land owned by or in possession of a private person upon expropriation or acquisition of such land; to determine the person entitled to title to land; at the instance of any interested person and in its discretion, to grant a declaratory order on a question of law relating to matters in respect of which the Court has jurisdiction, notwithstanding that such person might not be able to claim any relief consequential upon the granting of such order; to determine whether compensation or any other consideration received by any person at the time of any dispossession of a right in land was just and equitable; to determine any matter involving the interpretation or application of this Act or the Land Reform (Labour Tenants) Act, 1996; to decide any constitutional matter in relation to this Act or the Land Reform (Labour Tenants) Acts, 1996; and to determine all other matters which require to be determined in terms of this Act.

The Labour Court established under the Labour Relations Act, 1995 is a superior court that has authority, inherent powers and standing, in relation to matters under its jurisdiction, equal to that which a court of a provincial division of the High Court has in relation to matters under its jurisdiction.

Spending on police, prisons and justice services amounted to R23.5bn. in 1999.

In 1999 there were 24,210 murders, a rate of 56.2 per 100,000 persons. In 1994 there had been 26,832 murders, representing a rate of 69.5 per 100,000 persons. South Africa has one of the highest murder rates in the world.

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 1997 was 142,410 (320 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. Almost 80% of the population in South Africa professes the Christian faith. Other major religious groups are the Hindus, Muslims and Jews. A sizeable minority of the population does not belong to any of the major religions but regard themselves as traditionalists or of no specific religious affiliation. Freedom of worship is guaranteed by the Constitution and official policy is one of non-interference in religious practices. In 1992 the Anglican Church of Southern Africa voted by 79% of votes cast for the ordination of women.

Education. The South African Schools Act, 1996 became effective on 1 Jan. 1997 and provides for: compulsory education for students between the ages of 7 and 15 years of age, or students reaching the ninth grade, whichever occurs first; 2 categories of schools, namely public schools and independent schools, and the establishment and maintenance of public schools on private property; conditions of admission of learners to public schools; governance and management of public schools, the election of governing bodies and their functions; funding of public schools. Curriculum 2005, the brand name of the new national curriculum framework for schools, is based on the concept of outcomes-based education (OBE), the focus being on what students should know and do. The new learning programmes are being introduced in phases.

In 2000–01 education was allocated a budget of R50.7bn. (5.7% of GDP and 21.0% of total government spending) with R4.8bn. allocated to universities, R1.8bn. to technikons, and R44.1bn. to college and school education. Around 81,609 students benefited from the Government's National Financial Aid Scheme (R443.5m.).

There are more than 12.5m. students in South Africa's education system; 26,833 schools and a sizeable and growing private school and college sector. Since Jan. 2000 pupils have been only allowed to fail 1 grade per learning phase. The phases are grades 1 to 3, grades 3 to 6, grades 6 to 9 and grades 10 to 12. There are 21 universities (352,739 students enrolled in 1998), 2 of which are mainly non-residential institutions offering distance tuition; and 15 technikons (195,194 students enrolled, 1998). During 1999 provincial education departments reached 300,000 Adult Basic Education and Training (ABET) students. Expenditure on ABET increased from R160m. in the 1995–96 financial year to R343m. in 1998–99.

According to the State of South Africa's Population Report 2000, 18.3% of the population over 20 years of age has had no schooling. The adult literacy rate in 1998 was 84.6% (85.4% for males and 83.9%, females). The female literacy rate is the highest in Africa.

Health. Some 40% of South Africans live in poverty and 75% of these live in rural areas where they are deprived of access to health services. The main core of the Government's health policy is eventually to provide health care that is affordable and accessible to all. During 1998 the Ministry of Health undertook a flying doctor programme and a telemedicine system. The flying doctor programme aims to make health services accessible to all South Africans, particularly in rural areas. The objective of the telemedicine system will be to deliver health care, tele-education and tele-care services over a distance in areas where the need is greatest. There are 28 functional telemedicine pilot sites in 6 provinces. Transnet's health-care train, known as Phelophepa (good health), offers a unique service, bringing accessible and affordable health-care facilities to rural communities. Some 229,805 patients had consulted the train by June 1999. Four provinces are visited each year. More than 1,400 final-year students have performed voluntary work on the train since 1994. Doctors train at the medical schools of 8 universities. There are 6,398 foreign-qualified doctors working in South Africa.

In 1999 the Health Profession Council of South Africa (HPCSA) had registered the following personnel: 29,180 doctors, including doctors working for the state, those in private practice and specialists; of 4,435 dentists, 377 dental and oral specialists, 856 oral hygienists and 506 dental therapists; approximately 43,500 supplementary health professionals, including 4,523 psychologists. In 1999, 831 qualified chiropractors, homoeopaths and allied health service practitioners were registered with the Chiropractors, Homoeopaths and Allied Health Service Professions Interim Council. In 1999, 10,205 pharmacists were registered with the South African Pharmacy Council. At 31 Dec. 1999 there were 173,961 registered and enrolled nurses and enrolled nursing auxiliaries.

A network of mobile clinics run by the Government form the main role of primary and preventive health care. Clinics are being built or expanded throughout the country. Since 1994, 506 full-time and 113 part-time clinics have been built, 252 existing clinics upgraded and 2,298 other clinics have had some upgrading or received new equipment. According to Statistics South Africa, there were 107,634 beds in public hospitals in 1998; 344 private hospitals in use; and 60 mining clinics and hospitals with 6,065 beds. By April 1999, 168 private medical schemes had been registered in terms of the provisions of the Medical Schemes Act, 1967.

In Oct. 1998 the first traditional hospital was opened in Mpumalanga—the Samuel Traditional Hospital. There are about 350,000 traditional healers in South Africa providing services to between 60% and 80% of their communities.

Approximately 4.7m. South Africans are HIV-infected, estimated to be the highest number in the world.

It is estimated that over 25% of the population is in need of some form of primary eye care.

Welfare. The welfare budget has increased by about R18.29bn. over the past 4 years. Of the total budget R16bn. was allocated to social security. Monthly benefits are paid to nearly 3m. beneficiaries at a cost of R1.4bn. per month. These means-tested benefits go to certain categories of the elderly, the disabled and families with children. The Child Support Grant replaced the State Maintenance Grant in April 1998. In Jan. 2000, 217,000 children received this grant of R100 per month, with an average of 20,000 children per month being added. The full implementation of this grant is intended to reach 3m. poor children.

More than R200m. was made available to the Department in 1999–2000 for poverty alleviation. The funds have been allocated to 1,933 provincial projects and 38 national projects.

The provision of social welfare service is based on a partnership between the private and public sectors. Most welfare services are rendered by private welfare organizations which are assisted financially by the state. It is estimated that there are up to 10,000 organizations with a welfare and development focus. There are approximately 5,500 organizations registered in terms of the Fund-raising Act, 1978. About half of these are registered as welfare organizations.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The Independent Communications Authority Act, 2000, announced in May 2000, paved the way for the merger of the South African Telecommunications Regulatory Authority (SATRA) and the Independent Broadcasting Authority (IBA). It allows for the establishment of a new regulator, the Independent Communications Authority of South Africa (ICASA).

The SA Broadcasting Corporation (SABC), the country's public broadcaster, provides 6 television channels in 11 languages. Four are free-to-air, namely SABC1, SABC2, SABC3 and Bop-TV, while Africa2Africa and SABC Africa are pay-television channels, broadcast by satellite.

There are more than 4m. licensed television households. About 50% of all programmes transmitted are produced in South Africa.

M-Net, the country's first private subscription television service, was launched in 1986. Today it has over 1.23m. subscribers in 41 countries across Africa. On 15 Nov. 1999 a new Afrikaans television channel—kykNET—was launched on M-Net's digital satellite television (DStv) service.

The White Paper on Broadcasting Policy, released in June 1998, provides for the extension of free-to-air, pay and regional television services. On 30 March 1998 the consortium Midi Television was awarded the first privately-owned free-to-air television licence.

SABC has 19 radio stations, attracting 20m. listeners daily. Its external service, launched in 1966 as Radio South Africa and now known as Channel Africa, broadcasts to Africa and the Indian Ocean Islands. It offers an all-African radio service providing programmes with a specifically African content. Channel Africa is in the process of commercialization and expansion, turning it into a commercial enterprise, with R28m. budgeted for this purpose. The UK's BBC World Service and the SABC announced details of a new working agreement between the 2 corporations in Oct. 1999.

The following private radio stations have been granted licences by the ICASA: Classic FM in Gauteng; Punt Geselsradio, an Afrikaans MW talk-radio station operating in Gauteng and the Western Cape; Cape Talk MW in the Western Cape; P4, a jazz station in Cape Town with a sister station in Durban; Kaya FM, in Gauteng, a multi-lingual youth radio station; Y-FM, broadcasting in Johannesburg in IsiZulu, Sesotho and English; Radio KFM; Radio Algoa; Radio Oranje; Highveld Stereo; Radio 702 in Gauteng; East Coast Radio; and Radio Jacaranda.

More than 80 community radio stations have been licensed since 1995. By the end of the 2000–01 financial year 36 will have been established country-wide. In Sept. 1999, 85% of the population was able to receive a television signal (colour by PAL).

Press. According to the latest survey by Freedom House, a Washington-based organization, South Africa's press freedom was ranked thirtieth from among 186 countries.

The major press groups are Independent Newspapers, Nasionale Media Bpk, CTP/Caxton and Times Media Limited (TML). Other important media players are Primedia, NAIL (New Africa Investments Limited) and Kagiso Media, the latter being a major player in the black empowerment drive in the media industry. The flagship publication of New Africa Media is the biggest daily in South Africa, Sowetan (circulation Jan.–June 2000, 209,855).

The only truly national newspapers are the 3 Sundays: Sunday Times (circulation, Jan.–June 2000, 504,845), Rapport (circulation, 340,023) and The Sunday Independent (circulation, 42,653). The Sunday World (circulation, 43,873), launched in March 1999, is distributed in Gauteng, Mpumalanga, Northern Province and North-West. Die Burger Saterdag (Cape Town) is the largest Afrikaans daily (circulation, 122,112).

There are 22 dailies and 10 weeklies. Almost 147 Print Media SA (PMSA) community press members or country newspapers, most of which are weekly tabloids, serve particular towns or districts in the country by covering local affairs and carrying local advertising. Most are published in English and Afrikaans. Newspapers appearing only in certain neighbourhoods, known as 'knockanddrops' or 'freebies' (distributed free of charge), have a guaranteed readership with advertising being their only source of income. In 1999 there were more than 80 such papers and about 3.3m. copies were distributed weekly.

There are about 300 consumer magazines and more than 500 trade, technical and professional publications. A total of 5,418 book titles were published in 31.35m. copies in 1995.

Tourism. South Africa has one of the fastest-growing tourist industries in the world. It has gone from a world ranking of fifty-fifth in 1990 to twenty-fifth in 1998, attracting more tourists than any other country in Africa. There was a total of 6,253,000 international visitors in 1999. Tourism is the fourth-largest industry, supporting some 700 hotels, 2,800 guest houses and bed-and-breakfast establishments, and 10,000 restaurants. It is the country's third largest foreign exchange earner and job creator. One in every 9 jobs is linked to tourism and some 740,000 jobs have been created by the tourism economy. It is projected that more than 1.2m. people will be employed (directly and indirectly) in tourism by 2010. The fastest-growing segment of tourism in South Africa is ecological tourism (ecotourism) which includes nature photography, bird watching, botanical studies, snorkelling, hiking and mountaineering.

Festivals. Best-known arts festivals: the Kleinkaroo Festival (Oudtshoorn, Western Cape), which has a strong Afrikaans component, is held in April; the Grahamstown Arts Festival in Eastern Cape province, is held in June/July; the Manguang African Cultural Festival (Macufe) is held in Sept. in Bloemfontein; and the Potchefstroom Arts Festival, in North-West province, is held in Oct.

Libraries. There are 2 national libraries (in Cape Town and Pretoria) and hundreds of public (municipal) libraries, special libraries, government libraries, and university and college libraries.

The Legal Deposit Act, 1997 came into effect in July 1998. There are now 5 places of legal deposit—the National Library of South Africa (Cape Town as well as Pretoria), the Library of Parliament, the Bloemfontein Public Library, the Natal Society Library and the National Film, Video and Sound Archives.

Theatre and Opera. The 4 regional performing arts councils are obliged to ensure that they become representative of the full diversity of South African culture. With the launch of the White Paper on Arts, Culture and Heritage in 1996, the performing arts councils were given 3 years to adjust to drastically decreased state funding. Currently, the performing arts receive 32% (R92.415m.) of the Arts and Culture budget, down from 67.7% in 1994. A national arts council (NAC), which is broadly representative of all South Africans, has been established to address the promotion and development of all South African art forms on a national level. Since 1998 over R45m. has been invested in a wide range of artistic disciplines and over 1,350 grants made to a diversity of organizations. 42 Community Arts Centres have been established throughout the country. The biggest theatres are the Artscape in Cape Town, the Playhouse Company in Durban and the Performing Arts Centre in Bloemfontein and the State Theatre in Pretoria.

Museums and Galleries. More than 300 of the approximately 1,000 museums in Africa are situated in South Africa. The newest national museum is the Robben Island Museum which includes the cell in which former President Nelson Mandela was imprisoned. In Feb. 1999, 29 properties, structures and sites were declared National Monuments. These include the Orlando West house where Nelson Mandela stayed before his arrest in 1962, the ruins of a fort in Knysna known as Thomson's Folly, and the Old Synagogue in Pretoria where the treason trial of Nelson Mandela, Walter Sisulu and Oliver Tambo was held in 1959.

The largest museums are situated in Johannesburg, Pretoria, Cape Town, Durban, Pietermaritzburg and Bloemfontein. Art galleries include: South African National Gallery, Cape Town; Johannesburg Art Gallery; Pretoria Art Museum; William Humphreys Art Gallery, Kimberley.

There are several open-air museums which show the black cultures of the country including Tsongakraal near Letsitele, Northern Province; the Ndebele Museum at Middelburg, Mpumalanga; the Bakhoni (Northern Sotho) Museum at Pietersburg, Northern Province; and the South Sotho Museum at Witsieshoek, Free State.

SOUTH AFRICAN PROVINCES

In 1994 the former provinces of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Orange Free State and the Transvaal, together with the former 'homelands' or 'TBVC countries' of Transkei, Bophuthatswana, Venda and Ciskei, were replaced by 9 new provinces. Transkei and Ciskei were integrated into Eastern Cape, Venda into Northern Province, and Bophuthatswana into Free State, Mpumalanga and North-West.

The administrative powers of the provincial governments in relation to the central government are set out in the 1999 Constitution after a revision of the original text demanded by the Constitutional Court in 1996.

EASTERN CAPE

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area is 169,580 sq. km and the population at the Oct. 1996 census was 6,302,525, the third largest population in South Africa. Minerals. Total output of mining and quarrying in 1999 was valued at R57m. with 7,154 persons employed.

Agriculture. There are around 6,000 commercial farms with an average area of 1,500 ha. Of this area only 7% is arable land with 45% not farmed at present owing to land ownership disputes in the former homelands (Transkei and Ciskei). Livestock accounts for 77% of commercial agricultural production; 18% comprises horticulture. Total value of agriculture, forestry and fishing output for 1999 was R2,063m.

Forestry. Forestry activities are found in the northeast area of the former Transkei, in Stutterheim and in the northwest of the province. In 1999 there were 169,484 ha of plantation forests.

Fisheries. There is a relatively small sea-fishing industry based on squid, sardines, hake, kinglip and crayfish. Aquaculture produces abalone for export to the Far East.

INDUSTRY

Manufacturing is based mainly in Port Elizabeth and East London with motor manufacturing as the prime industry. Wool, mohair and hides are an important area of the province's agro-industry. Value of manufacturing output in 1999 totalled R14,783m. with 97,035 persons employed.

Labour. As at Oct. 1999 the economically active population numbered 1,419,000, of whom 423,000 were unemployed (29.8%).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The modern Spanish state was founded in 1469 with the marriage of Isabel and Fernando to the crowns of Castile and Aragón. Under their joint reign Spain recovered Granada, the last Islamic territory in the Iberian peninsula and sponsored the modern discovery of America, both events in 1492. After 1700 the French Bourbon dynasty was enthroned, with Felipe V as its first king; the present monarch, Juan Carlos I, installed in 1975, is his direct descendant.

Queen Isabel II, who came to the throne in 1833, was deposed in 1868. The Cortes (Parliament) approved a new constitution and the deputies chose as the new king Amadeo I of the then reigning Italian dynasty of Savoy. Unable to adapt to Spanish politics, he abdicated on 11 Feb. 1873. The Cortes immediately proclaimed a republic. The first brief republican experience saw great instability. On 29 Dec. 1874 a coup restored the Bourbon monarchy, with Alfonso XII, the son of the exiled Queen Isabel II, as king. A general election took place early in 1876 and the new Cortes approved a constitution which was effective until 1923. During this period, known as the Restoration, Spain still had a backward economy and low standards of living. At the same time Spain was embroiled in external conflicts, with wars in northern Morocco and in the remaining colonies of Cuba and the Philippines. US intervention led to the cession of Philippines, Puerto Rico and Guam, and also of Cuba which formally became independent in 1901.

Spain was neutral in the First World War, leading to a boom in industry and trade. A new industrial working class was then emerging, amidst a climate of industrial unrest which also showed itself in opposition to conscription for the war in Morocco. In Sept. 1923 Gen. Primo de Rivera led a coup and abolished the 1876 constitution, closed down the Cortes and governed by decree until his resignation in Jan. 1930. An interim period followed until the municipal elections of 12 April 1931, which were won by a republican-socialist coalition in Madrid, provincial capitals and other urban areas. Two days later Alfonso XIII exiled himself and the republic was proclaimed a second time. An election in Feb. 1936 gave power to the Popular Front, a coalition of all left parties, including the then tiny Communist party. On 18 July 1936 the colonial army in northern Morocco, led by Gen. Francisco Franco, rebelled against the government. The rebellion was crushed in Madrid, Barcelona and Valencia but the rural regions were easily controlled by the rebels who received substantial help from Germany, Italy and Portugal. Franco's forces overcame all resistance and the war ended on 1 April 1939. As chief of state till his death on 20 Nov. 1975, Franco modelled his regime on those of the Axis countries. Nevertheless, Spain did not take part in the Second World War.

A nominal monarchy existed from 1947 but with a vacant throne until 1969 when the francoist state accepted the future succession in favour of Juan Carlos de Borbón, grandson of Alfonso XIII. Franco recognized the independence of Morocco in 1956. On 22 Nov. 1975, following Gen. Franco's death, Juan Carlos was proclaimed king. A referendum held in Dec. 1976 endorsed some key reforms making possible a free election on 15 June 1977. The elected bicameral Cortes drafted a new constitution which came into force on 29 Dec. 1978.

On 23 Feb. 1981 there was an attempted fascist coup, when for 18 hours the deputies of the lower house of Parliament and the Cabinet were held hostage.

In the Basque region terrorist activity by the separatist organization ETA has brought a reaction from the local population in the form of a strong peace movement. ETA announced an indefinite ceasefire in Sept. 1998. However, in Dec. 1999 the ceasefire was called off and ETA announced that it would restart its campaign of terror. In Jan. 2000 a car-bomb explosion in Madrid which killed a senior army officer signalled the resumption of the campaign.

¹Ceuta and Melilla gained limited autonomous status in 1994.

The capitals of the autonomous communities are: Andalusia: Seville; Aragón: Zaragoza (Saragossa); Asturias: Oviedo; Baleares: Palma de Mallorca; Basque Country: Vitoria; Canary Islands, dual capitals, Las Palmas and Santa Cruz de Tenerife; Cantabria: Santander; Castilla-La Mancha: Toledo; Castilla y León: Valladolid; Catalonia: Barcelona; Extremadura: Mérida; Galicia: Santiago de Compostela; Madrid: Madrid; Murcia: Murcia (but regional parliament in Cartagena); Navarra: Pamplona; La Rioja: Logroño; Valencian Community: Valencia.

The capitals of the provinces are the towns from which they take the name, except in the cases of Álava (capital, Vitoria), Guipúzcoa (San Sebastián) and Vizcaya (Bilbao).

The islands which form the Balearics include Majorca, Minorca, Ibiza and Formentera. Those which form the Canary Archipelago are divided into 2 provinces, under the name of their respective capitals: Santa Cruz de Tenerife and Las Palmas de Gran Canaria. The province of Santa Cruz de Tenerife is constituted by the islands of Tenerife, La Palma, Gomera and Hierro; that of Las Palmas by Gran Canaria, Lanzarote and Fuerteventura, with the small barren islands of Alegranza, Roque del Este, Roque del Oeste, Graciosa, Montaña Clara and Lobos.

Places under Spanish sovereignty in Africa (Alhucemas, Ceuta, Chafarinas, Melilla and Peñón de Vélez) constitute the 2 provinces of Ceuta and Melilla.

Madrid: The capital city of Spain with a population of 2.9m., Madrid is located on a plateau in the centre of the country on the River Manzanares. The hub of the country's transport network and financial dealings, Madrid cedes status as Spain's cultural centre to Barcelona despite possessing a proliferation of 17th and 18th century baroque and neo-classical buildings, famed art galleries and the national library.

Languages. The Constitution states that 'Castilian is the Spanish official language of the State', but also that 'All other Spanish languages will also be official in the corresponding Autonomous Communities'. At the last census (1991) Catalan (an official EU language since 1990) was spoken in Catalonia by 68% of people, Balears (66.9%), Valencian Community (51%, where it is frequently called Valencian), and in Aragón, a narrow strip close to the Catalan and Valencian Community boundaries. Galician, a language very close to Portuguese, was spoken by a majority of people in Galicia (91%); Basque by a significant and increasing minority in the Basque Country (26.3%), and by a small minority in northwest Navarra (12%). It is estimated that one-third of all Spaniards speaks one of the other 3 official languages as well as standard Castilian. In bilingual communities, both Castilian and the regional language are taught in schools and universities.

In 1998 Spain received 6,500 asylum applications, equivalent to 0.16 per 1,000 inhabitants.

CLIMATE

Most of Spain has a form of Mediterranean climate with mild, moist winters and hot, dry summers, but the northern coastal region has a moist, equable climate, with rainfall well distributed throughout the year, mild winters and warm summers, and less sunshine than the rest of Spain. The south, in particular Andalusia, is dry and prone to drought. At the Earth Summit in New York in 1997, the President of the Spanish government and Prime Minister, José María Aznar, highlighted the problem of desertification in Spain and the need to combat it.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Following the death of General Franco in 1975 and the transition to a democracy, the first democratic elections were held on 15 June 1977. A new Constitution was approved by referendum on 6 Dec. 1978, and came into force 29 Dec. 1978. It established a parliamentary monarchy.

The reigning king is Juan Carlos I, born 5 Jan. 1938. The eldest son of Don Juan, Conde de Barcelona, Juan Carlos was given precedence over his father as pretender to the Spanish throne in an agreement in 1954 between Don Juan and General Franco. Don Juan, who resigned his claims to the throne in May 1977, died on 1 April 1993. King (then Prince) Juan Carlos married, in 1962, Princess Sophia of Greece, daughter of the late King Paul of the Hellenes and Queen Frederika. Offspring: Elena, born 20 Dec. 1963, married 18 March 1995 Jaime de Marichalar; Cristina, born 13 June 1965, married 4 Oct. 1997 Iñaki Urdangarín; Felipe, Prince of Asturias, heir to the throne, born 30 Jan. 1968.

The King receives an allowance, part of which is taxable, approved by parliament each year. In 1997 it was 990m. pesetas. There is no formal court; the (private) Diputación de la Grandeza represents the interests of the aristocracy.

Legislative power is vested in the Cortes Generales, a bicameral parliament composed of the Congress of Deputies (lower house) and the Senate (upper house). The Congress of Deputies has not less than 300 nor more than 400 members (350 in the general election of 2000) elected in a proportional system under which electors choose between party lists of candidates in multi-member constituencies.

The Senate has 257 members of whom 208 are elected by a majority system: the 47 mainland provinces elect 4 senators each, regardless of population; the island provinces 5 (Balears, Las Palmas) or 6 (Santa Cruz de Tenerife); and Ceuta and Melilla, 2 senators each. To these are added 49 senators elected by the parliaments of the autonomous communities as regional representatives. Deputies and senators are elected by universal secret suffrage for 4-year terms. The Prime Minister is elected by the Congress of Deputies.

The Constitutional Court is empowered to solve conflicts between the State and the Autonomous Communities; to determine if legislation passed by the Cortes is contrary to the Constitution; and to protect the constitutional rights of individuals violated by any authority. Its 12 members are appointed by the monarch: 4 on the proposal of the Congress of Deputies; 4 on the proposal of the Senate; 2 on the proposal of the General Council of the Judicial Power (see under JUSTICE, below); and 2 on the proposal of the cabinet. It has a 9-year term, with a third of the membership being renewed every 3 years.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 9 months. Civilian service may be offered as an alternative. Recruits to the national police are exempt from conscription. Since 1989 women have been accepted in all sections of the armed forces. In 1996 the government began the phased abolition of conscription (starting with males born in 1984). By 2002 the armed forces are set to be fully professional.

In 1999 defence expenditure totalled US$7,263m. (US$185 per capita), representing 1·3% of GDP.

Army. A Rapid Reaction Force is formed from the Spanish Legion and the airborne and air-portable brigades. There is also an Army Aviation Brigade consisting of 170 helicopters (40 attack).

These are geographically oriented following a reorganization in 1991 and comprise Central Air Command, Straits Air Command, Eastern Air Command and Air Command of the Canaries.

There were 208 combat aircraft in 1999 including 87 EF/A-18s, 35 F-5Bs and 65 Mirage F-1s.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Spain is a member of the UN, WTO, the Council of Europe, NATO, OECD, WEU, the EU, OSCE, CERN, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank and the Antarctic Treaty, and is a signatory to the Schengen Accord, which abolishes border controls between Spain, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal and Sweden.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for an estimated 3% of GDP in 1997, industry 33% and services 63%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Spain ranked 20th in the world in 2000 in a survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 7.0 out of 10 in the annual index.

Policy. A privatization programme has led to the selling of profitable state concerns but loss makers such as the Iberian airline absorb a disproportionate amount of public money. Privatization proceeds between 1992 and 1998 amounted to US$36bn.

Performance. The OECD Economic Survey of Jan. 2000 reports: 'Spain is enjoying the third year of strong growth.' Interest rates eased considerably prior to entry, boosting economic activity in 1998 and 1999, while moderate wage claims and progress in reforming the labour market have bolstered job creation. Inflation has slowed to historically low levels, though it has remained above the euro average. The good performance has also been underpinned by important progress in critical areas of structural reform. The privatization process, one of the most ambitious in the OECD, has been further stepped up... As a result of sustained growth, Spain's per capita GDP has come closer to the EU average. However, despite a sharp decline, the unemployment rate still remains the highest in the OECD.'

Real GDP growth in 1998 was 4.0%, followed by growth of 3.7% in 1999 and a forecast for 2000 of 4.3%, potentially Spain's highest growth since the late 1980s.

Total GDP (1999): US$596.7bn. Government debt (1996, % of GDP): 69.5%. Foreign debt (1995, in US$1): 277,500m.

Budget. A Convergence Plan covering 1997–2000 envisaged an annual GDP growth of 3.2%, a reduction of public debt to 1.6% of GDP, the limitation of inflation to below 2.5%, and the creation of 1m. jobs by deregulating and increasing the flexibility of the economy and redistributing taxes. Government expenditure (1996, % of GDP): 43.1% (1997 estimate: 41.6%). Spain's current account balance in 1998 was US$–1.1bn (US$2.5bn. in 1997).

Financial assets	109,000	Financial investments	1,048,000

VAT is normally 16%, with a rate of 7% on certain services (catering and hospitality), and 4% on basic foodstuffs.

Currency. On 1 Jan. 1999 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency in Spain; irrevocable conversion rate 166.386 pesetas to 1 euro. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, will not be in circulation until 1 Jan. 2002—until then the national currency will be used for payment in cash. There will be 7 euro notes in different colours and sizes denominated in 500, 200, 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5 euros, and 8 coins denominated in 2 and 1 euros, then 50, 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 cents. Even though notes and coins will not be introduced until 1 Jan. 2002 the euro can be used in banking; by means of cheques, travellers' cheques, bank transfers, credit cards and electronic purses. Banking will be possible in both euros and pesetas until the peseta is withdrawn from circulation—which must be by 1 July 2002 and is scheduled for 28 Feb. 2002.

The peseta is notionally divided into 100 céntimos, though they have not been in use since 1984. In Feb. 1998 foreign exchange reserves were US$65,773m. and in Jan. 2000 gold reserves were 16.83m. troy oz. Inflation in 1998 was 1.8%, rising in 1999 to 2.2%. Total money supply in Feb. 1998 was 23,491bn. pesetas.

Banking and Finance. The central bank is the Bank of Spain (Governor, Jaime Caruana) which gained autonomy under an ordinance of 1994. Its Governor is appointed for a 6-year term. The Banking Corporation of Spain, Argentaria, groups together the shares of all state-owned banks, and competes in the financial market with private banks. In 1993 the government sold 49.9% of the capital of Argentaria; the remainder in 2 flotations ending on 13 Feb. 1998.

Spanish banking is dominated by 2 main banks—BSCH (Banco Santander Central Hispano) and BBVA (Banco Bilbao Vizcaya Argentaria). In Sept. 1999 BSCH had assets of 40.7trn. pesetas (US$260.7bn.) and BBVA 37.7trn. pesetas (US$241.4bn.).

There are stock exchanges in Madrid, Barcelona, Bilbao and Valencia.

Weights and Measures. The metric system was introduced in 1859.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 43m. kW in 1997. The total electricity output in 1998 amounted to 179.47bn. kWh, of which 19% was hydro-electric, 31% nuclear, and 50% other (carbon, natural gas, petroleum). Consumption per capita in 1997 was 4,274 kWh.

In Oct. 2000 Endesa SA and Iberdrola SA, the country's 2 largest electricity companies, announced merger plans. The new company, Endesa Iberdrola SA, would be in charge of 80% of Spain's electricity output. The Spanish government aims to have one of the most competitive and open power markets in the EU by 2003.

Oil and Gas. Spain is heavily dependent on imported oil; Mexico is its largest supplier. Crude oil production (1996), 554,000 tonnes.

The government sold its remaining stake in the oil, gas and chemicals group Repsol in 1997. Natural gas production (1996) totalled 596m. cu. metres. Efforts are being made to increase consumption; on 1 Nov. 1996 Spain opened the Algerian gas link (Maghreb-Europe Pipeline), which was expected to supply 6,200m. cu. metres by 2000.

Wind. Spain is one of the world's largest wind-power producers, with an installed capacity of 1,722 MW at the end of 1999.

Minerals. Spain has a relatively wide range of minerals; the mining sector accounted for 1% of GDP in 1994. Coal production (1996), 13.61m. tonnes; other principal minerals (1992, in 1,000 tonnes): anthracite, 6,177; lignite (1996), 13,679; salt (1995), 4,776; iron ore (1993), 1,166; potassium salts, 594; pyrites, 406; zinc, 205; fluorspar (1997), 120; lead, 30; (1992, in tonnes) uranium, 862; tin, 7. In 1995 a large mercury deposit was found in southern Spain which could raise mercury levels to within a quarter of proven world reserves. Gold production, 1997, 1,824 kg.

Agriculture. There were 1,384,000 farms in Spain in 1998. Agriculture employed about 9.3% of the workforce in 1998. It accounts for 15.8% of exports and 15.6% of imports.

There were 14.34m. ha of arable land in 1997 and 4.82m. ha of permanent crops. There were (1997) 841,900 tractors, 280,989 motor ploughs (1992) and 49,750 harvesters in use.

Spain has more land dedicated to the grape than any other country in the world and is ranked third among wine producers (behind Italy and France). Wine exports increased in value by nearly 600% from 1991-97. Total export receipts in 1996 totalled some £600m. A large part of Spain's output goes to Italy for bottling. Production of wine (1998), 2,960,000 tonnes; of grapes, 4,842,000 tonnes.

The area planted with onions in 1998 was 24,000 ha, yielding 985,000 tonnes; with tomatoes, 60,000 ha, 3,554,000 tonnes.

In fruit, Spain contributes a fifth of EU total harvest, and more than half of all citrus fruits. Fruit production (1998, in tonnes): oranges and mandarins, 2,403,000; melons and watermelons, 1,766,000; tangerines, mandarins and satsumas, 1,737,000; peaches and nectarines, 888,000; apples, 726,000; lemons and limes, 688,000; pears, 561,000; bananas, 410,000.

Production of olives, 1998, 3,564,000 tonnes; olive oil (1998), 777,000 tonnes. Spain is the world's leading producer both of olives and olive oil. EU policy to reform the complex aid system for olive oil (based on hand-outs per tree rather than oil production) is strongly opposed in all 5 EU olive oil-producing countries, nowhere more than Spain which, in Andalusia, has the world's largest producing zone. In 1997 Spain's olive growers marched on Madrid in protest over the reforms, which have provoked fear of plantation neglect and loss of employment.

Other important products are esparto, flax, tobacco, hemp and pulse. Seed cotton production (1998), 345,000 tonnes; cottonseed production, 160,000 tonnes.

Livestock (1998): cattle, 5.84m.; sheep, 24.54m.; goats, 2.89m.; pigs, 19.35m.; chickens, 127.0m.; horses, 0.26m; asses and mules, 0.15m. Livestock density per 100 ha is among the lowest in the EU. Livestock products (1998, in 1,000 tonnes): pork, bacon and ham, 2,524; beef and veal, 550; mutton and lamb, 237; poultry meat, 910; milk (1997), 6,116; cheese, 160; eggs, 590.

Forestry. In 1995 the area under forests was 8·39m. ha, or 16·8% of the total land area. In 1998 timber production was 15·63m. cu. metres.

Environment. In 1996 Spain's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 5·9 tonnes per capita according to the World Bank Atlas.

Fisheries. Spain is the second largest fishing country in the EU after Denmark; it is also the EU's leading importer of fishery commodities. Fishing vessels had a total tonnage of 524,602 tonnes in 1995 (596,441 GRT in 1994); fleets have been gradually reduced from 20,558 boats in 1991 to 18,091 in 1996. Total catch in 1998 amounted to approximately 1,106,600 tonnes, almost exclusively sea fish.

INDUSTRY

According to the Financial Times Survey (FT 500) published in May 2000, the largest companies in Spain in April 2000 were Telefónica (market capitalization of US$76,128·3m.), BSCH (market capitalization of US$43,270·9m.) and BBV Argentaria (market capitalization of US$42,135·5m.).

Industrial products (1993, in tonnes): sulphuric acid (1997), 2·82m.; nitrogenous fertilizers, 642,000; plastics, 2·7m.; paper and paperboard (1998), 4m.; cement (1998), 31·08m.; steel (1999), 14·9m.

The number of vehicles manufactured in 1997 was 2,531,000. In 1997, 1·96m. refrigerators, 2·6m. cookers, hotplates and microwaves, and 1·53m. washing machines, dishwashers and clothes driers were manufactured; number of TV sets (1995), 5·39m. 2,278·3m. litres of mineral water were produced in 1997; and 2,478·6m. litres of beer. There are also important toy and shoe industries.

Labour. The economically active population numbered 16·26m. in 1998 (16·03m. in 1996). Of these, 13·20m. were employed: 1·06m. in agriculture and fishing, 2·71m. in industry, 1·31m. in construction and 8·13m. in trade, transport and other public and personal services. Employment rose from 11·7m. in 1994 to 14·6m. in 2000. Post-Franco legislation brought radical changes to the labour market, including the legalization in 1984 of fixed-term contracts. A third of Spain's wage earners were on temporary contracts by 1998. The monthly minimum wage for adults (1998) was 68,040 pesetas; the average monthly wage for workers in industry and services was 190,500 pesetas (1,331 pesetas an hour); average hourly earnings increased by 2·6% in 1998. The average working week in 1996 was 40·6 hours. The retirement age is 65 years. In 1999 part-time work accounted for less than 8% of all employment in Spain—the lowest percentage in any major industrialized country.

In terms of unemployment, Spain has the highest rate among developed countries. After reaching a peak of nearly 25% in 1994, the rate dropped to 15·9% in 1999, the lowest rate since 1991. The unemployment rate among women is double that among men. Between 1996 and early 2000 Spain created as many new jobs as were created in the rest of the EU put together—the number of people in employment has risen by 15% since José María Aznar became Prime Minister in 1996. In spite of the high unemployment rate, by 2000 there were labour shortages in agriculture and construction, as a result of which the government reached an agreement with Morocco to import temporary contract labour.

Between 1989 and 1998 strikes cost Spain an average of 346 days per 1,000 employees a year, compared to the EU average of 85 per 1,000. Spain's figure was the highest in the EU.

Trade Unions. The Constitution guarantees the establishment and activities of trade unions provided they have a democratic structure. The most important trade unions are Unión General de Trabajadores (UGT) and Comisiones Obreras (CO). In Jan. 1997 the UGT and CO and employers' associations signed an agreement to be in force until 2000 providing for compulsory mediation before strike action; in April, employers' associations and trade unions reached an agreement covering 1997–2000 to combat job insecurity and reform collective bargaining. A National Employment Committee was subsequently set up to oversee the workings of the agreement.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1997 the total length of highways and roads was 346,858 km; the main network comprised 9,063 km of motorways, 23,397 km of highways/national roads and 139,398 km of secondary roads. 99% of all roads in Spain were paved in 1997. Travel by road accounted for 90.6% of internal passenger traffic in 1995; and for 77.24% of freight. SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered by Tribunals and Courts, which jointly form the Judicial Power. Judges and magistrates cannot be removed, suspended or transferred except as set forth by law. The Constitution of 1978 established the General Council of the Judicial Power, consisting of a President and 20 magistrates, judges, attorneys and lawyers, governing the Judicial Power in full independence from the state's legislative and executive organs. Its members are appointed by the Cortes Generales. Its President is that of the Supreme Court (Tribunal Supremo), who is appointed by the monarch on the proposal of the General Council of the Judicial.

The Judicature is composed of the Supreme Court; 17 Higher Courts of Justice, 1 for each autonomous community; 52 Provincial High Courts; Courts of First Instance; Courts of Judicial Proceedings, not passing sentences; and Penal Courts, passing sentences.

The Supreme Court consists of a President, and various judges distributed among 7 chambers: 1 for civil matters, 3 for administrative purposes, 1 for criminal trials, 1 for social matters and 1 for military cases. The Supreme Court has disciplinary faculties; is court of appeal in all criminal trials; for administrative purposes decides in first and second instance disputes arising between private individuals and the State; and in social matters makes final decisions.

A new penal code came into force in May 1996, replacing the code of 1848. It provides for a maximum of 30 years imprisonment in specified exceptional cases, with a normal maximum of 20 years. Sanctions with a rehabilitative intent include fines adjusted to means, community service and weekend imprisonment. The death penalty was abolished by the 1978 Constitution. The prison population in 1997 was 42,827 (110 per 100,000 of national population); 110,844 criminal sentences were passed in 1996.

A juvenile criminal law of 1995 lays emphasis on rehabilitation. It raised the age of responsibility from 12 to 14 years. Criminal conduct on the part of children under 14 is a matter for legal protection and custody. 14- and 15-year-olds are classified as 'minors'; 16- and 17-year-olds as 'young persons'; and the legal majority for criminal offences is set at 18 years. Persons up to the age of 21 may, at the courts' discretion, be dealt with as juveniles.

A jury system commenced operating in Nov. 1995 in criminal cases (first trials in May 1996). Juries consist of 9 members.

The Audiencia Nacional deals with terrorism, monetary offences and drug-trafficking where more than 1 province is involved. Its president is appointed by the General Council of the Judicial Power.

Primary and secondary levels of education are now compulsory and free. Religious instruction is optional.

In Sept. 1997 a joint declaration with trade unions, parents' and schools' associations was signed in support of a new finance law guaranteeing that spending on education will reach 6% of GDP within 5 years, thus protecting it from changes in the political sphere. In 1996 expenditure on education came to 5.0% of GNP and 11.0% of total government spending.

A new compulsory secondary education programme has replaced the Basic General Education programme which was in force since 1970. In addition, university entrance exams underwent reform in 1997, resulting in greater emphasis now being placed on the teaching of Humanities at secondary level.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In the 18th century the central kingdom, Kandy, was the only surviving independent state on the island of Ceylon. The Dutch, who had obtained their first coastal possessions in 1636, had driven out the Portuguese to become the dominant power in the island. In 1796 the British East India Company sent a naval force to Ceylon (as the British then called it). The Dutch surrendered their possessions, which left the British in control of the maritime areas surrounding Kandy. These areas were at first attached to the Madras Presidency of India but in 1802 they were constituted a separate colony under the Crown. Once the British began to develop their new territory they came to see Kandy as a threat. The Kandyan Convention of 1815 annexed Kandy to British Ceylon while recognizing most of the traditional rights of the chiefs. However, in 1817 the chiefs rebelled. The rebellion was suppressed and the rights established by the Convention were abolished.

Ceylon was then united for the first time since the 12th century. The British built up a plantation economy. Coffee was dominant until an outbreak of Hoemilia vastatrix fungus destroyed the plants in 1870. Spices, cocoa and rice all followed but tea became the main cash crop after successful experiments in the 1880s. Foreign rule served to subdue the traditional hostility between northern Tamils and southern Sinhalese. The Ceylon National Congress, formed in 1919, contained both Sinhalese and Ceylon Tamil groups. (The Indian Tamils brought in as a labour force for the tea estates were a separate community.) Tamil national feeling, however, was expressed over the issue of the use of Tamil languages in schools. As early as 1931 a general election took place under universal suffrage, just 2 years after the first one in the UK. On 4 Feb. 1948 Ceylon became a Dominion of the Commonwealth. In 1956 Solomon Bandaranaike became prime minister at the head of the People's United Front, advocating neutral foreign policy and the promotion of Sinhalese national culture at home. In Sept. 1959 he was murdered; his widow Sirimavo Bandaranaike succeeded him in July 1960 at the head of an increasingly socialist government. In May 1972 Ceylon became a republic and adopted the name Sri Lanka. In July 1977 the United National Party (dominant until 1956) returned to power and in 1978 a new constitution set up a presidential system. The problem of communal unrest remained unsolved and Tamil separatists were active. In 1983 the Tamil United Liberation Front members of parliament were asked to renounce their objective for a separate Tamil state in the north and the east of the country. They refused and withdrew from parliament. Militant Tamils then began armed action which developed into civil war. A state of emergency ended on 11 Jan. 1989, but violence continued.

President Ranasinghe Premadasa was assassinated on 1 May 1993. A ceasefire was signed on 3 Jan. 1995, but fighting broke out again in April. The 'Liberation Tigers of the Tamil Eelam' stronghold of Jaffna in the far north of the country was captured by government forces in Dec. 1995 and by mid-1997 was under government control. In April 2000 the Tamil Tigers captured a military garrison at Elephant Pass, the isthmus that links Jaffna to the rest of Sri Lanka, increasing the possibility that they might re-take the Jaffna peninsula. An estimated 61,000 people have died since the Tamil Tiger rebels began their fight for a separate homeland.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Sri Lanka is an island in the Indian Ocean, south of the Indian peninsula from which it is separated by the Palk Strait. On 28 June 1974 the frontier between India and Sri Lanka in the Palk Strait was redefined, giving to Sri Lanka the island of Kachchativu.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1821 the area that is now Sudan was conquered by the Egyptians. In 1881 Muhammad Ahmad, proclaiming himself the Mahdi, led an uprising and gained control until, in 1899, an Anglo-Egyptian army defeated the Mahdi and established an Anglo-Egyptian condominium.

On 1 Jan. 1956 Sudan was proclaimed a sovereign independent republic. In 1958 a coup led to a military government until the end of 1964 when a civilian government was re-established. The government was faced with constant difficulties from the southern provinces which considered themselves dominated by the north. Rebellions began in 1965. On 25 May 1969 the government was taken over by a 10-man Revolutionary Council. The Council was dissolved in 1972, legislative power was placed with a National Assembly, an elected body, and some measure of self-government was granted to the southern provinces. However, discontent continued and in April 1985 a Military Council was set up prior to the promised re-establishment of civilian rule. Elections were held, although they were suspended in parts of the southern provinces, in April 1986. On 30 June 1989 Brig.-Gen. (later Lieut.-Gen.) Omar Hassan Ahmad al-Bashir overthrew the civilian government in a military coup.

The rebel Sudan People's Liberation Army (SPLA), consisting of non-Muslim southerners, maintains guerrilla activities in the south while the National Democratic Alliance (NDA), northern Muslims opposed to the ruling National Islamic Front, and non-Muslim southerners of the SPLA fight on in the north. Fighting also erupted in Jan. 1997 along the border with Ethiopia. On 9 July 1997 at a meeting attended by representatives of Djibouti, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Kenya and Uganda the Sudanese government accepted a 'Declaration of Principles' as a framework for negotiations to end the civil war, including the separation of state and religion and self-determination for the Christian and animist south of Sudan. After 17 years Sudan's civil war has killed more than 1·9m. people and reduced the south to a level barely above subsistence. In Dec. 1999 President al-Bashir dissolved the National Assembly, declaring a state of national emergency.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Sudan is bounded in the north by Egypt, northeast by the Red Sea, east by Eritrea and Ethiopia, south by Kenya, Uganda and the Democratic Republic of the Congo, west by the Central African Republic and Chad, and northwest by Libya. Its area is 967,500 sq. miles (2,505,815 sq. km). Population estimate (2000), 29·82m., giving a density of 11·9 per sq. km. In 1998, 65·8% of the population were rural.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 36·85m.

In 1994 the former 9 regions were subdivided to form 26 federal states as follows:

Former region

Khartoum
Bahr al-Ghazal
Central Darfur
Eastern Equatoria
Kurdufan
Northern Upper Nile

New states

Khartoum
Western Bahr al-Ghazal; Northern Bahr al-Ghazal; Warab
Gezira; White Nile; Sinnar; Blue Nile
Northern Darfur; Southern Darfur; Western Darfur
Red Sea; Gedaref; Kassala
Eastern Equatoria; Western Equatoria; Bahr al-Jabal
Northern Kurdufan; Southern Kurdufan; Western Kurdufan
Nile; Northern State
Upper Nile; Unity State; Jonglei; Buheyrat

The capital, Khartoum, had a population of 2,628,000 in 1999. Other major cities, with 1993 populations, are Port Sudan (305,385), Kassala (234,270), Nyala (228,778), al-Obeid (228,096), Wadi Medani (218,714), al-Qadarif (189,384).

The northern and central thirds of the country are populated by Arab and Nubian peoples, while the southern third is inhabited by Nilotic and Bantu peoples. Sudan has more internally displaced people (4m. in 2000) than any other country.

Arabic, the official language, is spoken by 60% of inhabitants. English is the second language.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 births, 1,323,000; deaths, 365,000. Rates, 1997 estimates (per 1,000 population); births, 40·6; deaths, 11·2. Infant mortality, 1998 (per 1,000 live births), 73. Expectation of life in 1998 was 56·8 years for females and 54·0 for males. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·0% per annum. Fertility rate, 1999, 4·5 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Lying wholly within the tropics, the country has a continental climate and only the Red Sea coast experiences maritime influences. Temperatures are generally high for most of the year, with May and June the hottest months. Winters are virtually cloudless and night temperatures are consequently cool. Summer is the rainy season inland, with amounts increasing from north to south, but the northern areas are virtually a desert region. On the Red Sea coast, most rain falls in winter. Khartoum, Jan. 64°F (18·0°C), July 89°F (31·7°C). Annual rainfall 6" (157 mm). Juba, Jan. 83°F (28·3°C), July 78°F (25·6°C). Annual rainfall 39" (968 mm). CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution was suspended after the 1989 coup and a 12-member Revolutionary Council then ruled. A 300-member Provisional National Assembly was appointed in Feb. 1992 as a transitional legislature pending elections. These were held in March 1996. The President is elected for a 5-year term by the people. The National Assembly (Majlis Watani), currently suspended, normally has 400 members, 275 of whom are directly elected for 4 years in single-seat constituencies, 125 indirectly elected by national conference.

On 26 May 1998 President Omar Hassan Ahmad al-Bashir approved a new constitution. Notably this lifted the ban on opposition political parties, though the government continued to monitor and control criticism until the constitution legally came into effect.

National Anthem. 'Nahnu Jundullah, Jundu Al-Watlan' ('We are the defenders of our homeland, blessed by Allah'); words by A. M. Salih, tune by A. Murjan.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held from 13–22 Dec. 2000. President Omar Hassan Ahmed al-Bashir was re-elected by 86·5% of votes cast, with his nearest rival, former president Gaafar Nimeiry, gaining 9·6%. The main opposition groups and most of the electorate boycotted the polls.

At the National Assembly elections held at the same time the ruling National Congress won 355 of the 360 seats.

The law administered is ‘justice, equity and good conscience’ in all cases where there is no special enactment. Procedure is governed by the Civil Justice Ordinance.

Justice for the Muslim population has always been administered by the Islamic law courts, which form the Sharia Divisions of the Court of Appeal, High Courts and Kadis Courts; President of the Sharia Division is the Grand Kadi. KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first Europeans to reach the area were the Spanish in 1499 but it was the British who established a colony in 1650. At the peace of Breda (1667), Suriname was assigned to the Netherlands in exchange for the colony of New Netherland in North America. Suriname was twice in British possession during the Napoleonic Wars, in 1799–1802 and 1804–16, when it was returned to the Netherlands.

On 25 Nov. 1975 Suriname gained full independence. On 25 Feb. 1980 the government was ousted in a coup and a National Military Council (NMC) established. A further coup on 13 Aug. replaced several members of the NMC and the State President. Other attempted coups took place in 1981 and 1982, with the NMC retaining control. In Oct. 1987 a new constitution was approved by referendum. Following elections in Nov. Suriname returned to democracy in Jan. 1988 but on 24 Dec. 1990 a further military coup deposed the government. There was a peace agreement with rebel groups in Aug. 1992 and elections were held in May 1996.

Governor of the Transvaal administered the territory. Swaziland became independent on 6 Sept. 1968. A state of emergency imposed in 1973 is still in force. On 25 April 1986 King Mswati III was installed as King of Swaziland.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Sweden was organized as an independent unified state in the 10th century when the Swedes in the north of the country and the Goths in the south were united by Olof. Finland was acquired in the 13th century. In the 14th century Sweden was joined with Norway and Denmark in the Kalmar Union; however, under Gustavus Vasa Sweden regained her independence in 1523. Under Gustavus Adolphus (1611–32) Sweden became a first rank military power and, at the close of the Thirty Years War in 1648, was in possession of Pomerania and of extensive territories on the eastern shores of the Baltic. But war with Russia and her allies in the early 18th century ended disastrously for Sweden. By the treaty of Nystad (1721) Sweden lost her Baltic empire. In 1810 the French marshal, Bernadotte, was made crown prince. With the fall of Napoleon, Norway was taken from Denmark and attached to Sweden. Bernadotte became King in 1818. Sweden became a constitutional monarchy in 1809, in which year she also ceded Finland to Russia. Norway became independent in 1905. Sweden remained neutral during the two world wars of 1914–18 and 1939–45.

From 1932 to 1976 Sweden was governed by the Social Democratic Party which set the model for welfare reform, combined with rapid economic growth. But high taxation brought a reaction in the 1970s when the Centre Party (representing chiefly small farmers and traders) and the Conservatives staged a comeback which brought them to power in coalition with the Liberal Party in 1976. However, in 1981 the Social Democrat leader, Olof Palme, became prime minister with support from the Communist Party. On 28 Feb. 1986 Olof Palme was assassinated in Stockholm by unknown assailants. In 1991 a Conservative-led coalition took over the government at a time of recession. Austerity measures helped in the revival of the Social Democrats who returned to power in 1994 but with a commitment to economic stringency. Although the Social Democrats won the 1998 election, they saw their support fall to its lowest level since the First World War.

The remaining 39 seats constitute a nationwide pool intended to give absolute proportionality to parties that receive at least 4% of the votes. A party receiving less than 4% of the votes in the country is, however, entitled to participate in the distribution of seats in a constituency, if it has obtained at least 12% of the votes cast there.

A parliament, the Sameting, was instituted for the Sami (Lapps) in 1993.

DEFENCE

The Supreme Commander is, under the government, in command of the 3 services. The Supreme Commander is assisted by the Swedish Armed Forces HQ.

The conscription system provides of 7½–18 months of military service for males. Females have the possibility to serve on a voluntary basis.

In 2000 military expenditure totalled US$4.8bn. (US$541 per capita), representing 2.2% of GDP. Sweden's national security policy is currently undergoing a shift in emphasis. Beginning with the decommissioning of obsolete units and structures, the main thrust of policy is the creation of contingency forces adaptable to a variety of situations.

The government stressed that Sweden's membership of the EU (in 1995) did not imply any change in Sweden's traditional policy of non-participation in military alliances, with the option of staying neutral in the event of war in its vicinity.

Sweden has modern air raid shelters with capacity for some 7m. people. Since this falls short of providing protection for the whole population, evacuation and relocation operations would be necessary in the event of war.

Preparations for 'psychological defence' in wartime have also been made by the National Board of Psychological Defence, whose main task is to safeguard the free, uninterrupted transmission of news. This is regarded as the best possible antidote against enemy propaganda, disinformation and rumour-mongering of the kind that can be expected in times of war.

Army. The Army consists of 1 divisional HQ and attached units, and 6 army brigade commands. Army strength, Jan. 2001, 21,240 (12,040 conscripts). The Army can mobilize a reserve of 225,000 of whom 80,000 are Home Guard and 11,000 reservists.

The Home Guard is part of the army. Its main task is to protect important local installations against sabotage.

Navy. The Navy has 1 naval command, 2 naval bases and 2 amphibious regiments. The coastal defences operate as an independent branch within the Navy.

The personnel of the Navy in Jan. 2001 totalled 7,940 (active manpower, including 4,140 conscripts). Strength available for mobilization, 20,000 (includes 3,950 reservists).

Air Force. The Air Force consists of 1 Air Command and 8 squadrons.

Strength (Jan. 2001) 7,900 (2,590 conscripts), plus 17,000 available for mobilization (including 1,850 reservists).

During peacetime all the helicopters of the Army, Navy and Air Force are organized into a detached organization directly under the Joint Forces Command.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Sweden is a member of the UN, WTO, NATO Partnership for Peace, BIS, OECD, EU, Council of Europe, OSCE, CERN, Nordic Council, Council of the Baltic Sea States, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty. Sweden is a signatory to the Schengen Accord, which abolishes border controls between Sweden, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal and Spain.

ECONOMY

Services accounted for 67% of GDP in 1997, industry 31% and agriculture 2%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Sweden ranked equal 3rd in the world in 2000 in a survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 9.4 out of 10 in the annual index.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 1.8% in 1997, 2.6% in 1998, and 3.8% in both 1999 and 2000. In 1998 Sweden's total GDP was US$226.5bn.

The OECD reported in 1999 that 'Overall, the improvement in economic performance ... has continued and the short-term outlook is favourable. Firm control of inflation has established the credibility of monetary policy, which, in turn, has effectively anchored inflation expectations. Underlying these favourable trends is the successful completion of the fiscal consolidation process, which has brought public finances back into surplus. Product-market competition, though incomplete, has been significantly extended. The longer-run supply potential of the economy has been enhanced. But restoring the position of Sweden in terms of GDP per capita requires further substantial action, to complete regulatory reform, modify transfers and reduce labour and capital taxes, subject to the overriding requirement of a sustained structural budget surplus. Such action is needed to improve incentives to work, seek education and invest. The long-term pay-off to employment creation and capital formation would be substantial. The benign climate now emerging may be politically less favourable to reforms than the situation of macroeconomic imbalance that characterized the mid-1990s insofar as there is less urgency. But the return to macroeconomic balance should actually be seen as providing the opportunity for implementing further structural reforms at a relatively low short-term cost, while serving to realise the country's full economic potential in the longer term.'

In 1998 the state debt amounted to 1,448,861m. kr.

Budget. Revenue of 717,100m. kr. and expenditure of 695,100m. kr is estimated for the total budget (Current and Capital) for financial year 2000-01.

Currency. The unit of currency is the krona (SEK), of 100 öre. The annual inflation rate was 1.7% in Jan. 2001 (0.8% in Jan. 2000). Foreign exchange reserves were US$18,001m. and gold reserves 5.96m. troy oz in Jan. 2000.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Sveriges Riksbank. The bank has 11 trustees, elected by parliament, and is managed by a directorate, including the governor, appointed by the trustees. The governor is Urban Bäckström, appointed for 6 years. On 31 Dec. 1999 there were 40 commercial banks. Their total deposits amounted to 968,906m. kr.; advances to the public amounted to 850,830m. kr. On 31 Dec. 1997 there were 85 savings banks. The largest banks are MeritaNordbanken (formed in 1997 when Nordbanken of Sweden merged with Merita of Finland), Svenska Handelsbanken, FöreningsSparbanken and Skandinaviska Enskilda Banken. In March 2000 MeritaNordbanken acquired Denmark's Unidanmark, thereby becoming the Nordic region's biggest bank in terms of assets. By Oct. 2000 approximately 27% of the Swedish population were using e-banking.

In 1999 Sweden received US$60bn. worth of foreign direct investment, equivalent to 25.1% of its GDP—the highest percentage of any country in the world.

There is a stock exchange in Stockholm.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Sweden is rich in hydro-power resources. Installed capacity was 34,389 MW in 1998, of which 16,517 MW was in hydro-electric plants, 10,083 MW in nuclear plants and 7,615 MW in thermal plants. Electricity production in 1999 was 154,663m. kWh; consumption was 158,882 kWh. In 1997 consumption per capita was 16,616 kWh. A referendum of 1980 called for the phasing out of nuclear power by 2010. In Feb. 1997 the government began denuclearization by designating one of the 10 reactors for decommissioning. The state corporation Vattenfall was given the responsibility of financing and overseeing the transition to the use of non-fossil fuel alternatives.

Minerals. Sweden is a leading producer of iron ore with around 2% of the world's total output. It is the largest iron ore exporter in Europe. There are also deposits of copper, lead, zinc and alum shale containing oil and uranium. Iron ore produced, 1998, 20.9m. tonnes; copper ore, 270,000 tonnes; zinc concentrates, 297,000 tonnes.

The mining industry accounts for 1.0% of the market value of Sweden's total industrial production and employs 0.5% of the total industrial labour force.

Agriculture. In 1999 the total area of land given over to farms of 2 ha or more was 7,630,720 ha, of which 2,746,929 ha was arable land; 447,149 was natural pasture; 3,734,193 was forest; and 702,449 other. Of the land used for arable farming, 2–5 ha holdings covered a total area of 43,524 ha; 5.1–10 ha holdings covered 114,858 ha; 10.1–20 ha, 244,007; 20.1–30 ha, 230,210; 30.1–50 ha, 448,199; 50.1–100 ha, 762,368 and holdings larger than 100 ha covered 903,765 ha. There were 80,119 agricultural enterprises in 1999 compared to 150,014 in 1971 and 282,187 in 1951. Around 40% of the enterprises were between 5 and 20 ha. Figures compiled by the Soil Association, a British organization, show that in 1999 Sweden set aside 268,000 ha (11.2% of its agricultural land—one of the highest proportions in the world) for the growth of organic crops.

Agriculture accounts for 5.8% of exports and 7.9% of imports. The agricultural sector employs 3% of the workforce.

In the period 1994-98 forests covered 22,613,000 ha (55% of the land area). The state owns only 5% of productive forest lands. During 1993 most government-owned timberland was transferred to a forest production corporation (AssiDomän) in which the state owns 51% of shares, and the remaining 49% are quoted on the stock exchange. Public ownership accounts for 8% of the forests, limited companies own 37%, the state 5% and the remaining 50% is in private hands. Of the 60.6m. cu. metres of wood felled in 1998, 31.5m. cu. metres were sawlogs, 22.2m. cu. metres pulpwood, 5.9m. cu. metres fuelwood and 0.9 cu. metres other. Timber production in 1998 totalled 58.1m. cu. metres.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 2000 there were 210,760 km of roads comprising: main roads, 14,692 km; secondary roads, 83,357 km; other roads, 113,754 km. A total of 77.2% were surfaced. There were also 1,428 km of motorway. Motor vehicles in 1999 included 3,890,000 passenger cars, 354,000 lorries, 15,000 buses and 300,000 motorcycles and mopeds. There were 997,000 Volvos, 377,000 Volkswagens, 375,000 Saabs and 368,000 Fords registered in 1999. Sweden has one of the lowest death rates in road accidents of any industrialized country, at fewer than 7 deaths per 100,000 people. 580 people were killed in traffic accidents in 1999.

Rail. Total length of railways at 31 Dec. 1999 was 10,961 km (7,586 km electrified). The state railway operator SJ carried 115m. passengers and 29m. tonnes of freight in 1999. Some lines are run under contract by private operators. There is a metro in Stockholm (108 km), and tram/light rail networks in Stockholm, Göteborg (81 km) and Norrköping.

Civil Aviation. The main international airports are at Stockholm (Arlanda), Göteborg (Landvetter) and Malmö (Sturup). The principal carrier is Scandinavian Airlines System (SAS), of which SAS Sverige AB is the Swedish partner (SAS Denmark A/S and SAS Norge ASA being the other two). SAS has a joint paid-up capital of 14,241m. Sw. kr. Capitalization of SAS Sverige AB, 5,560m. Sw. kr., of which 50% is owned by the government and 50% by private enterprises.

In 1997 the total distance flown was 109.0m. km; passenger-km, 8,893.7m.; goods, 294.7m. tonne-km. These figures represent the Swedish share of the SAS traffic (Swedish domestic and three-sevenths of international traffic). Malmö Aviation and Skyways AB, both Sweden-based carriers, operate some international as well as domestic flights. In 1998 services were also provided by Aer Lingus, Aeroflot, Air Baltic, Air Canada, Air China, Air Express, Air France, Air Lithuania, Air Malta, Air Ukraine, Airborne of Sweden, Alitalia, American Airlines, Austrian Airlines, Balkan, Belavia, Braathens, British Airways, Continental Airlines, Croatia Airlines, Czech Airlines, Delta Air Lines, Deutsche BA, Egyptair, El Al, Estonia Air, Falcon Air, Finnair, Flying Enterprise, Guard Air, Iberia, Icelandair, Interimpex-Avioimpex, Iran Air, JAT, Kenya Airways, KLM, KLM UK, Lithuanian Airlines, LOT, Lufthansa, Maersk Air, Malév, Minskavia, Muk Air, Royal Air Maroc, Ryanair, SABENA, Skargardsflyg, Swedeways Air Lines, Swissair, Syrian Arab Airlines, TAP, Thai Airways International, Trans Travel Airlines, Turkish Airlines, Tyrolean Airways, United Airlines, West Air Sweden and Wideroe's Flyveselskap.

In 1999 Stockholm (Arlanda) handled 17,128,549 passengers (10,704,910 on international flights) and 112,691 tonnes of freight. Göteborg (Landvetter) was the second busiest airport in 1999, handling 3,870,899 passengers (2,593,406 on international flights) and 43,987 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. The mercantile marine consisted on 31 Dec. 1999 of 412 vessels of 2.86m. GRT. Cargo vessels entering Swedish ports in 1999 numbered 27,089 (190.65m. GRT) while passenger ferries numbered 90,798 (777.39m. GRT). The number of cargo vessels leaving Swedish ports in 1999 totalled 27,439 (190.59m. GRT) and the number of passenger ferries leaving was 90,893 (776.92m. GRT).

The busiest port is Göteborg. In 1999 a total of 30.63m. tonnes of goods were loaded and unloaded there (28.2m. tonnes unloaded from and loaded to foreign ports). Other major ports are Brofjorden, Helsingborg, Trelleborg and Luleå.

Telecommunications. There were 5,889,000 main telephone lines in 1999, or 664.6 per 1,000 population. In 1995 there were 6,830 telephone exchanges. In June 2000 the state sold off a 30% stake in the Swedish telecommunications operator Telia. The government planned to reduce its stake still further, to 51%, by the end of 2000. 5.58m. mobile phones were in use in Nov. 2000. More than 57% of Swedes are mobile phone subscribers—one of the highest penetration rates in the world. There were 4m. PCs in 1999 (451 per 1,000 population) and 450,000 fax machines in 1996. In Nov. 2000 there were 5m. Internet users, or 56.3% of the total population (the highest percentage in the world).

Sweden has been one of the most active countries in the adoption of information technology. Kista Science Park, in the northwest of Stockholm, was ranked second equal in the world behind Silicon Valley by Wired Magazine in 2000 in a listing of the most significant locations for IT research and development.

Postal Services. There were 1,775 post offices at the end of 1999. A total of 5,377m. pieces of mail were processed in 1997, equivalent to 608 per person.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The administration of justice is independent. The Attorney-General (appointed by the government) and 4 Parliamentary Commissioners for the Judiciary and Civil Administration (appointed by the Parliament), or Ombudsmen, exercise a check on judicial affairs administration. In 1998–99 the Ombudsmen received 4,791 cases altogether, of which 147 were instituted on their own initiative.

Sweden has no constitutional court. However, in each particular case the courts do have a certain right to ascertain whether a statute meets the standards set out by superordinate provisions.

The courts can be divided into general or ordinary courts and special courts. There are 2 general court organizations: the courts of general jurisdiction and the general administrative courts. These organizations are, in all essentials, parallel and are structured as a triple instance system. The general courts handle criminal cases and civil disputes between individuals. The general administrative courts primarily deal with cases which relate to matters between the community at large and a private individual. A number of courts of special jurisdiction exist beside the courts, such as the labour court.

There is a 3-tier hierarchy of courts: the Supreme Court; 6 intermediate courts of appeal; and 93 district courts. Of the district courts 23 also serve as real estate courts, 7 as maritime courts and 5 as environmental courts. When a permanent judge is appointed by the government, he cannot, in principle, be dismissed.

District courts are courts of first instance and deal with both civil and criminal cases. Petty cases are tried by 1 judge. Civil cases are tried as a rule by 3 judges or in minor cases by 1 judge. Disputes of greater consequence relating to the Marriage Code or the Code relating to Parenthood and Guardianship are tried by a judge and a jury of 3 lay assessors. Criminal cases are tried by a judge and a jury of 3 members (lay assessors). The criminal cases in courts of appeal are generally tried by 3 judges and 2 lay assessors and civil cases by 3 or in some cases 4 judges.

Those with low incomes can receive free legal aid out of public funds. In criminal cases a suspected person has the right to a public defence, paid mainly out of public funds.

The Attorney-General and the Ombudsmen supervise the application in the public sector of acts of Parliament and regulations.

In Jan. 2000 there were some 55 penal institutions with a population of 3,600 inmates (including persons detained in custody). There were 173 murders in 1999 (121 in 1990 and 187 in 1998).

Religion. The Swedish Lutheran Church was disestablished in 2000. It is headed by Archbishop Karl Gustaf Hammar (b. 1943) and has its metropolitan see at Uppsala. In 1996 there were 13 bishoprics and 2,544 parishes. The clergy are chiefly supported from the parishes and the proceeds of the church lands. Around 85% of the population, equivalent to 7.5m. people, belong to the Church of Sweden. Other denominations, in 1999: Pentecostal Movement, 90,000 members; The Mission Covenant Church of Sweden, 67,000; Interact, 29,000; Salvation Army, 26,000; Örebro Missionary Society (1996), 22,801; Swedish Evangelical Mission (1996), 26,089; The Baptist Union of Sweden, 18,000; Swedish Alliance Missionary Society, 13,000; Holiness Mission (1996), 6,393. There were also 158,000 Roman Catholics (under a Bishop resident at Stockholm). The Orthodox and Oriental churches number around 98,500 members.

There were around 18,000 Jews and 250,000 Muslims in Sweden in 1998.

Education. In 1999–2000 there were 720,778 pupils in primary education (grades 1–6 in compulsory comprehensive schools); secondary education at the lower stage (grades 7–9 in compulsory comprehensive schools) comprised 314,103 pupils. In secondary education at the higher stage (the integrated upper secondary school), there were 305,579 pupils in Oct. 1999 (excluding pupils in the fourth year of the technical course regarded as third-level education). The folk high schools, 'people's colleges', had 28,859 pupils on courses of more than 15 weeks in 1999.

In municipal adult education there were 234,226 students in 1999.

There are also special schools for pupils with visual and hearing handicaps (808 pupils in 1999) and for those who are mentally retarded (17,242 pupils).

In 1997–98 there were in integrated institutions for higher education 305,581 students enrolled for undergraduate studies. The number of students enrolled for postgraduate studies in 1998 was 18,230.

In 1997 total expenditure on education came to 7.65% of GDP. The adult literacy rate is at least 99%. In an OECD literacy survey carried out between 1994 and 1999, analysing prose literacy, document literacy and quantitative literacy, Sweden led the world, ahead of Denmark and Norway.

Health. In 1998 there were 23,600 doctors, 4,200 dentists, 75,800 nurses and midwives and in 1999 there were 32,755 hospital beds. In 1996 the total cost of healthcare was 128bn. kr., representing 7.6% of GNP.

The Swedes smoked an average of 992 cigarettes per person in 1994.

Welfare. Social insurance benefits are granted mainly according to uniform statutory principles. All persons resident in Sweden are covered, regardless of citizenship. All schemes are compulsory, except for unemployment insurance. Benefits are usually income-related. Most social security schemes are at present undergoing extensive discussion and changes. Recent proposals include the introduction of a new pension scheme.

Type of scheme	Beneficiaries	Expenditure 1998 (in 1m. kr.)
Sickness insurance	All residents	65,991
Work injury insurance	All gainfully occupied persons	6,255
Unemployment insurance	Members of unemployment insurance societies	32,663
Basic and supplementary pensions (old-age, disability, survivors)	All resident or gainfully occupied persons	181,786
Partial pensions	All gainfully occupied persons between 61 and 64	585
Child allowance	All children below 16	16,830

In 1996, 34.8% of GNP was spent on social security—the highest percentage of any EU-member country.

Under a Pension Reform Plan Sweden is one of the world's leaders in the shift to private pension systems. In the new system each worker's future pension will be based on the amount of money accumulated in two separate individual accounts. The bulk of retirement income will come from a notional account maintained by the government on behalf of the individual, but a significant portion of retirement income will come from a completely private individual account. There are two types of pension—the income pension and the premium pension. The income pension comes under a pay-as-you-go system, with the premium pension being a scheme where contributions are invested in a fund chosen by the insured person.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The history of Switzerland can be traced back to Aug. 1291 when the Uri, Schwyz and Unterwalden entered into a defensive league. In 1353 the league included 8 members and in 1515, 13. In 1648 the league became formally independent of the Holy Roman Empire. No addition was made to the number of cantons until 1798 in which year, under the influence of France, the unified Helvetic Republic was formed. This failed to satisfy the Swiss and in 1803 Napoleon granted a new constitution and increased the number of cantons to 19. In 1815 the perpetual neutrality of Switzerland and the inviolability of her territory were guaranteed by Austria, France, Great Britain, Portugal, Prussia, Spain and Sweden, and the Federal Pact, which included 3 new cantons, was accepted by the Congress of Vienna. In 1848 a new constitution was approved. The 22 cantons set up a federal government (consisting of a federal parliament and a federal council) and a federal tribunal. This constitution, in turn, was on 29 May 1874 superseded by the present constitution, which also combines the federal principle with a national and local use of referendums. Female franchise dates only from Feb. 1971. In a national referendum held in Sept. 1978, 69·9% voted in favour of the establishment of a new canton, Jura, which was established on 1 Jan. 1979.

Switzerland was neutral in both world wars. After the First World War, it joined the League of Nations, which was based in Geneva. But after the Second World War neutrality was thought to conflict with membership of the UN, though Switzerland participates in its agencies, and since 1948 has been a contracting party to the Statute of the International Court of Justice. In March 2001 a referendum on whether to begin immediate talks on joining the European Union was rejected, with 76·7% of voters against.

In 1999 there were 3,663,700 females and 1,406,600 resident foreign nationals. In 2000 foreign nationals made up 19.3% of the population, one of the highest proportions in western Europe. In 1999, 67.5% of the population lived in urban areas. Population density in 1997 was 172 per sq. km. The most recent census took place in 2000.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 7.64m.

German, French and Italian are the official languages; Romansch (spoken mostly in Graubünden), hitherto a national language, was upgraded to 'semi-official' in 1996. German is spoken by the majority of inhabitants in 19 of the 26 cantons, French in Fribourg, Vaud, Valais, Neuchâtel, Jura and Geneva, and Italian in Ticino. At the 1990 census 63.6% of the population gave German as their mother tongue, 19.2% French, 7.6% Italian, 0.6% Romansch and 8.9% other languages. 1997 statistics were 65% German, 18.4% French, 9.8% Italian and 0.8% Romansch.

At the end of 1999 the 5 largest cities were Zürich (336,800); Geneva (173,500); Basle (166,700); Berne (122,700); Lausanne (114,500). At the end of 1999 the population figures of conurbations were: Zürich, 943,400; Geneva, 457,500; Basle, 401,600; Berne, 319,100; Lausanne, 288,100; other towns, 1999 (and their conurbations), Winterthur, 88,000 (119,700); St Gallen, 69,800 (132,500); Lucerne, 57,000 (181,400); Biel, 48,800 (84,200).

CLIMATE

The climate is largely dictated by relief and altitude, and includes continental and mountain types. Summers are generally warm, with quite considerable rainfall; winters are fine, with clear, cold air. Berne, Jan. 32°F (0°C), July, 65°F (18.5°C). Annual rainfall 39.4" (986 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new Constitution was accepted on 18 April 1999 in a popular vote and came into effect on 1 Jan. 2000, replacing the constitution dating from 1874. Switzerland is a republic. The highest authority is vested in the electorate, i.e., all Swiss citizens over 18. This electorate, besides electing its representatives to the Parliament, has the voting power on amendments to, or on the revision of, the Constitution as well as on Switzerland joining international organizations for collective security or supranational communities (mandatory referendum). It also takes decisions on laws and certain international treaties if requested by 50,000 voters or 8 cantons (facultative referendum), and it has the right of initiating constitutional amendments, the support required for such demands being 100,000 voters (popular initiative). The Swiss vote in more referendums—3 or 4 a year—than any other nation. A mandatory referendum and a Constitutional amendment demanded by popular initiative require a double majority (a majority of the voters and a majority of the cantons voting in favour of the proposal) to be accepted while a facultative referendum is accepted if a majority of the voters vote in favour of the proposal. Between 1971 and 2000, 85 initiatives were put to the vote but only 5 were adopted. Turn-out had dropped from a peak of 80.5% in 1933 to 43.8% in 2000.

The Federal government is responsible for legislating matters of foreign relations, defence (within the framework of its powers), professional education and technical universities, protection of the environment, water, public works, road traffic, nuclear energy, foreign trade, social security, residence and domicile of foreigners, civil law, banking and insurance, monetary policy and economic development. It is also responsible for formulating policy concerning statistics gathering, sport, forests, fishery and hunting, post and telecommunications, radio and television, private economic activity, competition policy, alcohol and gambling.

The legislative authority is vested in a parliament of 2 chambers: the Council of States (Ständerat/Conseil des États) and the National Council (Nationalrat/Conseil National). The Council of States is composed of 46 members, chosen and paid by the 23 cantons of the Confederation, 2 for each canton. The mode of their election and the term of membership depend on the canton. 3 of the cantons are politically divided—Basle into Town and Country, Appenzell into Outer-Rhoden and Inner-Rhoden, and Unterwalden into Obwalden and Nidwalden. Each of these 'half-cantons' sends 1 member to the State Council. The Swiss parliament is a militia/semi-professional parliament.

The National Council has 200 members directly elected for 4 years, in proportion to the population of the cantons, with the proviso that each canton or half-canton is represented by at least 1 member. The members are paid from federal funds. The parliament sits for at least 4 ordinary 3-week sessions annually. Extraordinary sessions can be held if necessary and if demanded by the Federal Council, 25% of the National Council or 5 cantons.

According to 1990 population size, the 200 seats are distributed among the cantons as follows:

Zürich	34	Thurgau (Thurgovie)	6
Berne	27	Graubünden (Grisons)	5
Vaud (Waadt)	17	Neuchâtel (Neuenburg)	5
Aargau (Argovie)	15	Schwyz	3
St Gallen (St Gall)	12	Zug	3
Geneva	11	Schaffhausen (Schaffhouse)	2
Lucerne	10	Appenzell Outer-Rhoden	2
Ticino (Tessin)	8	Jura	2
Solothurn (Soleure)	7	Uri	1
Basel-Country (Bâle-C.)	7	Obwalden	1
Valais (Wallis)	7	Nidwalden	1
Basel-Town (Bâle-V.)	6	Glarus	1
Fribourg (Freiburg)	6	Appenzell Inner-Rhoden	1

A general election takes place by ballot every 4 years. Every citizen of the republic who has entered on his 18th year is entitled to a vote, and any voter may be elected a deputy. Laws passed by both chambers may be submitted to direct popular vote, when 50,000 citizens or 8 cantons demand it; the vote can be only 'Yes' or 'No'. This principle, called the referendum, is frequently acted on.

The chief executive authority is deputed to the Bundesrat, or Federal Council, consisting of 7 members, elected for 4 years by the United Federal Assembly, i.e., joint sessions of both chambers, such as to represent both the different geographical regions and language communities. The members of this council must not hold any other office in the Confederation or cantons, nor engage in any calling or business. In the Federal Parliament legislation may be introduced either by a member, or by either chamber, or by the Federal Council (but not by the people). Every citizen who has a vote for the National Council is eligible to become a member of the executive.

The President of the Federal Council (called President of the Confederation) and the Vice-President are the first magistrates of the Confederation. Both are elected by the United Federal Assembly for 1 calendar year from among the Federal Councillors, and are not immediately re-eligible to the same offices. The Vice-President, however, may be, and usually is, elected to succeed the outgoing President.

The 7 members of the Federal Council act as ministers, or chiefs of the 7 administrative departments of the republic. The city of Berne is the seat of the Federal Council and the central administrative authorities.

National Anthem. 'Trittst im Morgenrot daher'/'Sur nos monts quand le soleil'/'Quando il ciel' di porpora' ('Step into the rosy dawn'); German words by Leonard Widmer, French by C. Chatelanat, Italian by C. Valsangiacomo, tune by Alberik Zwyssig.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the parliamentary elections of 24 Oct. 1999 the Social Democratic Party of Switzerland (SPS) won 51 seats (22.5% of the vote), the Swiss People's Party/Democratic Centre Union (SPPDCU) won 44 seats (22.6%), the Radicals (FDP) 43 seats (19.9%), the Christian Democratic People's Party (CDP) 35 (15.8%) and the Greens 9 (5%). There were 10 other parties with 6 seats or less. In the Council of States, the Radicals held 18 seats, the Christian Democratic People's Party 15, the Swiss People's Party/Democratic Centre Union 7 and the Social Democratic Party of Switzerland 6.

At the presidential election held in the United Federal Assembly on 6 Dec. 2000 Moritz Leuenberger was elected president.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President of the Confederation and Chief of the Department of Environment, Transport, Energy and Communications: Moritz Leuenberger; b. 1946 (SPS; sworn in 1 Jan. 2001).

Vice President and Chief of the Department of Finance: Kaspar Villiger (FDP).

In April 2001 the Federal Council comprised:

Minister of Foreign Affairs: Joseph Deiss (CDP). Home Affairs: Ruth Dreifuss (SPS). Justice and Police: Ruth Metzler-Arnold (CDP). Public Economy: Pascal Couchepin (FDP). Defence, Civil Protection and Sports: Samuel Schmid (SVP).

DEFENCE

There are fortifications in all entrances to the Alps and on the important passes crossing the Alps and the Jura. Large-scale destruction of bridges, tunnels and defiles are prepared for an emergency.

In 1999 military expenditure totalled US$3,108m. (US$439 per capita), representing 1.3% of GDP.

Army. There are about 2,000 regular soldiers, but some 380,000 conscripts undergo training annually (15 weeks recruit training at 20; 10 refresher courses of 19 days every two years between 21 and 42). Proposals ('Army 95') implemented in 1995 envisaged an Armed Forces based on the 3 areas of promoting peace, defence and general civil affairs support.

The administration of the Swiss Army is partly in the hands of the Cantonal authorities, who can promote officers up to the rank of captain. In peacetime the Army has no general; in time of war the Federal Assembly in joint session of both Houses appoints a general.

Navy. The Army includes a Marine force with patrol boats.

Air Force. The air force has 3 flying regiments. The fighter squadrons are equipped with Swiss-built F-5E Tiger IIs and Mirage IIIS/RS. Personnel (1999), 30,200 on mobilization, with 150 combat aircraft.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Switzerland is a member of WTO, BIS, OECD, the Council of Europe and the NATO Partnership for Peace, OSCE, EFTA, CERN, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, IOM, Antarctic Treaty, the International Organization for Francophonie and applied to join the EU on 26 May 1992. In referendums in 1986 the electorate voted against joining the UN, and in Dec. 1992

the European Economic Area. At a referendum in March 2001, 76.7% of voters rejected membership talks with the EU, with just 23.3% in favour; turn-out was 55.1%. However, the government reaffirmed plans to begin entry talks by 2007.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 2% of GDP in 1998, industry 31% and services 67%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Switzerland ranked equal 11th in the world in 2000 in a survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 8.6 out of 10 in the annual index.

Performance. Total GDP was US$263.6bn. in 1998. Real GDP growth in 1999 was 1.5%, but in 2000 growth reached 3%, the highest growth for 10 years. In 1999 the current account surplus was 44,996m. Swiss francs.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure of the Confederation, in 1m. Swiss francs, for calendar years:

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Syria was under Turkish control from the 12th century and part of the Ottoman Empire from the 16th century until the First World War. Following the defeat of the Turks, the League of Nations granted France a mandate for Syria from 1920. On 27 Sept. 1941 Gen. Catroux, the Free French C.-in-C., proclaimed the independence of Syria. The evacuation of all foreign troops in April 1946 marked the complete independence of Syria, but the political situation was unsettled and military coups were staged in Dec. 1949 and in Feb. 1954. Syria merged with Egypt to form the United Arab Republic from 2 Feb. 1958 until 29 Sept. 1961, when Syrian independence was resumed following a coup. Following the fifth coup of the decade, Lieut.-Gen. Hafiz al-Assad became prime minister on 13 Nov. 1970 and assumed the presidency on 22 Feb. 1971. A new constitution, approved by plebiscite on 12 March 1973, confirmed the Arab Socialist Renaissance (Ba'ath) Party as the 'leading party in the state and society'.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Syria is bounded by the Mediterranean and Lebanon in the west, by Israel and Jordan in the south, by Iraq in the east and by Turkey in the north. The frontier between Syria and Turkey was settled by the Franco-Turkish agreement of 22 June 1929. The area is 185,180 sq. km (71,498 sq. miles). The census of 1994 gave a population of 13,782,000. Estimate (1997), 14,972,000 (53.5% urban, 1998); density, 81 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 20.47m.

Area and population (1996 estimate, in 1,000) of the 14 districts (mohafaza):

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

At the end of the 17th century the inhabitants of Zanzibar drove out the Portuguese with the assistance of the Arabs of Oman. In 1887 the Sultan of Zanzibar handed over the administration of his possessions to the north of Vanga on the African continent to the British East Africa Association. These territories eventually passed to the British government and are now part of Kenya. In 1888 a similar concession was granted to the German East Africa Association of the Sultan's mainland territories between the River Umba and Cape Delgado. German East Africa was conquered by the Allies in the First World War and subsequently divided between the Belgians, the Portuguese and the British. The country was administered as a League of Nations mandate until 1946, and then as a UN trusteeship territory until 9 Dec. 1961.

Tanganyika (Tanzania) achieved responsible government in Sept. 1960 and full self-government on 1 May 1961. On 9 Dec. 1961 Tanganyika became a sovereign independent member state of the Commonwealth of Nations. On 9 Dec 1962 the country adopted a republican form of government (still within the British Commonwealth) and Dr Nyerere was elected as the first president.

On 24 June 1963 Zanzibar became an internal self-governing state which achieved independence on 9 Dec. 1963. On 12 Jan. 1964 her sultanate was overthrown by a revolt of the Afro-Shirazi Party leaders who established the People's Republic of Zanzibar. Also in Jan. 1964 there was an attempted coup against Nyerere who had to seek British military help. On 26 April 1964 Tanganyika, Zanzibar and Pemba combined to form the United Republic of Tanzania. The first multi-party elections were held in 1995.

In Nov. 1999 a treaty was signed between Tanzania, Kenya and Uganda to create a new East African Community as a means of developing East African trade, tourism and industry and laying the foundations for a future common market and political federation.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 45.7% of GDP in 1998, industry 14.9% and services 39.4%.

Policy. Tanzania's economy has been hard hit by a series of natural disasters—drought in 1996, floods in 1997 and early 1998—which slowed real economic growth to 3.3% in 1997, from 4.2% in 1996. Gradual recovery is expected and a modest economic growth of 3.5% is projected. Between 1993 and 1999 a total of 295 out of 395 public enterprises were privatized. The Presidential Parastatal Sector Reform Commission aims to have the privatization programme finished by 2003.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 4.0% in 1998 and 3.9% in 1999. Total GDP in 1998 was US$8.0bn.

Banking and Finance. The central bank is the Bank of Tanzania (Governor, Daudi Ballali).

On 6 Feb. 1967 all commercial banks with the exception of National Co-operative Banks were nationalized, and their interests vested in the National Bank of Commerce on the mainland (fully privatized in March 2000) and the Peoples' Bank in Zanzibar. However, in 1993 private-sector commercial banks were allowed to open. In 1997 the National Commercial Bank, which controls 70% of the country's banking and has 34 branches, was split into a trade bank, a regional rural bank and a micro-finance bank. It is scheduled for privatization, with the South African concern Absa Group Limited purchasing a 70% stake. In 2000 there were 17 banks operating in Tanzania.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Thais migrated to the present territory from Nan Chao in the Yunnan area of China in the 8th and 9th centuries. Thailand's leading general, Chao Phraya Chakkri, assumed the throne in 1782, thus establishing the dynasty which still heads the Thai state. Siam, as Thailand was called until 1939, remained an independent state ruled by an absolute monarchy until 24 June 1932. Discontented with the social, political and economic stagnation of the country, a group of rebels calling themselves the People's Party precipitated a bloodless coup. The rebels seized control of the army and persuaded the king to accept the introduction of constitutional monarchy. When, the following year, the king tried to dissolve the newly appointed General Assembly, the army moved to prevent him, thus becoming the dominant force behind the government, which they have remained ever since. Nationalism dominated political life through the 1930s. In 1939 Field Marshal Pibul Songgram became premier and embarked on a pro-Japanese policy that brought Thailand into the Second World War on Japan's side.

After 1945 political life was characterized by periods of military rule interspersed with short attempts at democratic, civilian government. Democratic government was reintroduced for a short time after 1963 and again from 1969 to 1971 when another successful military coup was staged, aimed at checking the high crime rate and the growth of Communist insurgency. A new, moderately democratic constitution was introduced in 1978.

On 23 Feb. 1991 a military junta seized power in the most recent of 17 coups since 1932. Following the appointment of Gen. Suchinda Kraprayoon as prime minister on 17 April 1992 there were massive anti-government demonstrations over several weeks in the course of which many demonstrators were killed. Gen. Suchinda resigned and in May the legislative assembly voted that future prime ministers should be elected by its members rather than appointed by the military. The 1995 election was fought against a background of political and financial corruption. After the 1996 election a new constitution was drafted allowing for the separation of the executive, legislative and judicial branches of government.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Thailand is bounded in the west by Myanmar, north and east by Laos and southeast by Cambodia. In the south it becomes a peninsula bounded in the west by the Indian Ocean, south by Malaysia and east by the Gulf of Thailand. Area is 513,115 sq. km (198,114 sq. miles).

At the 2000 census (provisional) the population was 60,606,947 (30,762,077 females); density, 118 per sq. km. 20,759,899 lived in the Northeastern region, 11,367,826 in the Northern region, 14,101,530 in the Central region, 8,057,518 in the Southern region and 6,320,174 in Bangkok. In 1998, 79.1% of the population lived in rural areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 64.57m.

Thailand is divided into 4 regions, 76 provinces and Bangkok, the capital. Population of Bangkok (1999), 7,133,000. Other towns (1993 estimates): Nonthaburi (261,355), Nakhon Ratchasima (188,171), Chiangmai (170,397), Hat Yai (148,632).

Thai is the official language, spoken by 53% of the population as their mother tongue. 27% speak Lao (mainly in the northeast), 12% Chinese (mainly in urban areas), 3.7% Malay (mainly in the south) and 2.7% Khmer (along the Cambodian border).

Bangkok: Situated on the Chao Phraya river, 40 km from the Gulf of Thailand, Bangkok was established as the capital of Thailand, then called Siam, in 1782 by King Rama I, the founder of the Chakkri dynasty. The city has since grown, combining traditions such as the building of Wats (temples), with modern industry, to become one of Asia's busiest and most important commercial and industrial centres.

Thailand's 'shadow' (black market or underground) economy has been estimated to constitute approximately 70% of the country's official GDP—one of the highest percentages of any country in the world.

Policy. The financial crisis that spread across southeast Asia in 1997 started as a result of the devaluation of the baht (the Thai currency) in July and hit Thailand with particular force. Over 50 finance companies suspended business, the Thai stock exchange lost 82% of its 1995 peak value and the baht devalued by 40% in the second half of 1997. An IMF rescue package of US$17.2bn. gained time to put reforms in place, including tighter budgetary control, the merging of banks, and the restructuring of the country's outmoded financial system.

In May 1998 the government agreed to adopt a strategy for the eventual privatization of the four commercial banks nationalized earlier in the year.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 6.7% in 1996 (8.5% in 1995). In 1997 and 1998 it was estimated to be -1.8% and -10.4% respectively, but then 4.1% in 1999. For 2000 growth of 4.3% was forecast. Thailand's total GDP in 1998 was US$111.3bn.

It was the devaluation of the baht that sparked the financial turmoil that spread throughout the world over the next year. Foreign exchange reserves were US$24,906m. and gold reserves 2.47m. troy oz in Jan. 2000. Inflation, which was 5.5% in 1996, was forecast to drop to below 1% in 1999. Total money supply in Dec. 1997 was 430bn. baht.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Europeans, beginning with the Portuguese who first visited the area in 1471–72, traded on the coast for centuries, especially in slaves. In the 19th century palm oil exports flourished at Anecho, Agoue and Porto Seguro, where British, French and German traders operated. Several prominent Togolese families of partly Brazilian or Portuguese origin, still important among the coastal African élite, arose at that time. Despite the important rival influences of Britain and France in the area, it was Germany that established colonial rule on the coast in 1884. German control was then extended inland but encountered strong resistance and only in 1912 was the colony fully subdued.

German Togo was overrun by the Allies in 1914. It was partitioned in 1919 into British and French Mandated Territories under the League of Nations. After the Second World War French Togo and British Togoland became Trust Territories under the United Nations. In British Togoland a referendum was held on 9 May 1956, in which a majority voted for union with Gold Coast, although most people in the south voted for union with French Togo. The whole territory was merged with what soon afterwards became independent Ghana, but many Togolese objected. In French Togo partial self-government was granted in 1956. On 27 April 1960 the country became independent.

On 13 Jan. 1963 President Olympio was murdered by soldiers. His successor was deposed in a bloodless military coup in Jan. 1967 and on 14 April 1967 Gen. (then Col.) Gnassingbé Eyadéma assumed the Presidency. A new constitution was approved in 1992.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Togo is bounded in the west by Ghana, north by Burkina Faso, east by Benin and south by the Gulf of Guinea. The area is 56,785 sq. km. The population of Togo in 1981 (census) was 2,700,982; 1997 (estimate) 4·32m.; density, 76 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 6·08m.

In 1998, 67·8% of the population lived in rural areas, and in 1997, 46% were below the age of 15. The capital is Lomé (population in 1999, 790,000), other towns being Sokodé (51,000), Lama-Kara (35,000), Kpalimé (30,000), Atakpamé (30,000), Bassar (22,000), Dapaong (22,000) and Mango (20,000).

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the presidential elections held on 21 June 1998, it was clear that the chief opposition candidate Gilchrist Olympio, son of the country's first president, was going to win, but the paramilitary police intervened and prevented the count in the capital city, Lomé, from being completed; it was also reported that ballot boxes were seized and burnt. The head of the electoral commission resigned in protest along with 4 of its members and the EU and American observers declared the election to be fraudulent. The interior minister pronounced Gen. Gnassingbé Eyadéma the winner, enabling him to continue as the country's ruler, having already been in power since 1967.

At the parliamentary elections on 21 March 1999 the main opposition parties to the Togolese People's Assembly (RPT, the former sole party) boycotted the election. Turn-out was 66%; the RPT won 79 seats, ind. 2.

Parliamentary elections are scheduled to take place on 14 and 28 Oct. 2001.

Kingdom of Tonga

Capital: Nuku'alofa

Population estimate, 2000: 110,000

Estimated GDP: $232m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Tongatapu group of islands in the south western Pacific Ocean were discovered by Tasman in 1643. The Kingdom of Tonga attained unity under Taufa'ahau Tupou (George I) who became ruler of his native Ha'apai in 1820, of Vava'u in 1833 and of Tongatapu in 1845. By 1860 the kingdom had become converted to Christianity. In 1862 the king granted freedom to the people from arbitrary rule of minor chiefs and gave them the right to the allocation of land for their own needs. These institutional changes, together with the establishment of a parliament of chiefs, paved the way towards the democratic constitution under which the kingdom is now governed. By the Anglo-German Agreement of 14 Nov. 1899, the Tonga Islands were left under the Protectorate of Great Britain. The Protectorate was dissolved on 4 June 1970 when Tonga, the only ancient kingdom surviving from the pre-European period in Polynesia, achieved complete independence within the Commonwealth.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Kingdom consists of some 169 islands and islets with a total area of 289 sq. miles (748 sq. km; including inland waters), and lies between 15° and 23° 30' S. lat and 173° and 177° W. long, its western boundary being the eastern boundary of the Fiji Islands. The islands are split up into the following groups (reading from north to south): the Niuas, Vava'u, Ha'apai, Tongatapu and 'Eua. The 3 main groups, both from historical and administrative significance, are Tongatapu in the south, Ha'apai in the centre and Vava'u in the north.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

When Columbus visited Trinidad in 1498 the island was inhabited by Arawak Indians. Tobago was occupied by the Caribs. Trinidad remained a neglected Spanish possession for almost 300 years until it was surrendered to a British naval expedition in 1797. The British first attempted to settle Tobago in 1721 but the French captured the island in 1781 and transformed it into a sugar-producing colony. In 1802 the British acquired Tobago and in 1899 it was administratively combined with Trinidad. When slavery was abolished in the late 1830s, the British subsidized immigration from India to replace plantation labourers. Sugar and cocoa declined towards the end of the 19th century. Oil and asphalt became the dominant sources of income. On 31 Aug. 1962 Trinidad and Tobago became an independent member state of the Commonwealth. A Republican Constitution was adopted on 1 Aug. 1976.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Settled by the Phoenicians, the area became a powerful state under the dynasty of the Berber Hafsids (1207–1574). Tunisia was nominally a part of the Ottoman Empire from the end of the 17th century and descendants of the original Ottoman ruler remained Beys of Tunis until the modern state of Tunisia was established. A French protectorate since 1883, Tunisia saw considerable anti-French activity in the late 1930s. However, Tunisia did support the Allies in the Second World War and was the scene of heavy fighting. France granted internal self-government in 1955 and Tunisia became fully independent on 20 March 1956. A constitutional assembly was established and Habib Bourguiba became prime minister. A republic was established in 1957, the Bey deposed and the monarchy was abolished; Bourguiba became president. In 1975 the constitution was changed so that Bourguiba could be made President-for-life. Bourguiba was overthrown in a bloodless coup in 1987. His successor as president, Zine El Abidine Ben Ali, introduced democratic reforms but a long running struggle with Islamic fundamentalists has been marked by sporadic violence and the suspension of political rights.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Tunisia is bounded in the north and east by the Mediterranean Sea, west by Algeria and south by Libya. The area is 154,530 sq. km. The 1999 official estimate put the total population at 9,456,700; density, 61 per sq. km. In 1999, 62·4% of the population were urban.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In the 13th century the kingdom of Othman I became the dominant power in Asia Minor (now the Asian part of Turkey). In 1453 the Turks captured Constantinople and destroyed the Eastern Roman Empire. Thereafter, the Ottoman Empire expanded to include an area from Morocco to Persia and westwards into the Balkans. From the 17th century, however, the Empire began to decline, its power weakening rapidly in the 19th century.

The Turkish War of Independence (1919–22), following the disintegration of the Ottoman Empire, was led by Mustafa Kemal (Atatürk). Turkey became a republic on 29 Oct. 1923. Islam ceased to be the official state religion in 1928 and women were given the franchise.

On 27 May 1960 the Turkish Army overthrew the government and party activities were suspended. A new constitution was approved in a referendum held on 9 July 1961 and general elections held the same year.

On 12 Sept. 1980 the Turkish armed forces again drove the government from office. A new constitution was enforced after a national referendum on 7 Nov. 1982.

In the face of mounting Islamicization of government policy, the Supreme National Security Council reaffirmed its commitment to the secularity of the state. On 6 March 1997 Prime Minister Neçmettin Erbakan, leader of the pro-Islamist Welfare Party, promised to combat Moslem fundamentalism but in June he was forced to resign by a campaign led by the Army.

There are quarrels with Greece over the division of Cyprus, oil rights under the Aegean and ownership of uninhabited islands close to the Turkish coast. Kurdish rebels have for many years been active in the southeast, occupying a large part of the Turkish army. However, in Feb. 2000 the Kurdish Workers' party (PKK) formally abandoned its 15-year rebellion and adopted the democratic programme urged by its imprisoned leader, Abdullah Öcalan.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Turkey is bounded in the west by the Aegean Sea and Greece, north by Bulgaria and the Black Sea, east by Georgia, Armenia and Iran, and south by Iraq, Syria and the Mediterranean. The area (including lakes) is 779,452 sq. km (300,947 sq. miles). At the 1990 census the population was 56,473,035. The most recent census took place in Oct. 2000. Population estimate (July 1997), 62,866,000; density, 81 per sq. km. In 1998, 73.1% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 74.62m.

Turkish is the official language. Kurdish and Arabic are also spoken.

Some 12m. Kurds live in Turkey. Limited use of the Kurdish language (not in schools or publications) was sanctioned in Feb. 1991.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Until 1917 Russian Central Asia was divided politically into the Khanate of Khiva, the Emirate of Bokhara and the Governor-Generalship of Turkestan. The Khan of Khiva was deposed in Feb. 1920 and a People's Soviet Republic was set up. In Aug. 1920 the Emir of Bokhara suffered the same fate. The former Governor-Generalship of Turkestan was constituted an Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic within the RSFSR on 11 April 1921. In the autumn of 1924 the Soviets of the Turkestan, Bokhara and Khiva Republics decided to redistribute their territories on a nationality basis. The redistribution was completed in May 1925 when the new states of Uzbekistan, Turkmenistan and Tadzhikistan were accepted into the USSR as Union Republics. Following the break-up of the Soviet Union, Turkmenistan declared independence in Oct. 1991.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Turkmenistan is bounded in the north by Kazakhstan, in the north and northeast by Uzbekistan, in the southeast by Afghanistan, in the southwest by Iran and in the west by the Caspian Sea. The population was estimated at 4,229,200 in July 1998; density, 9 per sq. km. In 1997, 54.8% of the population lived in rural areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 5.33m.

There are 5 administrative regions (velayaty): Ahal, Balkan, Dashoguz, Lebap and Mary, comprising 42 rural districts, 15 towns and 74 urban settlements. The capital is Ashgabat (formerly Ashkhabad; 1999 population, 525,000); other large towns are Turkmenabat (formerly Chardzhou), Mary (Merv), Balkanabad (Nebit-Dag) and Dashoguz (formerly Tashauz).

Capital: Fongafale

Estimated GDP: $7.8m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Formerly known as the Ellice Islands, Tuvalu is a group of nine islands in the western central Pacific. Joining the British controlled Gilbert Islands Protectorate in 1916, they became the Gilbert and Ellice Islands colony.

After the Japanese occupied the Gilbert Islands in 1942, US forces occupied the Ellice Islands. A referendum held in 1974 produced a large majority in favour of separation from the Ellice Islands. Independence was achieved on 1 Oct. 1978. Early in 1979 the USA signed a treaty of friendship with Tuvalu and relinquished its claim to the four southern islands in return for the right to veto any other nation's request to use any of Tuvalu's islands for military purposes.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Tuvalu lies between 5° 30' and 11° S. lat. and 176° and 180° E. long. and comprises Nanumea, Nanumanga, Niutao, Nui, Vaitupu, Nukufetau, Funafuti (administrative centre; 1999 population, 6,000), Nukulaelae and Niulakita. Population (census 1991) 9,043, excluding an estimated 1,500 who were working abroad, mainly in Nauru and Kiribati. Estimate, 1995, 10,500, of whom 1,000 were working abroad. Area approximately 9½ sq. miles (24 sq. km). Density, 1995, 396 per sq. km.

In 2000 the population is projected to be 11,000.

In 1995 an estimated 53.2% of the population lived in rural areas. The population is of a Polynesian race.

Both Tuvaluan and English are spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Although the islands are north of the recognized hurricane belt they have been badly hit by hurricanes in the 1990s, raising fears for the long-term future of Tuvalu as the sea level continues to rise.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Luo (a Nilotic-speaking people) invaded the territory of present-day Uganda in the late 15th and 16th centuries founding several kingdoms of which the most prominent was Buganda. Uganda became a British Protectorate in 1894, the province of Buganda being recognized as a native kingdom under its Kabaka. In 1961 Uganda was granted internal self-government with federal status for Buganda. Uganda became an independent member of the Commonwealth on 9 Oct.

1962 and a republic on 8 Sept. 1967. President Milton Obote set about returning land given to the Buganda by the British in 1900 to its original Bunyoro owners. He also abolished Buganda's federal status and autonomy in the country. A rebellion by Buganda was quelled but in 1971 Obote was overthrown by troops under Gen. Idi Amin. Amin's rule was characterized by widespread repression and, in 1972, the expulsion of Asian residents. In April 1979 a force of the Tanzanian Army and Ugandan exiles advanced into Uganda, taking Kampala on 11 April. Amin fled into exile. In Dec. 1980, following elections, Dr Obote again became president, but on 27 July 1985 was overthrown.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Uganda is bounded in the north by Sudan, in the east by Kenya, in the south by Tanzania and Rwanda, and the west by the Democratic Republic of the Congo. Total area 241,038 sq. km, including 43,938 sq. km of water.

In 1999 the population was estimated to be 21,619,700 (10,708,000 male, 10,911,000 female); density, 90 per sq. km. The largest city is Kampala, the capital (population of 1,154,000 in 1999). Other major towns are Jinja, Mbale, Masaka, Gulu, Entebbe, Soroti and Mbarara.

The projected population for 2010 is 30·18m.

An estimated 84·5% of the population lived in rural areas in 1999.

The country is administratively divided into 39 districts, which are grouped in 4 geographical regions (which do not have administrative status). Area and estimated population of the regions in 1999:

Region	Area in sq. km	Population in 1,000
Central Region	61,510	6,046·0
Eastern Region	39,953	5,469·5
Western Region	54,917	5,997·7
Northern Region	84,658	4,106·5

The official language is English, but Kiswahili is used as a lingua franca. About 70% of the population speak Bantu languages; Nilotic languages are spoken in the north and east.

Uganda is host to around 500,000 refugees from a number of neighbouring countries, and internally displaced people. Probably in excess of 100,000 southern Sudanese fled to Uganda during 1996.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 1995, 1,004,000; deaths, 421,000. Rates per 1,000 population, 1995: birth, 51·0; death, 21·4. Uganda's life expectancy at birth in 1998 was 41 years, down from 47 in 1985. It had last been 41 in the late 1950s. The sharp decline is largely attributed to the huge number of people in the country with HIV. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 2·8%. Infant mortality, 1998, 84 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 7·0 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Although in equatorial latitudes, the climate is more tropical, because of its elevation, and is characterized by 2 distinct rainy seasons, March–May and Sept.–Nov. June–Aug. and Dec.–Feb. are comparatively dry. Temperatures vary little over the year. Kampala, Jan. 74°F (23.3°C), July 70°F (21.1°C). Annual rainfall 46.5" (1,180 mm). Entebbe, Jan. 72°F (22.2°C), July 69°F (20.6°C). Annual rainfall 63.9" (1,624 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The President is head of state and head of government, and is elected for a 5-year term by adult suffrage.

Having lapsed in 1966, the kabakaship was revived as a ceremonial office in 1993. Ronald Muwenda Mutebi (b. 13 April 1955) was crowned Mutebi II, 36th Kabaka, on 31 July 1993.

Until 1994 the national legislature was the 278-member National Resistance Council, but this was replaced by a 276-member Constituent Assembly in March 1994, 214 of whose members are elected in single-seat constituencies, 39 (women) indirectly elected by women's associations, and 23 set aside for indirectly elected representatives of the army (10), the disabled (5), youth (5) and trade unions (3). A new constitution was adopted on 8 Oct. 1995. A referendum on the return of multiparty democracy was held on 29 June 2000, but 88% of voters supported President Museveni's 'no-party' Movement system of government. Turn-out was 51%.

National Anthem. 'Oh, Uganda, may God uphold thee'; words and tune by G. W. Kakoma.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 12 March 2001. President Museveni was re-elected by 69.3% of votes cast, with his main rival, Kizza Besigye, receiving 27.8% of the vote. Turn-out was 70.3%. Local non-government monitors described the election as flawed.

Parliamentary elections were held on 27 June 1996. The electorate was 8.5m. The National Resistance Movement (NRM) is reported to have obtained 156 seats.

In Nov. 1999 a treaty was signed between Uganda, Tanzania and Kenya to create a new East African Community as a means of developing East African trade, tourism and industry and laying the foundations for a future common market and political federation.

ECONOMY

In 1998 agriculture accounted for 44.6% of GDP, industry 17.6% and services 37.8%.

Policy. A privatization programme was instituted in 1991 managed by the Public Enterprise Reform and Divestiture Secretariat. The state is to retain ownership of certain utilities, national parks and the development bank. About 100 enterprises were in state ownership, but most had been privatized by 1997.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 7% in the fiscal year 1998-99. Uganda is Africa's fastest-growing economy. In spite of growth rates which averaged 6.4% over 10 years to 1998, per capita income is only just around the levels of 1971, when Gen. Idi Amin came to power. Uganda's total GDP in 1998 was US$6.8bn.

In 1987 the currency was devalued by 77% and a new 'heavy' shilling was introduced worth 100 old shillings. Inflation was 5.4% in 1999. Foreign exchange reserves in Feb. 1998 were US$662m. Total money supply in Dec. 1997 was 533m. Uganda Sh.

Banking and Finance. The Bank of Uganda (established 1966) is the central bank and bank of issue. The Uganda Credit and Savings Bank, established in 1950, was on 9 Oct. 1965 reconstituted as the Uganda Commercial Bank, with its capital fully owned by the government. In 1992 it had 188 branches. In addition there are 4 foreign, 2 private and 2 development banks and 1 co-operative bank.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity in 1995 was 155 MW, about 95% of which was provided by the Owen Falls Extension Project (a hydro-electric scheme). Production (1998) 792m. kWh. Per capita consumption in 1997 was 34 kWh. Only about 5% of the population has access to electricity, and less than 1% of the rural population.

Oil and Gas. Oil was discovered in north-west Uganda in 1999. If positive results are obtained from the sinking of a test well in 2000, commercial exploitation may begin by 2003.

Minerals. In Nov. 1997 extraction started on the first of an estimated US$400m. worth of cobalt from pyrites. Tungsten and tin concentrates are also mined. There are also significant quantities of clay and gypsum.

Agriculture. 80% of the workforce is involved with agriculture. In 1997 the agricultural area included 5.06m. ha of arable land and 1.75m. ha of permanent crops. Agriculture is one of the priority areas for increased production, with many projects funded both locally and externally. In 1996 it recorded 24.2% growth. It contributes 90% of exports. Production (1998 estimates) in 1,000 tonnes: plantains, 9,250; cassava, 2,285; sweet potatoes, 1,890; sugarcane, 1,550; maize, 750; bananas, 585; sorghum, 350; dry beans, 220; coffee, 180. Coffee is the mainstay of the economy, accounting for more than 50% of the annual commodity export revenue. Uganda is the world's leading producer of plantains.

Livestock (1998): cattle, 5.37m.; sheep, 1.96m.; goats, 3.6m.; pigs, 0.95m.; chickens, 23m. Livestock products, 1995 (in 1,000 tonnes): milk, 475; beef and veal, 89; pork, bacon and ham, 53; poultry meat, 36; eggs, 18.

Timber production in 1998 totalled 15.65m. cu. metres. Uganda has great potential for timber-processing for export, manufacture of high-quality furniture and wood products, and various packaging materials.

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas Uganda's carbon dioxide emissions were the equivalent of 0.1 tonnes per capita in 1996.

The national carrier is the state-owned Uganda Airlines, which in 1998 flew to Dar es Salaam, Dubai, Harare, Johannesburg, Kigali, Lusaka and Nairobi. Uganda and Tanzania are partners with South African Airways, in Alliance Air. In 1998 services were also provided by Air Tanzania Corporation, British Airways, Delta Air Lines, Egyptair, Ethiopian Airlines, Gulf Air, Inter Air, Iran Air, Kenya Airways, KLM and SABENA. In 1997 scheduled airline traffic of Uganda-based carriers flew 1.9m. km, carrying 100,000 passengers (all on international flights). In the period 1990–96 only 38% of the population had access to safe drinking water. Uganda has been one of the most successful African countries in the fight against AIDS. A climate of free debate, with President Museveni recognizing the threat as early as 1986 and making every government department take the problem seriously, resulted in HIV prevalence among women in ante-natal urban clinics declining from approximately 30% in 1991 to 15% in 1996.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Kyiv (formerly Kiev) was the centre of the Rus principality in the 11th and 12th centuries and is still known as the Mother of Russian cities. The western Ukraine principality of Galicia was annexed by Poland in the 14th century. At about the same time, Kyiv and the Ukrainian principality of Volhynia were conquered by Lithuania, before being absorbed by Poland. Poland, however, could not subjugate the Ukrainian cossacks, who allied themselves with Russia. Ukraine, except for Galicia (part of the Austrian Empire, 1772–1919), was incorporated into the Russian Empire after the second partition of Poland in 1793.

In 1917, following the Bolshevik revolution, the Ukrainians in Russia established an independent republic. Austrian Ukraine proclaimed itself a republic in 1918 and was federated with its Russian counterpart. The Allies ignored Ukrainian claims to Galicia, however, and in 1918 awarded that area to Poland. From 1922 to 1932, drastic efforts were made by the USSR to suppress Ukrainian nationalism. Ukraine suffered from the forced collectivization of agriculture and the expropriation of foodstuffs; the result was the famine of 1932–33 when more than 7m. people died. Following the Soviet seizure of eastern Poland in Sept. 1939, Polish Galicia was incorporated into the Ukrainian SSR. When the Germans invaded Ukraine in 1941 hopes that an autonomous or independent Ukrainian republic would be set up under German protection were disappointed. Ukraine was re-taken by the USSR in 1944. The Crimean region was joined to Ukraine in 1954.

On 5 Dec. 1991 the Supreme Soviet declared Ukraine's independence. Ukraine was one of the founder members of the CIS in Dec. 1991. After independence, political tension developed in Ukraine over several domestic and international issues. Crimea, which was part of Russia until 1954, became a source of contention between Moscow and Kyiv. The Russian Supreme Soviet laid claim to the Crimean port city of Sevastopol, the home port of the 350-ship Black Sea Fleet, despite an agreement to divide the fleet. There was conflict between Ukraine and Russia over possession and transfer of nuclear weapons, delivery of Russian fuel to Ukraine and military and political integration within the CIS.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Ukraine is bounded in the east by the Russian Federation, north by Belarus, west by Poland, Slovakia, Hungary, Romania and Moldova, and south by the Black Sea and Sea of Azov. Area, 603,700 sq. km (231,990 sq. miles). The 1995 census population was 51·7m., of whom 73% were Ukrainians, 22% Russians, 1% Jews and 4% other—Belarusians, Moldovans, Hungarians, Bulgarians, Poles and Crimean Tatars (most of the Tatars were forcibly transported to Central Asia in 1944 for anti-Soviet activities during the Second World War). Estimate, 1998, 51·37m. (71·6% urban); density, 85 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 49·03m.

Ukraine is divided into 24 provinces and the Autonomous Republic of Crimea. Area (1991) and population of the provinces (1 Jan. 1998):

The 1996 Constitution made Ukrainian the sole official language. Russian, Romanian, Polish and Hungarian are also spoken. Additionally, the 1996 Constitution abolished dual citizenship, previously available if there was a treaty with the other country (there was no such treaty with Russia). Anyone resident in Ukraine since 1991 may be naturalized.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 births, 442,600; deaths, 754,200; 1995 marriages, 431,731. Rates (per 1,000 population), 1997 estimate: births, 8.7; deaths, 14.9. Annual population growth rate, 1990-99, -0.3%. Life expectancy, 1998: males, 64.2 years, females, 73.9. In 1995 the most popular age range for marrying was 20-24 for both males and females. Infant mortality, 1998, 18 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1999, 1.4 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Temperate continental with a subtropical Mediterranean climate prevalent on the southern portions of the Crimean Peninsula. The average monthly temperature in winter ranges from 17.6°F to 35.6°F (-8°C to 2°C), while summer temperatures average 62.6°F to 77°F (17°C to 25°C). The Black Sea coast is subject to freezing, and no Ukrainian port is permanently ice-free. Precipitation generally decreases from north to south; it is greatest in the Carpathians where it exceeds more than 58.5" (1,500 mm) per year, and least in the coastal lowlands of the Black Sea where it averages less than 11.7" (300 mm) per year.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

In a referendum on 1 Dec. 1991, 90.3% of votes cast were in favour of independence. Turn-out was 83.7%.

A new Constitution was adopted on 28 June 1996. It defines Ukraine as a sovereign, democratic, unitary state governed by the rule of law and guaranteeing civil rights. The head of state is the President. Parliament is the 450-member unicameral Supreme Council, elected by universal suffrage for 4-year terms. For an election to be valid, turn-out in an electoral district must reach 50%. The Prime Minister is nominated by the President with the agreement of more than half the Supreme Council. There is an 18-member Constitutional Court, 6 members being appointed by the President, 6 by parliament and 6 by a panel of judges. Constitutional amendments may be initiated at the President's request to parliament, or by at least one third of parliamentary deputies. The Communist party was officially banned in the country in 1990, but was renamed the Socialist party of Ukraine and has retained political control. Hard-line Communists protested the ban, which was rescinded by the Supreme Council in May 1993. Several important democratic institutions have recently appeared in Ukraine, however, including a free press, a new constitution, and several popular opposition groups, such as Rukh and New Ukraine.

National Anthem. 'Shche ne vmerla, Ukraïna' ('Thou hast not perished, Ukraine'); words by P. Chubynsky, tune by M. Verbytsky.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 29 March 1998. The Communist Party of Ukraine emerged as by far the largest single party, winning more seats than the next 2 most successful parties combined, although around 1 in 4 of the 450 seats went to candidates with no party affiliation.

In the presidential election run-off held on 14 Nov. 1999 incumbent Leonid Kuchma gained 56.3% of votes against the 37.8% of Petro Symonenko. Turn-out was 74%. There were 5 other candidates in the first round of voting.

DEFENCE

The 1996 Constitution bans the stationing of foreign troops on Ukrainian soil, but permits Russia to retain naval bases. Conscription is for 18 months. On 31 May 1997 the presidents of Ukraine and Russia signed a Treaty of Friendship and Co-operation which provided inter alia for the division of the former Soviet Black Sea Fleet and shore installations. There were around 1m. armed forces reserves in 1999.

Military expenditure in 1999 totalled US$1,437m. (US$29 per capita), representing 2.9% of GDP.

Army. In 1999 ground forces numbered about 154,900. There were 3 Operational Commands (North, South and West). Equipment included 4,014 main battle tanks (T-55, T-62, T-64, T-72 and T-80), including 933 in store, and 236 attack helicopters.

In addition there were 42,000 Ministry of Internal Affairs troops, a National Guard (26,600 strong) and 34,000 Border Guards.

Strategic Nuclear Forces. There were 44 ICBMs and 43 nuclear-bombers based in Ukraine in 1999. All nuclear forces based in Ukraine were due to be eliminated under START.

Navy. The former Soviet Black Sea Fleet continues to be the object of wrangling between Russia and Ukraine, and is financially and operationally paralyzed by the dispute. In 1999 the Ukrainian elements numbered 13,000, including 2,500 Naval Aviation and an estimated 3,000 naval infantry, with fleet units based at Sevastopol and Odesa. The operational forces include 1 submarine, 7 frigates and 1 cruiser (Ukraina).

Equipment includes 521 combat aircraft with a further 542 in store. Active aircraft type include MiG-23s, MiG-29s, Su-24s, Su-25s and Su-27s.

Personnel (including Air Defence), 1999, 100,000.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Ukraine is a member of the UN, CIS, the Council of Europe, OSCE, CEI, BSEC, Danube Commission and the NATO Partnership for Peace.

Ukraine has received over US$2bn. in US assistance, more than any other former Soviet republic.

ECONOMY

In 1998 services accounted for 51.2% of GDP, industry 34.4% and agriculture 14.4%.

Policy. After considerable delay, the process of economic reform began in Ukraine. Prices on food, transportation and other services were deregulated in Jan. 1993, although food prices remained low in comparison to prices in neighbouring countries. The government issued privatization certificates and set up the western city of Lviv as a model for future privatization. The country's leadership attempted to re-establish close economic ties with former Soviet republics, supporting economic co-operation between the member states of the CIS. In July 1993 Ukraine also agreed in principle to establish an economic and customs union with Russia and Belarus. Although privatization began in 1994, foreign participation has been very limited and the larger industrial sector enterprises are still for the most part state-owned. In Feb. 1998 a 10-year economic agreement was signed between Ukraine and Russia; but economic crisis in Russia inevitably had its impact on Ukraine. The hryvna lost half of its value in Sept. 1998 and though the IMF, EU and World Bank advanced more than US$700m., interest rates were pushed up to 82%.

Performance. Ukraine's economy has been in a dire situation. Between 1994 and 1998 average annual real GDP growth was -10.0%, and it was still negative in 1999, at -0.4%. In 1998 total GDP was US$43.6bn.

Budget. 1997 budget (in 1,000m. hryvna): revenue, 28,112.0; expenditure, 34,312.7. Sources of revenue included: VAT, 8,242.3; profits tax, 5,792.1. Expenditure included: welfare, 15,949.3; population social protection, 5,607.7; defence, 1,738.9; administration, 2,974.9.

Currency. The unit of currency is the hryvna of 100 kopiykas, which replaced karbovanets on 2 Sept. 1996 at 100,000 karbovanets = 1 hryvna. Inflation was forecast to be 20% in 1999. It had been 16% in 1997, but 80% in 1996 and as high as 10,155% in the early 1990s. Foreign exchange reserves in Feb. 1998 were US$2,023m.; and gold reserves in Jan. 2000 were 170,000 troy oz.

Banking and Finance. A National Bank was founded in March 1991. It operates under government control, its Governor being appointed by the President with the approval of parliament. Its Governor is Viktor Yushchenko. There were 219 banks in all in 1996.

There is a stock exchange in Kyiv.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 53.9m. kW in 1997. In 1998 production was 171bn. kWh; in 1997 consumption per capita was 3,487 kWh. In 1997 there were 5 nuclear power stations producing 44.6% of output. A Soviet programme to greatly expand nuclear power-generating capacity in the country was abandoned in the wake of the 1986 accident at Chernobyl. Chernobyl was closed down on 15 Dec. 2000. It is planned that 2 new reactors will be built to replace it. Ukraine currently has 14 nuclear reactors in use.

Oil and Gas. In 1997 output of crude oil and gas concentrate was 4.1m. tonnes; in 1999 production of natural gas was 16.8bn. cu. metres with 1,120bn. cu. metres of proven gas reserves.

Water. In 1997 water consumption totalled 15,623m. cu. metres.

Minerals. Ukraine's industrial economy, accounting for more than a quarter of total employment, is based largely on the republic's vast mineral resources. The Donetsk Basin contains huge reserves of coal, and the nearby iron-ore reserves of Kryvy Rih are equally rich. Among Ukraine's other mineral resources are manganese, bauxite, nickel, titanium and salt. Coal accounts for roughly 30% of the country's energy production. Coal production, 1997, 79.0m. tonnes; iron ore production, 1998, 51m. tonnes; manganese production, 1997, 3.2m. tonnes; salt production, 1997 estimate, 2.5m. tonnes.

Agriculture. Ukraine has extremely fertile black-earth soils in the central and southern portions, totalling nearly two-thirds of the territory. The original vegetation of the area formed three broad belts that crossed the territory of Ukraine latitudinally. Mixed forest vegetation occupied the northern third of the country, forest-steppe the middle portion and steppe the southern third of the country. Now, however, much of the original vegetation has been cleared and replaced by cultivated crops. Ukraine is a major producer and exporter of a wide variety of agricultural products, including wheat and sugarbeets. Other crops include potatoes, vegetables, fruit, sunflowers, flax, buckwheat, cotton, tobacco, soya, hops and the rubber plant kok-sagyz. Livestock raising is also important. Agricultural production has suffered greatly since independence, however, and domestic food consumption has decreased. In 1997 there were 33.1m. ha of arable land and 1.0m. ha of permanent crops.

State farm members may leave and receive a portion of land free; the land may be resold.

Output (in 1,000 tonnes) in 1997: grain, 35,472; sugarbeets, 17,633; potatoes, 16,701; vegetables, 5,168; fruit and berries, 2,793; meat, 1,875; milk, 13,800. 8,242m. eggs were produced. At 1 Jan. 1998 there were 12.3m. cattle, 9.5m. pigs, 2.4m. sheep and goats, 102m. chickens and 19m. ducks.

Forestry. The area under forest in Ukraine in 1995 was 9.2m. ha. In 1998, 10.05m. cu. metres of timber were produced. In 1997 there were 24 national parks and reservations with a total area of 761,800 ha.

Environment. According to the World Bank Atlas carbon dioxide emissions in 1996 were the equivalent of 7.8 tonnes per capita.

Fisheries. In 1998 the catch totalled 462,308 tonnes, of which 457,422 tonnes were from sea fishing. The total catch in 1988 was 1,048,157 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

In 1997 there were 9,989 industrial enterprises. Output, 1997 (in tonnes unless otherwise stated): crude steel (1999), 27.5m.; rolled ferrous metals, 21m.; mineral fertilizer, 3.9m.; synthetic fibre, 10,600; paper and paperboard (1998), 261,000; cement, 5.1m.; sugar (1998), 2.16m.; milk products, 661,000; cigarettes, 54.5bn. units; processed meats, 558,000; butter, 117,000; fabrics, 82m. sq. metres; footwear, 10.4m. pairs; TV sets, 5.0m. units; refrigerators, 380,000 units; lathes, 2,300 units; motor cars, 2,000 units; tractors, 4,600 units.

Labour. At 1 Jan. 1997 the labour force totalled 28.4m. In 1997, 22.6m. were employed in business activity (37.9% in the state sector, 22.9% in the private sector and 39.2% in the collective sector). In Oct. 1996, according to the International Labour Organization, unemployment stood at 7.6%.

Trade Unions. There are 13 trade unions grouped in a Trades Union Federation (Chair, Oleksandr Stoyan).

CRIMEA

The Crimea is a peninsula extending southwards into the Black Sea with an area of 25,881 sq. km. Population (1991 estimate), 2,549,800 (Ethnic groups, Sept. 1993: Russians, 61·6%; Ukrainians, 23·6%; Tatars, 9·6%). The capital is Simferopol.

It was occupied by Tatars in 1239, conquered by Ottoman Turks in 1475 and retaken by Russia in 1783. In 1921 after the Communist revolution it became an autonomous republic, but was transformed into a province (oblast) of the Russian Federation in 1945, after the deportation of the Tatar population in 1944 for alleged collaboration with the German invaders in the Second World War. It was transferred to Ukraine in 1954 and became an autonomous republic in 1991. About half the surviving Tatar population of 0·4m. had returned from exile by mid-1992.

At elections held in 2 rounds on 16 and 30 Jan. 1994 Yuri Meshkov was elected President for a 4-year term by 38·5% and 72% of votes cast against 5 opponents. The electorate was 1·8m. Parliamentary elections were held on 29 March 1998. The status of Crimean Tartars was the central issue. Turn-out was around 63·6% and around 67·0% of votes cast were for the Communists. Communist leader Leonid Hrach was elected Chairman of the Supreme Council and Serhiy Kunitsyn was subsequently appointed Prime Minister.

On 2 Nov. 1995 parliament adopted a new constitution which defines the Crimea as 'an autonomous republic forming an integral part of Ukraine'. The status of 'autonomous republic' was confirmed by the 1996 Ukrainian Constitution, which provides for Crimea to have its own constitution as approved by its parliament. The Prime Minister is appointed by the Crimean parliament with the approval of the Ukrainian parliament.

The Prime Minister is Serhiy Kunitsyn.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

From Sha'am, 35 miles southwest of Ras Musam dam, for nearly 400 miles to Khor al Odeid at the southeastern end of the peninsula of Qatar, the coast, formerly known as the Trucial Coast, of the Gulf (together with 50 miles of the coast of the Gulf of Oman) belongs to the rulers of the 7 Trucial States. In 1820 these rulers signed a peace treaty with the British Government followed by further agreements under which the sheikhs undertook not to enter into any agreement with any power other than the British Government.

British forces withdrew from the Gulf at the end of 1971 and the treaties whereby the UK had been responsible for the defence and foreign relations were replaced by a treaty of friendship. The United Arab Emirates (formed 2 Dec. 1971) consists of the former Trucial States: Abu Dhabi, Dubai, Sharjah, Ajman, Umm al Qaiwain, Ras al-Khaimah (joined in Feb. 1972) and Fujairah. The small state of Kalba was merged with Sharjah in 1952.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Emirates are bounded in the north by the Persian (Arabian) Gulf, northeast by Oman, east by the Gulf of Oman and Oman, south and west by Saudi Arabia, and northwest by Qatar. Their area is approximately 32,300 sq. miles (83,657 sq. km), excluding over 100 offshore islands. The total population at the 1995 census was 2,377,453 (797,710 females). About one-tenth are nomads. Population density, 28 per sq. km. In 1998, 85.2% of the population lived in urban areas. Approximately 88% of the population are foreigners, the highest percentage in any country in the world.

The UN gives a projected population for 2010 of 2.87m.

The chief cities are Abu Dhabi, the federal capital (population of 904,000 in 1999), Dubai, Sharjah and Ras al-Khaimah. In addition to being the most populous Emirate, Abu Dhabi is also the wealthiest, ahead of Dubai.

The official language is Arabic; English is widely spoken.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

After the withdrawal of the Roman legions, 5th century Celtic Britain was invaded by Scandinavian and Teutonic tribes, collectively called the English. In the course of the next 150 years the English conquered the east and centre of the country, pinning down the Celtic Britons on the higher lands to the west. More than 200 years passed before the prevailing tribes recognized one king.

Then came the Danish invasion, their incomplete defeat by Alfred the Great, the consolidation of the kingdom under Alfred's successors and the Norman Conquest led by William, duke of Normandy, who was crowned king in 1066. When William died in 1087, he left Normandy to his eldest son Robert, thus separating it from England. The French dialect known as Anglo Norman was spoken by the ruling class in England for two centuries after the Conquest.

The Norman heritage was preserved also in the overlap between French and English feudal lords. Henry II, the founder of the Plantagenet dynasty, was feudatory lord of half France. But most of the French possessions were lost by Henry's son John. Thereafter, the Norman baronage came to regard themselves as English.

The ambitions of Edward III began and those of Henry V renewed the Hundred Years War (1338–1453) with France, which ended with the loss of all the remaining French possessions except Calais.

The dynastic struggle between the rival houses of York and Lancaster culminated in the Tudor ascendancy over political and clerical factions. Henry VII was a unifying monarch preparing the way for Henry VIII who forced the Church to submit to lay rule. Tudor power reached its zenith with Elizabeth I when England, allied with other Protestant powers, humbled the Spanish Armada.

Elizabeth's death brought on a great struggle for supremacy between Crown and Parliament. There followed the Civil War, the execution of Charles I, the rule of Protector Cromwell by military dictatorship, and the restoration of the Stuart monarchy on terms which conceded financial authority and thus decision-making power to Parliament.

The attempt of James II to restore the royal prerogative led to the intervention of William of Orange. James fled the country and the crown was taken by William and his wife Mary as Queen. The accession of William involved England in a protracted war against France but before peace was achieved, the 1688 revolution was confirmed by the Hanoverian succession, and the history of England was merged with that of Great Britain by the union with Scotland in 1707.

The United Kingdom may be said to date from 1707 when the parliaments of England and Scotland were united but the name was not adopted until 1801 when the government of Ireland was incorporated into the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. With the accession of the Hanoverian George I (1714), the system of Parliamentary party government took hold. Relations between Parliament and Crown went through an unsettled period in the reign of George III, who took the blame for the loss of the American colonies. The War of Independence ended with Britain's recognition of American right to self-government in 1783. The humiliation was softened by economic development at home where the Industrial Revolution was in full swing. In 1793 revolutionary France declared war, and was not finally defeated until 1815. The demands of war stimulated the new, steam-powered industries. After 1815 there was frequent unrest as an increasingly urban and industrial society found its interests poorly represented by a parliament composed chiefly of landowners. The Reform Act of 1832 improved representation in Parliament, and further acts (1867, 1884, 1918 and 1928) led gradually to universal adult suffrage. The accession of Victoria in 1837 was the beginning of an era of unprecedented material progress. Early industrial development produced great national wealth but its distribution was uneven and the condition of the poor improved slowly. Whereas early Victorian reforms were responses to obvious distress, governments after 1868 were more inclined towards preventive state action.

Abroad, there was war with Russia in the Crimea (1854–56); most wars, however, were fought to conquer or pacify colonies. The 19th-century empire included India, Canada, Australasia, and vast territories in Africa and Eastern Asia. After 1870 the Suez Canal enabled Britain to control the empire more efficiently; she became a 40% shareholder in 1875 and the controlling power in Egypt in 1882.

The most serious imperial wars were the Boer Wars of 1881 and 1899–1902. Britain negotiated a Union of South Africa, by which South Africa enjoyed the same autonomy agreed for Canada (1867), Australia (1901) and later New Zealand (1907). The 'dominion status' of these countries was clarified by the Statute of Westminster (1931).

On 3 Aug. 1914 Germany invaded Belgium. Britain was obliged by treaty to retaliate by declaring war. At this time, a rebellion was staged in Ireland, born of the failure of successive attempts to agree a formula for Irish Home Rule. The issue was complicated by factional disagreement in southern Ireland and the wish of northern Ireland to remain in the United Kingdom. In 1920 after four years' conflict the Government of Ireland Act partitioned the country. The northern six counties remained British, a parliament was created and a Unionist government took office. The southern 26 counties moved by stages to complete independence as the Republic of Ireland.

Germany revived as a military power in the 1930s, and invaded Poland on 1 Sept. 1939. Britain, bound once more by treaty, declared war. The Second World War ended with German and Japanese defeat in 1945. It was a time of great social upheaval. In the 1945 election a Labour government was returned with a large majority, and a socialist programme which emphasized wealth distribution above wealth creation was implemented. Subsequent governments modified but generally accepted the changes. After 1979, however, Conservative governments reversed much of this legislation before Labour regained power in 1997 on a free-market manifesto which promised better economic management and job creation.

Beginning with the independence and partition of India and Pakistan in 1947, there was rapid progress to independence for all the colonies. The new concept was of a Commonwealth of freely associated states, recognizing the British monarch as symbolic Commonwealth head (some states chose to retain the monarch as head of state).

The Second World War all but bankrupted Britain, but the option of joining other European countries in moves towards unity was resisted in favour of a 'special relationship' with the USA. It was not until 1961 that economic reality persuaded Britain of the need to join the European Economic Community. The application was rebuffed by France but a second application was successful in 1973. Membership of the Community was endorsed by referendum in 1975.

11 'Standard Regions' (also classified as 'level 1 regions' for EU purposes) are identified in the UK as economic planning regions. They have no administrative significance. They are: Northern Ireland, Scotland, Wales, and 8 regions of England. Estimated population of the regions of England (in 1,000), 1999, East Anglia, 2,196; East Midlands, 4,191; West Midlands, 5,336; North, 3,073; North West, 6,389; South East, 18,586 (including Greater London, 7,285); South West, 4,936; Yorkshire and Humberside, 5,047. Although the populations of most of the regions increased during the 1990s, both the North and the North West saw their populations decline, by 19,000 and 7,000 respectively between 1991 and 1999.

Following the local government reorganization in the mid-1990s, there is a mixed pattern to local government in England. Apart from Greater London, England is divided into 34 counties with 2 tiers of administration; a county council and district councils. There are 6 metropolitan county areas containing 36 single-tier metropolitan districts.

In addition, there are 46 single-tier unitary authorities which, with the exception of the Isle of Wight, were formally district councils in the shire counties of England. The Isle of Wight is a unitary county council.

As a consequence of the establishment of the 46 unitary authorities, a number of county areas were abolished. These were Avon, Cleveland and Humberside. Berkshire County Council was also abolished but the county itself is retained for ceremonial purposes. Greater London comprises 32 boroughs and the City of London.

London: Located in the southeast of England on the River Thames with a population of over 7.6m., London is the third largest city in Europe, after Paris and Moscow, and is a major banking, insurance and commodities centre. With origins dating back to Roman times, London has a rich historical and cultural fabric, which serves to attract swathes of tourists despite a crumbling transport infrastructure.

The following table shows the distribution of the urban and rural population of England and Wales (persons present) in 1951, 1961, 1971, and 1981:

Urban and rural areas were re-defined for the 1981 and 1991 censuses on a land use basis. In Scotland 'localities' correspond to urban areas. The 1981 census gave the usually resident population of England and Wales as 48,521,596, of which 43,599,431 were in urban areas; and of Scotland as 5,035,315, of which 4,486,140 were in localities.

The birthplaces of the 1991 usually resident population in Scotland were: Scotland, 4,454,065; England, 354,268; Wales, 14,710; Northern Ireland, 26,393; Ireland 22,773; Commonwealth, 59,134; foreign countries, 148,987.

British Citizenship. Under the British Nationality Act 1981 there are 3 main forms of citizenship: citizenship for persons closely connected with the UK; British Dependent Territories citizenship; British Overseas citizenship. British citizenship is acquired automatically at birth by a child born in the UK if his or her mother or father is a British citizen or is settled in the UK. A child born abroad to a British citizen is a British citizen by descent. British citizenship may be acquired by registration for stateless persons, and for children not automatically acquiring such citizenship or born abroad to parents who are citizens by descent; and, for other adults, by naturalization. Requirements for the latter include 5 years' residence (3 years for applicants married to a British citizen). The Hong Kong (British Nationality) Order 1986 created the status of British National (Overseas) for citizens connected with Hong Kong before 1997, and the British Nationality (Hong Kong) Act 1990 made provision for up to 50,000 selected persons to register as British citizens.

In 1995, 40,500 persons were granted citizenship and a further 26,000 under the Hong Kong Act.

Emigration and Immigration. Immigration is mainly governed by the Immigration Act 1970 and Immigration Rules made under it. British and Commonwealth citizens with the right of abode before 1983 are not subject to immigration control, nor are citizens of European Economic Area countries. Other persons seeking to work or settle in the UK must obtain a visa or entry clearance.

Migration statistics are derived from the government's International Passenger Survey, and exclude the Republic of Ireland.

In 1999 there were 97,120 acceptances for settlement in the UK (69,790 in 1998), including from: Asia, 40,090; Africa, 27,020; Europe, 15,190. Main individual countries were: Pakistan, 11,860; India, 6,290; Yugoslavia, 5,760; Sri Lanka, 5,370; Turkey, 5,220; USA, 3,760; Ghana, 3,480; Bangladesh, 3,280; Nigeria, 3,180; Somalia, 3,180.

Asylum. In 1998 there were 57,700 applications for asylum (29,640 applications in 1996 and 2,905 in 1984). The 1998 figure was the second highest in Europe, after Germany. The rate in 1998 of 0.99 per 1,000 inhabitants was more than twice that in France but almost a third of that in the Netherlands and nearly a sixth that in Switzerland. In 1999 the number of applications rose to 71,160. While respecting its obligations to political refugees under the UN Convention and Protocol relating to the status of Refugees, the government has powers under the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996 to weed out applicants seeking entry for non-political reasons and to designate certain countries as not giving risk of persecution. 24% of applicants were accepted in 1998 (6% in 1995).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

UK statistics, 1999: births, 700,000 (272,000 outside marriage); deaths, 632,000; marriages, 301,083; divorces, 158,746. Great Britain statistics, 1999: births, 677,000; deaths, 616,000; marriages, 293,455; divorces, 156,420; abortions, 190,356 (1998). The number of births in 1999 was the lowest since 1978. In 1976, uniquely in British history, deaths in the UK (680,800) exceeded births (675,500). Coronary heart disease accounts for approximately 23% of all deaths and cancer 20%. UK life expectancy, 1997–99: males, 74.9 years; females, 79.8. A World Health Organization report published in June 2000 put Britons in 14th place in a 'healthy life expectancy' list, with an expected 71.7 years of healthy life for babies born in 1999. Annual population growth rate, 1990–99, 0.2%. In 1997 the suicide rate per 100,000 population was 10.2 (men, 15.5; women, 5.0). The average rate in the European Union as a whole in 1998 was 11.9 per 100,000. Infant mortality, 1999, 5.8 per 1,000 live births. Fertility rate, 1999, 1.7 births per woman. Of the estimated 726,000 live births in the UK in 1997, 37% were to unmarried women, up from 6% in 1961 and 23% in 1987. In 1998 the average age of a woman giving birth was 28.9 years, the highest average age since records began in 1964. In 1999 for the first time there were more births to women in the 30–34 age group than in the 25–29 bracket. Britain has the highest rate of live births among teenagers in the EU, at 30 per 1,000 women in 1996. Portugal has the second highest, with 20 per 1,000 and the Netherlands the lowest, with 6 per 1,000. UK birth rate (per 1,000 population), 1999, 11.8; death rate, 1999, 10.6. 36% of births in 1996 were outside marriage. The average age of first marriage in 1997 was 27.5 years for brides and 29.6 years for bridegrooms, compared to 24.3 years and 26.4 years respectively in 1987. 40% of marriages in 1999 were religious and 60% civil, compared to 52% religious and 48% civil in 1981.

In 1997, 15.7% of the total population was over 65, up from 11.7% in 1960. As the ageing population continues to grow, it has been estimated that by 2010 there will be 350,000 more people over the age of 80 than there were at the end of the 20th century. The first decade of the new century is also expected to see a rise of 1.4m, or 23% in the number of people between 55 and 64. By 2000 the number of centenarians had surpassed 8,000.

In 2000 the average household in Great Britain consisted of 2.4 people, down from 3.1 in 1961. The proportion of single-parent families was 25% in 1998, up from 21% in 1996.

England and Wales statistics (in 1,000), 1998 (and 1997): births, 636 (643); deaths, 555 (555); marriages, 273 (279); divorces, 147 (157).

Britain has one of the highest rates of drug usage in Europe. Figures released in Nov. 1999 showed that approaching 40% of schoolchildren aged 15 and 16 have tried cannabis, and 9% of adults did so in the previous 12 months. Use of ecstasy, amphetamines and LSD in England and Wales was the highest in the European Union.

A UNICEF report published in 2000 showed that 19.8% of children in Great Britain live in poverty (in households with income below 50% of the national median), compared to just 2.6% in Sweden. The report also showed that the poverty rate of children in lone-parent families was 45.6%, compared to 13.3% in two-parent families.

CLIMATE

The climate is cool temperate oceanic, with mild conditions and rainfall evenly distributed over the year, though the weather is very changeable because of cyclonic influences. In general, temperatures are higher in the west and lower in the east in winter and rather the reverse in summer. Rainfall amounts are greatest in the west, where most of the high ground occurs.

The Queen's legal title rests on the statute of 12 and 13 Will. III, ch. 3, by which the succession to the Crown of Great Britain and Ireland was settled on the Princess Sophia of Hanover and the 'heirs of her body being Protestants'. By proclamation of 17 July 1917 the royal family became known as the House and Family of Windsor. On 8 Feb. 1960 the Queen issued a declaration varying her confirmatory declaration of 9 April 1952 to the effect that while the Queen and her children should continue to be known as the House of Windsor, her descendants, other than descendants entitled to the style of Royal Highness and the title of Prince or Princess, and female descendants who marry and their descendants should bear the name of Mountbatten-Windsor.

Lineage to the throne: 1) Prince of Wales. 2) Prince William of Wales. 3) Prince Henry of Wales. 4) Duke of York. 5) Princess Beatrice of York. 6) Princess Eugenie of York.

By letters patent of 30 Nov. 1917 the titles of Royal Highness and Prince or Princess are restricted to the Sovereign's children, the children of the Sovereign's sons and the eldest living son of the eldest son of the Prince of Wales.

Provision is made for the support of the royal household, after the surrender of hereditary revenues, by the settlement of the Civil List soon after the beginning of each reign. The Civil List Act of 1 Jan. 1972 provided for a decennial, and the Civil List (Increase of Financial Provision) Order 1975 for an annual review of the List, but in July 1990 it was again fixed for one decade.

The Civil List of 1991–2000 provided for an annuity of £7,900,000 to the Queen; £359,000 to Prince Philip; £643,000 to Queen Elizabeth (the Queen Mother); £228,000 to the Princess Royal; £219,000 to the Princess Margaret; £249,000 to the Duke of York; £96,000 to Prince Edward (£141,000 following his marriage in 1999); £87,000 to Princess Alice. However, since April 1993 only the Queen, Prince Philip and the Queen Mother have received payments from the Civil List. The income of the Prince of Wales derives from the Duchy of Cornwall. The Civil List was exempted from taxation in 1910. The Queen has paid income tax on her private income since April 1993.

The supreme legislative power is vested in Parliament, which consists of the Crown, the House of Lords and the House of Commons, and dates in its present form from the middle of the 14th century. A Bill which is passed by both Houses and receives Royal Assent becomes an Act of Parliament and part of statute law.

Parliament is summoned, and a General Election is called, by the sovereign on the advice of the Prime Minister. A Parliament may last up to 5 years, normally divided into annual sessions. A session is ended by prorogation, and all Public Bills which have not been passed by both Houses then lapse. A Parliament ends by dissolution, either by will of the sovereign or by lapse of the 5-year period.

Under the Parliament Acts 1911 and 1949, all Money Bills (so certified by the Speaker of the House of Commons), if not passed by the Lords without amendment, may become law without their concurrence within 1 month of introduction in the Lords. Public Bills, other than Money Bills or a Bill extending the maximum duration of Parliament, if passed by the Commons in 2 successive sessions and rejected each time by the Lords, may become law without being passed by the Lords provided that 1 year has elapsed between Commons second reading in the first session and third reading in the second session, and that the Bill reaches the Lords at least 1 month before the end of the second session. The Parliament Acts have been used three times since 1949: in 1991 for the War Crimes Act, in 1999 for the European Parliamentary Elections Act and for the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act in 2000.

Peerages are created by the sovereign, with no limits on their number. There are 4 broad types of Lord with rights to take seats in the House of Lords: 1) Lords Spiritual, comprising 2 archbishops and the 24 most senior diocesan bishops of the Church of England. They cease to be members when they retire; 2) hereditary peers—at 1 Dec. 1999 there were 3 categories of hereditary peers in the House under the terms of the House of Lords Act 1999: 75 elected by fellow hereditary members of their party and crossbench group, 15 office holders elected by the whole House and 2 peers sitting by virtue of holding Royal Office (the Duke of Norfolk; the Earl Marshal and the Marquess of Cholmondeley, the Lord Great Chamberlain). All other hereditary peers ceased to be members of the House at the end of the 1998–99 session on 11 Nov. 1999; 3) life peers—in Jan. 2001 there were 645 lords who had been given a peerage for their own lifetime only under the Life Peerages Act 1958; 4) Lords of Appeal (Law Lords) (both active and retired)—there were 28 peers, granted a peerage for life under the Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876, in order to enable them to hear appeal cases in the House of Lords. The full House thus consists of 691 lords, of whom 111 are women. The average attendance at each sitting of the House for end of session 1999–2000 was 352.

In Jan. 1999 the government brought forward a Bill to fulfill its election manifesto pledge to remove the voting and sitting rights of the hereditary peers. The Bill received Royal Assent on 11 Nov. 1999.

The House of Commons consists of members (of both sexes) representing constituencies determined by the Boundary Commissions. Persons under 21 years of age, Clergy of the Church of England and of the Scottish Episcopal Church, Ministers of the Church of Scotland, Roman Catholic clergymen, civil servants, members of the regular armed forces, policemen, most judicial officers and other office-holders named in the House of Commons (Disqualification) Act are disqualified from sitting in the House of Commons. No peer eligible to sit in the House of Lords can be elected to the House of Commons unless he has disclaimed his title, but Irish peers and holders of courtesy titles, who are not members of the House of Lords, are eligible.

The Representation of the People Act 1948 abolished the business premises and University franchises, and the only persons entitled to vote at Parliamentary elections are those registered as residents or as service voters. No person may vote in more than one constituency at a general election. Persons may apply on certain grounds to vote by post or by proxy. Elections are held on the first-past-the-post system, in which the candidate who receives the most votes is elected.

All persons over 18 years old and not subject to any legal incapacity to vote and who are either British subjects or citizens of Ireland are entitled to be included in the register of electors for the constituency containing the address at which they were residing on the qualifying date for the register, and are entitled to vote at elections held during the period for which the register remains in force.

Members of the armed forces, Crown servants employed abroad, and the wives accompanying their husbands, are entitled, if otherwise qualified, to be registered as 'service voters' provided they make a 'service declaration'. To be effective for a particular register, the declaration must be made on or before the qualifying date for that register. In certain circumstances, British subjects living abroad may also vote.

The Parliamentary Constituencies Act 1986, as amended by the Boundary Commissions Act 1992, provided for the setting up of Boundary Commissions for England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland. The Commissions' last reports were made in 1995, and thereafter reports are due at intervals of not less than 8 and not more than 12 years; and may be submitted from time to time with respect to the area comprised in any particular constituency or constituencies where some change appears necessary. Any changes giving effect to reports of the Commissions are to be made by Orders in Council laid before Parliament for approval by resolution of each House. The Parliamentary electorate of the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland in the register in 1998 numbered 44,296,793, of whom 36,885,805 were in England, 2,230,451 in Wales, 3,992,502 in Scotland and 1,188,034 in Northern Ireland. In 1991 it was officially estimated that 7.1% of eligible voters failed to register on the electoral roll.

At the UK general election held in June 2001, 659 members were returned, 529 from England, 72 from Scotland, 40 from Wales and 18 from Northern Ireland. Every constituency returns a single member.

One of the main aspects of the Labour government's programme of constitutional reform is Scottish and Welsh devolution. In the referendum on Scottish devolution on 11 Sept. 1997, 1,775,045 votes (74.3%) were cast in favour of a Scottish parliament and 614,400 against (25.7%). The turn-out was 60.4%, so around 44.8% of the total electorate voted in favour. For the second question, on the Parliament's tax-raising powers, 1,512,889 votes were cast in favour (63.5%) and 870,263 against (36.5%). This represented 38.4% of the total electorate.

On 18 Sept. 1997 in Wales there were 559,419 votes cast in favour of a Welsh assembly (50.3%) and 552,698 against (49.7%). The turn-out was 51.3%.

In Aug. 1911 provision was first made for the payment of a salary of £400 per annum to members of the Commons, other than those already in receipt of salaries as officers of the House, as Ministers or as officers of Her Majesty's household. For current salaries see below. Members of the House of Lords are unsalaried but may recover expenses incurred in attending sittings of the House within maxima for each day's attendance of £37.00 for day subsistence, £84.00 for night subsistence and £36.00 for secretarial and research assistance and office expenses. Additionally, Members of the House who are disabled may recover the extra cost of attending the House incurred by reason of their disablement. In connection with attendance at the House and parliamentary duties within the UK, Lords may also recover the cost of travelling to and from home.

The executive government is vested nominally in the Crown, but practically in a committee of Ministers, called the Cabinet, which is dependent on the support of a majority in the House of Commons. The head of the Cabinet is the Prime Minister, a position first constitutionally recognized in 1905. The Prime Minister's colleagues in the Cabinet are appointed on his recommendation.

Salaries: Members of Parliament receive an annual parliamentary salary of £48,371 (2000–01). The salaries of Ministers who are MPs include this as a component in addition to their ministerial salary. Total salaries accepted for 2000–01: Prime Minister, £112,951; Cabinet Ministers, £96,887 (Cabinet Ministers in the House of Lords, £72,729); Lord Chancellor, £167,760; Ministers of State, £82,697 (in the Lords £66,294); Parliamentary Under-Secretaries, £74,424 (in the Lords, £57,244); Government Chief Whip, £96,887 (in the Lords, £66,294); Leader of the Opposition, £109,030 (in the Lords, £57,244); Speaker, £114,543; Attorney-General, £90,125; Solicitor-General, £106,027; Advocate-General for Scotland, £106,027. In addition to pay, MPs are entitled to Office Costs, Supplementary London, Additional Costs, Mileage, Temporary Assistance and Winding Up Allowances, reimbursement of costs due to recall during a recess and a Resettlement Grant. Ministers receive a severance payment of 3 months' salary.

The Prime Minister is entitled to a salary of £110,287 in addition to the parliamentary salary of £48,371 but decided to accept the reduced salary of £64,580 (giving the total of £112,951). Cabinet ministers are entitled to salaries of £66,172 (Commons) and £85,983 (Lords), but they also decided to accept the reduced rates of £48,516 and £72,729. Cabinet ministers in the Commons receive the parliamentary salary of £48,516, to give a total of £96,887; those in the Lords do not receive the parliamentary salary.

The Privy Council: Before the development of the Cabinet System, the Privy Council was the chief source of executive power, but now its functions are largely formal. It advises the monarch to approve Orders in Council and on the issue of royal proclamations, and has some independent powers such as the supervision of the registration of the medical profession. It consists of all Cabinet members, the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, the Speaker of the House of Commons and senior British and Commonwealth statesmen. There are a number of advisory Privy Council committees. The Judicial Committee is the final court of appeal from courts of the UK dependencies, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, and some Commonwealth countries.

Local Government. Local Administration is carried out by 4 different types of bodies, namely: (i) local branches of some central ministries, such as the Departments of Health and Social Security; (ii) local sub-managements of nationalized industries; (iii) specialist authorities such as the National Rivers Authority; and (iv) the system of local government described below. The phrase 'local government' has come to mean that part of the local administration conducted by elected councils. There are separate systems for England, Wales and Scotland.

The Local Government Act 1992 established a Local Government Commission, which completed its report in 1996 on whether the two-tier local government structure should be replaced by unitary authorities in some areas. Following its recommendations, 27 new unitary councils had been established by April 1997. The Commission is currently reviewing electoral arrangements.

Local government is conducted by elected councils at different levels of administration. England, Wales and Scotland have different systems. See under 'Local Government' in England, Scotland and Wales for more details.

Resident citizens of the UK, Ireland, a Commonwealth country or an EU country may (at age 18) vote and (at age 21) stand for election. In England, councils are elected for 4 years, except that in the metropolitan and one-third of the other districts, one-third of councillors are elected in each of the 3 years that no county council election is held. Counties are divided into electoral divisions and districts into wards. In Wales, elections for the full councils are held every 4 years, and in Scotland every 3 years. The chair of the council is one of the councillors elected by the rest. In boroughs and cities his or her title is Mayor. Mayors of cities may have the title of Lord Mayor conferred on them. 53 towns in England and Wales and 5 in Scotland have the status of city. Brighton and Hove, Wolverhampton and Inverness were awarded city status in 2000. It is intended to create 4 more cities to mark Queen Elizabeth II's golden jubilee in 2002.

Finance. Revenue is derived from the Council Tax, which supports about one-fifth of current expenditure, the remainder being funded by central government grants and by the redistribution of revenue from the national non-domestic rate (property tax). Capital expenditure is financed by borrowing within government-set limits and sales of real estate.

Election Results. On 6 April 1995 elections were held for the 29 newly-created unitary councils. 1,161 seats were contested. Labour won 614 seats with 47% of votes cast, and gained control of 20 of the councils; the Scottish National Party won 181 seats with 26% and gained 3 councils; the Liberal Democrats won 123 seats with 10%; the Conservative Party won 81 seats with 11%. Independents gained control of 3 councils, and 3 councils had no overall control.

At the elections of 2 May 1996 for 32 metropolitan and 114 non-metropolitan and unitary councils, Labour took control of 84 councils and gained 431 seats, the Liberal Democrats took control of 23 councils and gained 142 seats, the Conservatives took control of 3 councils and lost 534 seats, and independents took control of 3 councils and lost 29 seats. In 33 councils no party gained an absolute majority.

County council elections and those for 19 further new unitary authorities took place on 1 May 1997. Elections for the 1,014 seats on the unitary authorities created shadow councils whose job was to prepare the area for transfer to the new status in April 1998. Councillors for these areas did not stand for election but stepped down in April 1998 leaving those elected on 1 May 1997 in charge.

Local government elections for 362 councils on 6 May 1999 resulted in Labour having control of 137 councils, the Conservatives 61, the Liberal Democrats 20, ind. 18, Plaid Cymru 3 and the Scottish National Party 1, with no overall control in 122. The Conservatives gained 1,437 seats and Labour lost 1,346 but with Labour having 4,802 councillors against 3,766 Conservatives, it was the first time in the 20th century that the party in government had been ahead after mid-term local elections. The Liberal Democrats lost 186 seats, independents lost 86 and SNP and Plaid Cymru between them gained 150 seats. In local elections in England on 4 May 2000 the Conservatives had a net gain of 593 seats and gained control of 16 councils, Labour lost 572 seats and 15 councils, and the Liberal Democrats lost 18 seats and 1 council.

The first election to provide London with an elected Mayor and a 25-member London Assembly took place on 4 May 2000. For the election of Mayor, London is treated as one constituency and each voter allocated a 1st and 2nd choice vote. Any candidate receiving more than half of all 1st choice votes automatically becomes Mayor. If no candidate receives more than half of 1st choice votes then the two candidates with the most 1st choice votes remain in the contest and all other candidates drop out. The 2nd choice votes of eliminated candidates are then counted and added to the 1st choice votes of the remaining candidates. The candidate with the most 1st and 2nd choice votes then becomes Mayor of London. Ken Livingstone (independent) won with 57.92% of the vote after second preferences, receiving 776,427 first and second votes altogether (667,877 as first votes), beating Steve Norris (Conservative) into second place. Ken Livingstone took office on 3 July 2000. For the election of London Assembly members London is divided into 14 constituencies. Each constituency elects one member, in addition to which there are 11 'London Member' seats.

Turn-out in local and regional elections in Britain is among the lowest in Europe, averaging around 40%.

DEFENCE

The Defence Council was established on 1 April 1964 under the chairmanship of the Secretary of State for Defence, who is responsible to the Sovereign and Parliament for the defence of the realm. Vested in the Defence Council are the functions of commanding and administering the Armed Forces. The Secretary of State heads the Department of Defence.

Defence policy decision-making is a collective governmental responsibility. Important matters of policy are considered by the full Cabinet or, more frequently, by the Defence and Overseas Policy Committee under the chairmanship of the Prime Minister.

In 2000 there were 20,610 UK armed forces personnel based in Germany, 1,050 based in Brunei, 3,200 based in Cyprus and 330 in Gibraltar. In addition there were 2,700 serving as part of SFOR II in Bosnia, 300 in Iraq/Kuwait (all RAF) and an estimated 3,500 in Yugoslavia.

The ban on homosexuals serving in the armed forces, which had been upheld by a House of Commons vote in May 1996, was suspended in Sept. 1999 after the European Court of Human Rights ruled that the current ban was unlawful.

Defence Budget. In 1999 defence spending totalled US$36,876m. Per capita defence expenditure totalled US$628 (US$835 per capita in 1985) and 2.6% as a percentage of GDP, down from 5.2% in 1985.

Nuclear Weapons. Having carried out its first test in 1952, there have been 45 tests in all. The nuclear arsenal consisted of approximately 185 warheads in Jan. 2000 according to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute.

Arms Trade. The UK is a net-exporter of arms and in 1999 was the world's second largest exporter after the USA (with sales worth US$9,986m., or 18.7% of the world total). In 1987 sales had been worth US$7.65bn., but had only represented 8.3% of the world total.

In 1996 arms production was 90% of what it had been in 1990 (this compares with 70% in France, 60% in the USA and 10% in Russia). 45% of the UK arms industry is dependent on exports.

In 1998 British Aerospace (BAe) was the 4th largest arms producing company in the OECD, behind Lockheed Martin, Boeing and Raytheon. It accounted for US$10.52bn. of arms sales (Lockheed Martin US$17.88bn., Boeing US$15.90bn.; Raytheon, US$12.48bn.). GEC was the 5th largest producer, accounting for US$7.01bn. of sales, and Rolls Royce was the 16th largest (US$2.15bn.).

Approximately 46% of the UK's arms sales in 1997 were to Saudi Arabia. The last Tornado aircraft of a contract dating from 1993 was delivered to Saudi Arabia in 1998. The UK was the 27th largest recipient of major conventional weapons in the world during the period 1995-99, spending US$155m. in 1999.

Army. The Field Army is run from Headquarters Land Command, based at Wilton. The Ministry of Defence retains direct control of units in Northern Ireland, although day-to-day military responsibility is given to the Chief of the General Staff. The Permanent Joint Headquarters, recently formed at Northwood, is responsible for overseas garrisons, which include the Falkland Islands, Cyprus and Brunei.

The established strength of the Regular Army in 2000 was 113,950 which includes soldiers under training and Gurkhas. In addition there were some 4,200 Royal Irish Home Service soldiers. There were 3,670 Gurkhas and 6,380 women in 2000. The strength of the Regular Reserves was 187,200. There were 7,300 soldiers based in Northern Ireland in 2000.

The role of the Territorial Army (TA) is to act as a general Reserve for the Army by reinforcing it as required, with individuals, sub-units and other units, either in the UK or overseas; and by providing the framework and basis for regeneration and reconstruction to cater for the unforeseen in times of national emergency. The TA also provides a nationwide link between the military and civil communities. Strength, 2000, 43,300 (soon to be reduced to 41,200). In addition, men who have completed service in the Regular Army normally have some liability to serve in the Regular Reserve. All members of the TA and Regular Reserve may be called out by a Queen's Order in time of emergency of imminent national danger, and most of the TA and a large proportion of the Regular Reserve may be called out by a Queen's Order when warlike operations are in preparation or in progress. The Home Service Battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment are only liable for service in Northern Ireland.

Equipment includes 410 Challenger, 192 Challenger 2 and 14 Chieftain main battle tanks and 11 Scorpion light tanks.

Women serve throughout the Army in the same regiments and corps as men. There are only a few roles in which they are not employed such as the Infantry and Royal Armoured Corps.

Navy. Control of the Royal Navy is vested in the Defence Council and is exercised through the Admiralty Board, chaired by the Secretary of State for Defence.

Changes in management structure, reductions in strength, base closures and rationalization were initiated in 1994. The Chief of Fleet Support and Controller of the Navy are now located in the Bristol area and their various support agencies rationalized. The naval bases at Rosyth and Portland closed in 1995. Although the dockyards at Rosyth and Devonport remain largely committed to naval refit work, both yards have now been sold to commercial operators.

The C.-in-C. Fleet, headquartered at Northwood, is responsible for the command of the fleet, while command of naval establishments in the UK is exercised by the C.-in-C. Naval Home Command from Portsmouth. Main naval bases are at Devonport, Portsmouth and Faslane, with a minor base overseas at Gibraltar.

The Royal Naval Reserve (RNR) and the Royal Marines Reserve (RMR) are volunteer forces which together in 2000 numbered 4,050. The RNR provides trained personnel in war to supplement regular forces. In addition, men who have completed service in the Royal Navy and the Royal Marines have a commitment to serve in the Royal Fleet Reserve, currently 24,450-strong.

The roles of the Royal Navy are first, to deploy the national strategic nuclear deterrent, second to provide maritime defence of the UK and its dependent territories, third to contribute to the maritime elements of NATO's force structure and fourth to meet national maritime objectives outside the NATO area. Personnel strength has reduced steadily over the past 5 years and is now stabilizing at about 43,770 (including Royal Marines) in 2000, with operational strength at 12 nuclear attack submarines, 2 aircraft carriers (with an additional 1 in refit) and 34 destroyers and frigates.

The strategic deterrent is now borne principally by the 4 new Trident submarines—Vanguard, Victorious, Vigilant and Vengeance. They are each capable of deploying 16 US-built Trident II D5 missiles. The last missile submarine of the Resolution class, Renown, deploying Polaris missiles, decommissioned in Aug. 1996.

The principal surface ships are the Light vertical/short take-off and landing Aircraft Carriers of the Invincible class (Invincible, Illustrious and Ark Royal) completed 1980–85, embarking an air group including Sea Harrier vertical/short take-off and landing fighters. 2 of these ships are maintained in the operational fleet, with the third (currently Ark Royal) either in refit or reserve. A new Helicopter Carrier, specifically designed for amphibious operations, HMS Ocean, has now entered service.

The Fleet Air Arm, 6,740-strong in 1999, has some 300 aircraft including 33 combat aircraft (Sea Harrier vertical/short take-off and landing fighter aircraft) and 109 armed helicopters.

The Royal Marines corps, 6,740-strong in 2000, provides a commando brigade comprising 3 commando groups. The Special Boat Squadron and specialist defence units complete the operational strength.

Air Force. The Royal Flying Corps was established in May 1912, with military and naval wings, of which the latter became the independent Royal Naval Air Service in July 1914. On 2 Jan. 1918 an Air Ministry was formed, and on 1 April 1918 the Royal Flying Corps and the Royal Naval Air Service were amalgamated, under the Air Ministry, as the Royal Air Force (RAF).

In 1937 the units based on aircraft carriers and naval shore stations again passed to the operational and administrative control of the Admiralty, as the Fleet Air Arm. In 1964 control of the RAF became a responsibility of the Ministry of Defence.

The RAF is administered by the Air Force Board, of which the Secretary of State for Defence is Chairman. Following recommendations in the 1998 Strategic Defence Review, which placed increased emphasis on Joint and Expeditionary operations, the RAF has experienced considerable restructuring. It is organized into 2 commands: Strike Command and Personnel and Training Command. The creation of the tri-service Defence Logistics Organisation (DLO) as a result of the Strategic Defence Review resulted in the closure of Logistics Command on 31 Oct. 1999. Most of the logistics support functions previously carried out by the Command have now been subsumed into the new organization. However, those former Logistics Command Units responsible for tasks falling to the RAF rather than DLO have now been passed to the 2 remaining RAF Commands.

Strike Command's mission is to deliver and develop Air Power in the most effective manner to meet the UK's foreign and security policy. It is responsible for all of the RAF's frontline forces. It operates 462 combat aircraft (plus 132 in store) including 246 Tornados, 53 Jaguars and 64 Harriers (used for battlefield support).

As an expeditionary force, the RAF, on an increasing basis, exercises and operates overseas. Current and recent basing/deployments include the Falklands, Cyprus, Italy and the Balkans, Scandinavia, North America, the Middle East and the Far East. Headquarters RAF Strike Command is based at RAF High Wycombe.

RAF personnel, 1 Dec. 2000, 54,207 (including 5,475 women); total trained personnel, 50,021. Since Dec. 1991 women have been eligible to fly combat aircraft. There were 16,000 Air Force reserves in 2000 including 2,000 volunteers. In addition there were 27,000 ex-RAF personnel with a recall liability, having left the RAF with a service pension.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The UK is a member of the UN, WTO, NATO, BIS, OECD, EU, the Council of Europe, WEU, OSCE, CERN, the Commonwealth, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, Pacific Community and the Antarctic Treaty.

In 1998 the UK gave US$4bn. in international aid, representing 0.27% of its GDP. In actual terms this made the UK the 5th most generous country in the world, but as a percentage of GDP only the 14th most generous.

ECONOMY

In 1997 services accounted for 67% of GDP, industry 31.5% and agriculture 1.5%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, the UK ranked 10th in the world in 2000 in a survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 8.7 out of 10 in the annual index.

Since Britain emerged from one of the worst recessions in living memory in 1992 the economy has enjoyed continuous impressive growth with rising employment.

Performance. GDP at current market prices in 1999 was £891,583m. (US$1,442,153m.)

Economic growth was 3.0% in 2000 and is expected to be between 2.25% and 2.75% in 2001. Between 1997 and 2000 annual growth averaged 2.7%. Consumer demand in 2001 is expected to grow by between 3.25% and 3.5%, with manufacturing growth forecast at between 1.75% and 2%.

In the World Economic Forum's 1999 Global Competitiveness Report—which assesses countries on their potential for economic growth and their income levels—the United Kingdom came eighth, down from fourth in 1998. Although the UK topped the list of the 59 countries included in the report for finance, it came only 22nd for technology.

Budget. 'The latest projections of the public finances show that the underlying position remains strong. ... The current budget surplus is estimated to be £23bn. (nearly 2.5% of GDP) in 2000–01. The surplus is projected to be around 1.75% of GDP in 2001–02, 1.5% of GDP in 2002–03 and about 0.75% of GDP thereafter. In each year the current surplus is at least as high as in the Pre-Budget Report.'

Public sector net debt, which was 44% of GDP at the end of 1996–97, is projected to fall to 31.8% of GDP by the end of 2000–01, and to fall further to under 30% in 2002–03 and to remain at around 30% of GDP after March 2003. Net debt in every year is lower than in the Pre-Budget Report projections, by about 0.5% of GDP.

Cyclically-adjusted public sector net borrowing is estimated to be a repayment of 1.4% of GDP in 2000–01. A repayment of 0.3% of GDP is projected for 2001–02.' (HM Treasury, March 2001).

Currency. The unit of currency is the pound sterling (£; GBP) of 100 pence (p.). Before decimalization on 15 Feb. 1971 £1 = 20 shillings (s) of 12 pence (d). A gold standard was adopted in 1816, the sovereign or twenty-shilling piece weighing 7.98805 grammes 0.916²/₃ fine. Currency notes for £1 and 10s. were first issued by the Treasury in 1914, replacing the circulation of sovereigns. The issue of £1 and 10s. notes was taken over by the Bank of England in 1928. 10s. notes were withdrawn in 1970 and £1 notes (in England and Wales) in 1988. Sterling was a member of the European Monetary System from 8 Oct. 1990 until 16 Sept. 1992 ('Black Wednesday').

Inflation. Inflation averaged 2.1% in 2000, the lowest rate since 1963. It was forecast in the March 2001 budget to be 2.25% by March 2002 and 2.5% by the end of 2002.

Coinage. Coins in circulation at 31 Dec. 1999: £2, 132m.; £1, 1,089m.; 50p, 541m.; 20p, 1,797m.; 10p, 1,498m.; 5p, 3,530m.; 2p, 5,102m.; 1p, 8,459m. Commemorative coin: 1999 Millennium £5 Crowns, 2.7m.

Banknotes. The Bank of England issues notes in denominations of £5, £10, £20 and £50 up to the amount of the fiduciary issue. Under the provisions of the Currency Act 1983 the amount of the fiduciary issue is limited, but can be altered by direction of HM Treasury on the advice of the Bank of England. Since Nov. 1998 the limit has been £34,300m., although this was temporarily raised to £50,000m. over the millennium period.

All current series Bank of England notes are legal tender in England and Wales. Some banks in Scotland (Bank of Scotland, Clydesdale Bank and the Royal Bank of Scotland) and Northern Ireland (Bank of Ireland, First Trust Bank, Northern Bank and Ulster Bank) have note-issuing powers.

The total amount of Bank of England notes issued at 29 Dec. 1999 was £30,290m., of which £30,281m. represented notes with other banks and the public, and £9m. notes in the Banking Department of the Bank of England.

Foreign exchange reserves were approximately US$35bn. in April 2000 and gold reserves 22.98m. troy oz in April 1999.

Banking and Finance. The Bank of England, Threadneedle Street, London, is the government's banker and the 'banker's bank'. It has the sole right of note issue in England and Wales. It was founded by Royal Charter in 1694 and nationalized in 1946. The capital stock has, since 1 March 1946, been held by HM Treasury. The Governor (appointed for 5-year terms) is Sir Eddie George (b. 1938; took office 1993).

The statutory Bank Return is published weekly. End-Dec. figures are as follows (in £1m.):

Britain's largest bank is HSBC, both on assets and market capitalization. It had assets in June 2000 of US$569bn. Barclays is the second largest in terms of assets and Lloyds TSB the second largest in terms of market capitalization.

By Oct. 2000 approximately 5% of the British population were using e-banking.

In May 1997 the power to set base interest rates was transferred from the Treasury to the Bank of England. The government continues to set the inflation target but the bank has responsibility for setting interest rates to meet the target. Base rates are now set by a 9-member Monetary Policy Committee at the Bank; members include the Governor. Membership of the Court (the governing body) was widened. Responsibility for supervising banks was transferred from the Bank to the Financial Services Authority (FSA). The base rate was lowered from 6.00% to 5.75% on 8 Feb. 2001 and from 5.75% to 5.5% on 5 April 2001.

The present interest rate is 1.85% for accounts with a minimum balance of £500 and 1.75% for accounts with a minimum balance of less than £500. Interest is earned on each whole pound on deposits for complete calendar months.

The amount due to depositors with Ordinary accounts on 2 Jan. 2001 was £1,112,622,034 and in Investment accounts £7,686,244,580.

There are stock exchanges in Belfast, Birmingham, Glasgow and Manchester which function mainly as representative offices for the London Stock Exchange (called International Stock Exchange until May 1991). In July 1991 the 91 shareholders voted unanimously for a new memorandum and articles of association which devolves power to a wider range of participants in the securities industry, and replaces the Stock Exchange Council with a 14-member board. The FTSE 100 ended 2000 at 6,222.50, down from 6,930.20 at the end of 1999.

In 1999 the UK received US$82bn. worth of foreign direct investment—a figure exceeded only in the USA.

Weights and Measures. Conversion to the metric system, which replaced the imperial system, became obligatory on 1 Oct. 1995. The use of the pint for milk deliveries and bar sales, and use of miles and yards in road signs, is exempt indefinitely, and the use of the pound (weight) in selling greengrocery was exempt until 1999.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. The Electricity Act of 1989 implemented the restructuring and transfer to the private sector of the electricity supply industry.

(England and Wales)

Generators. Under the 1989 Act, National Power and Powergen took over the fossil fuel and hydro-electric power stations previously owned by the Central Electricity Generating Board, and were privatized in 1991. Nuclear Electric, responsible for operating the 12 nuclear power stations, and Scottish Nuclear were merged as a single holding company in 1996 with 2 new operating subsidiaries, Magnox Electric and British Energy. Both were privatized in 1996. Under licence, generating companies may also be involved in electricity supply. There were a total of 35 nuclear reactors in use in the UK in 2000.

Transmission. The privatized National Grid Company is responsible for operating the transmission system and for co-ordinating the operation of power stations connected to it. The company also operates the Cross-Channel link with France and the interconnection with the Scottish power system.

Distribution and Supply. The 12 Area Boards were replaced under the 1989 Act by 12 successor companies, which were privatized in 1990. These were: Eastern Electricity (now TXU Europe); East Midlands Electricity (now Powergen Energy); London Electricity; Manweb; Midlands Electricity (now GPU Power UK); Northern Electric; Norweb; SEEBOARD; Southern Electric (now part of Scottish and Southern Energy); SWALEC (renamed Hyder, and now part of Western Power Distribution); South Western Electricity (now part of Western Power Distribution); and Yorkshire Electricity. The companies are in the main responsible for maintaining their local distribution networks, and have a statutory duty to supply electricity to their tariff customers. However, following a number of mergers and takeovers in the industry, some companies are now responsible only for distribution or supply in their areas. Some of the companies are also involved in the retailing of electrical goods and electrical contracting, and some have diversified into other business activities.

The Electricity Association. The Electricity Association is the trade association of the UK electricity companies, providing a forum for members to discuss matters of common interest, a collective voice for the electricity industry when needed, and specialist research and professional services. It publishes an annual Electricity Industry Review, which contains detailed information on the development of the industry during the previous year.

Regulation. The Office of Electricity Regulation ('Offer') was set up under the 1989 Act to protect consumer interests following privatization. In 1999 it was merged with the Office of Gas Supply ('Ofgas') to form the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets ('Ofgem'), reflecting the opening up of all markets for electricity and gas supply to full competition from May that year, with many suppliers now offering both gas and electricity to customers.

Statistics. The electricity industry contributes about 1.7% of the UK's Gross Domestic Product. The installed capacity of all UK power stations at the end of 1999 was 75,305 MW. In 1998, 48% of electricity generated was coal-fired, 18% was nuclear, 22% was gas and 6% was hydro-electric and other renewables. Imports accounted for the remaining 6%. 337,877 GWh were supplied to 27m. customers, of which domestic and industrial users both took 34%, and commercial and other users the remaining 32%. The net total electricity supplied was 315,637 GWh. The average domestic consumption per capita in 1998 was 4,345 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Production in 1,000 tonnes, in 1998 (1997 figures in brackets): throughput of crude and process oils, 93,797 (97,024); refinery use, 6,468 (6,572). Refinery output: gases, 2,178 (2,089); naphtha, 2,335 (2,854); motor spirit, 27,392 (28,260); kerosene, 11,413 (11,678); diesel oil, 27,859 (28,778); fuel oil, 11,066 (11,747); lubricating oils, 1,134 (1,231); bitumen, 2,190 (2,258). Total output of petroleum products, 87,096 (90,366). Crude oil production (1997), 128.2m. tonnes. Estimated production, 1997, 2,634,349 bbls. a day. The UK's oil production is the second highest in Europe after that of Norway, and is the ninth highest in the world, greater than that of either Kuwait or Libya. The UK had proven oil reserves of 5.2bn. bbls. in Dec. 1999.

The fall in the world oil price in 1998 presented industry and government with the challenge of maintaining the UK as an active and profitable field of operations. Despite high production figures, it was a difficult year for many companies, with low levels of exploration and appraisal. The Government's response was to establish the Oil and Gas Industry Task Force (since renamed PILOT), which brings together industry, government and trade unions to develop mutual understanding of the key issues facing the industry now and in the future.

In 1999 the total income from sales of oil produced was £10,257m., with the value of net exports of oil and oil products in 1999 equal to £5,025m., the highest level seen since the mid 1960s.

The first significant offshore gas discovery was made in 1965 in the North Sea, followed in 1967 by the first oil. Production of gas began in 1967 and oil in 1975.

Oil and gas have played an important part in providing the UK's energy needs. In 1999, either through direct use or as a source of energy to produce electricity, oil and gas accounted for over 70% of total UK energy consumption, with UK-based production supplying 99% of the gas consumed.

Oil products also provide important contributions to other industries, such as feedstocks for the petro-chemical industry and lubricants for various uses. While the importance of oil as a source of energy for electrical generation and use by industry and commercial operations has declined in recent years with the increasing use of gas, oil still makes up 17% of total industrial uses of energy. Its prime importance is in the transport sector, where it provides 99% of the total energy used.

The United Kingdom usually exports over 60% of the oil it produces, with the key export markets being the USA and other EU countries.

The reform of the old nationalized gas industry began with the Gas Act of 1986, which paved the way for the privatization later that year of the British Gas Corporation, and established the Director General of Gas Supply (DGSS) as the independent regulator. This had a limited effect on competition, as British Gas retained a monopoly on tariff (domestic) supply. Competition progressively developed in the industrial and commercial (non-tariff) market.

The Gas Act 1995 amended the 1986 Act to prepare the way for full competition, including the domestic market. It created 3 separate licences—for Public Gas Transporters who operate pipelines, for Shippers (wholesalers) who contract for gas to be transported through the pipelines, and for Suppliers (retailers) who then market gas to consumers. It also placed the DGSS under a statutory duty to secure effective competition.

The domestic market was progressively opened to full competition from 1996 until May 1998. Over 2m. customers have taken the opportunity to change supplier.

In 1997 British Gas took a commercial decision to de-merge its trading business. Centrica plc (a new company) was formed to handle the gas sales, gas trading, services and retail businesses of BG, together with the gas production businesses of the North and South Morecambe Field. The remaining parts of the business, including transportation and storage and the international downstream activities, remain part of BG plc.

In 1998 a new Director General of Gas Supply (Callum McCarthy) was appointed for a 5-year term. In recognition of the increasing convergence between the gas and electricity markets, he was also appointed as Director General of Electricity Supply from Jan. 1999.

A European Directive introducing rules for the internal market in natural gas entered into force in Aug. 1998 (98/80/EC). Member states had 2 years to give effects to its provisions. A pipeline linking the UK and European gas grids opened in Oct. 1998. It has an export capacity of 20bn. cu. metres a year and an import capacity of 8.5bn. cu. metres a year.

Gas reserves are some 760,000m. cu. metres. Production was 1,000,700 GWh in 1997, 39% of which was used by domestic users and 27% by electricity generators.

The Office of Gas Supply ('Ofgas') is the regulator charged with protecting gas consumers' interests.

Wind. In 2000 there were 60 wind farms and 853 turbines with a capacity of 405.6 MW for electricity generation.

Water. The Water Act of Sept. 1989 privatized the 10 water authorities in England and Wales: Anglian; North West; Northumbrian; Severn Trent; South West; Southern; Thames; Welsh; Wessex; Yorkshire. The Act also inaugurated the National Rivers Authority, with environmental and resource management responsibilities, and the 'regulator' Office of Water Services ('Ofwat'), charged with protecting consumer interests. Annual average water usage in the UK is just under 2,000 cu. metres per person—less than a ninth of usage in the USA.

In Scotland water supply is the responsibility of the Regional and Island local authorities. 7 river purification boards are responsible for environmental management.

Minerals. Legislation to privatize the coal industry was introduced in 1994 and a new Coal Authority has taken over from British Coal. The Coal Authority is the owner of coal reserves; it licenses private coal-mining and deals with claims in former mining areas and disposes of unworked assets. In 1995 there were 15 British Coal collieries and 32 large deep mines in the private sector, employing some 13,500 mineworkers.

Total production from deep mines was 20.9m. tonnes in 1999 (83.8m. in 1988). 91 opencast sites were operating in 1996. Output, 1999, 15.3m. tonnes; 1988, 17.9m. tonnes. In 1999 inland coal consumption was 65.4m. tonnes (113.3m. in 1988), of which 49.7m. tonnes was used by electricity generators, 8.6m. tonnes by coke ovens and 2.7m. tonnes by domestic consumers.

Output of non-fuel minerals in Great Britain, 1999 (in 1,000 tonnes): limestone, 82,714; sandstone, 11,870; igneous rock, 45,294; clay and shale, 11,355; salt (1998), 6,600; industrial sand, 4,092; chalk, 9,667; china clay, 2,841; sand and gravel, 86,209.

Steel and metals. Steel production in recent years (in 1m. tonnes):

1996	18.0

Deliveries of finished steel products from UK mills in 2000 were worth £7bn. in product sales and comprised 7.3m. tonnes to the UK domestic market and 7.0m. tonnes for export. About three-quarters of UK steel exports went to other EU countries. Exports have grown from 20% of total mill output to nearly 50% over the last 20 years. UK steel imports in 2000 were about 6.5m. tonnes. The UK steel industry's main markets are construction (28%), transport (19%), mechanical engineering (19%) and metal goods (14%). Corus Group (formerly British Steel) is the UK's largest steel producer (and the third largest steel company in the world) and produces about 85% of UK crude steel. The UK steel industry has improved productivity nearly 5-fold over the past 20 years and invests about £350m. a year on plant and a further £65m. a year on employee training and development.

Agriculture. Land use in 1996: agriculture, 77%; urban, 10%; forests, 10%; other, 3%. In 1999 (and 1998) agricultural land in the UK totalled (in 1,000 ha) 18,579 (18,653), comprising common grazing, 1,227 (1,221), and agricultural holdings, 17,352 (17,372). Land use of the latter (in 1,000 ha): all grasses 6,675 (6,653); crops, 4,709 (4,972); rough grazing, 4,575 (4,624); bare fallow, 33 (34); other, 1,360 (1,089). Farmers receiving financial support under the EU's Common Agricultural Policy are obliged to 'set-aside' land in order to control production. In 1997 such set-aside totalled 306,000 ha (509,000 ha in 1996). There were 500,000 tractors and 47,000 harvester-threshers in 1997.

The number of workers employed in agriculture was, in 1999, 217,700 (55,700 female) of whom 73,000 were seasonal or casual workers. Of the 144,700 regular workers, 50,100 were part-time. There were some 234,900 farm holdings in 1995, about 66% owner-occupied. Average size of holdings, 72.4 ha.

Total farm incomes dropped from £6bn. to £1.8bn. between 1995 and 2000. Agriculture accounted for 7.3% of exports and 11.4% of imports in 1997.

British beef was widely banned overseas and in March 1996 the European Commission introduced a ban on the export of bovine animals, semen and embryos, beef and beef products and mammalian meat and bonemeal from the UK. The government introduced a number of preventive measures including bans on sales of older meat and the use of meat in animal feed and fertilizer, and compensation schemes. Following inspections, the European Commission allowed for the export of deboned beef and beef products beginning 1 Aug. 1999.

In Feb. 2001 the UK was hit by a major foot-and-mouth disease epidemic for the first time since 1967–68, with 1,025 confirmed cases and 631,000 animals having been slaughtered by 4 April 2001. In the 1967–68 epidemic there had been 2,364 cases with approximately 442,000 animals slaughtered.

In March 2000 the area of productive woodland was 2,447,000 ha, of which the Forestry Commission managed 774,000 ha and the private sector 1,673,000 ha. There were approximately 29,500 full-time equivalent jobs in the forestry industry and wood-processing industries in 1998–99, of which 11,200 were in wood processing, 5,900 in forest establishment and maintenance, 5,800 in harvesting and haulage, 4,600 in other non-forest activities such as office work research, and 2,000 in other forest activities such as nurseries and road construction. In 1998 a total of 7.20m. cu. metres underbark of roundwood was produced.

of whom 27,793 (12,457 females) were in employment, including 24,396 (11,481 females) as employees and 3,139 (845 females) as self-employed. In 1993 only 25,511,000 people had been in employment, representing an increase of 1,782,000 in 7 years. UK employees by form of employment in 2000 (in 1,000): wholesale and retail trade, repair of motor vehicles, motorcycles and household goods, 4,095; manufacturing industry, 3,958; estate agency, 3,521; health and social work, 2,564; education, 1,947; public administration and defence, compulsory social security, 1,468; transport and communications, 1,451; hotels and restaurants, 1,413; construction, 1,188; finance, 988; agriculture, forestry and fishing, 342; energy and water supply industries, 204. In the year to Sept. 1999, 450,000 jobs were created in the services sector, 165,000 of them in business and financial services. Employment in manufacturing, however, declined by 150,000 over the same period. The fastest-growing job creation sector in Britain has been the call centre, with 350,000 operators working from some 4,000 centres across the country in Sept. 1999. The industry is expanding at nearly 40% per annum, and it is estimated that 2% of the workforce in 2000 were employed in call centres.

Registered unemployed in UK as at spring (in 1,000; figures not seasonally adjusted): 1993, 2,936 (10.3%); 1994, 2,738 (9.6%); 1995, 2,460 (8.6%); 1996, 2,340 (8.2%); 1997, 2,037 (7.1%); 1998, 1,776 (6.1%); 1999, 1,752 (6.0%); 2000, 1,619 (5.5%)—the lowest rate since 1980. Of the 1,619,000 unemployed people, 991,000 were men and 628,000 women. By Feb. 2001 this had declined still further to 1,535,000, giving a rate of 5.2%. The number of unemployed people on benefits was 996,200 in Feb. 2001—the first time since Dec. 1975 that the figure had dropped below 1m. Among all men in the UK between the ages of 16 and 64, 78.4% were employed in 1999, 6.8% unemployed and 14.8% economically inactive (neither in work nor looking for work). Among women between the ages of 16 and 59, 68.3% were employed, 5.1% unemployed and 26.7% economically inactive.

In 1998 there were 3.7m. businesses in the UK of which 1.32m. were registered at Companies House. 12,000 were public limited companies and just 2,450 had their shares listed on the Stock Exchange. The sector comprising the most companies was property and business services with 23.3% of the total number, followed by retail with 13.1%, construction 10.6% and production 10.1%. Over 200,000 new companies were created in 1998, up from just 100,000 in 1984.

Workers (in 1,000) involved in industrial stoppages (and working days lost): 1994, 107 (0.28m.); 1995, 174 (0.42m.); 1996, 364 (1.3m.); 1997, 130 (0.24m.); 1998, 93 (0.28m.); 1999, 141 (0.24m.). Between 1989 and 1998 strikes cost Britain an average of 47 working days per 1,000 employees a year, compared to the EU average of 85 per 1,000. The equivalent figure in France was 37 per 1,000.

The Wages Councils set up in 1909 to establish minimum rates of pay (in 1992 of 2.5m. workers) were abolished in 1993. The Labour government, elected in May 1997, was committed to the introduction of a National Minimum Wage and established a Low Pay Commission to advise on its implementation. It was increased by 10p to £3.70 an hour in Oct. 2000, and is to rise to £4.10 an hour in Oct. 2001. A survey published in July 2000 indicated that the average gross salary in Britain was £21,116 (£15,819 net).

Britons worked an average of 44.0 hours a week in 1998, the most of any EU-member country. In 1996, 60% of males and 20% of females put in more than 40 hours a week.

Trade Unions. In Jan. 2001 there were 77 unions affiliated to the Trades Union Congress (TUC) with a total membership of 6.76m. (2.6m. of them women). The unions affiliated to the TUC in 1999 ranged in size from UNISON with 1.27m. members to the Sheffield Wool Shear Workers' Union with 10 members. The 4 largest unions, however, account for more than half the total membership. In 1998, 60% of public-sector employees and 19% of private-sector employees were unionized. 62% of employees were in workplaces where trade unions were recognized for collective bargaining.

The TUC's executive body, the General Council, is elected at the annual Congress. Congress consists of representatives of all unions according to the size of the organization, and is the principal policy-making body.

The General Secretary (John Monks, b. 1945) is elected by the Congress but is not subject to annual re-election. The TUC draws up policies and promotes and publicizes them. It makes representations to government, employers and international bodies. The TUC also carries out research and campaigns, and provides a range of services to unions including courses for union representatives.

The TUC is affiliated to the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, the Trade Union Advisory Committee of OECD, the Commonwealth Trade Union Council and the European Trade Union Confederation. The TUC provides a service of trade union education. It provides members to serve, with representatives of employers, on the managing boards of such bodies as the Health and Safety Commission and the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service.

In 2000 the UK's trade with non-EU countries was: imports, US$14,061.7m.; exports, US$10,173.3m. (1999 figures were imports US$12,544.0m. and exports US$9,346.3m.).

In 2000 other European Union members accounted for 53.1% of the UK's foreign trade, compared with 25.2% in 1956. The USA accounted for 14.5%, up from 9.1% in 1956, and the rest of the world 32.4%, down from 65.7% in 1956.

In 2000 machinery and transport equipment accounted for 45.7% of the UK's imports and 47.0% of exports; chemicals, manufactured goods classified chiefly by material and miscellaneous manufactured articles 39.2% of imports and 37.8% of exports; food, live animals, beverages and tobacco 7.6% of imports and 5.3% of exports; crude materials, inedible, animal and vegetable oil and fats 3.1% of imports and 1.4% of exports; and mineral fuels, lubricants and related materials 3.1% of imports and 8.4% of exports. The UK's largest exporters are BAE Systems (sales in 1998 totalling £6.07bn.), followed by BP Amoco (£3.54bn. in 1998) and Shell UK (£3.46bn. in 1998). The UK was the second largest exporter of services in 1998 behind the USA. The trade surplus in services was £12.2bn. in 1998, whereas there was a deficit of £20.5bn. in trade in goods.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Responsibility for the construction and maintenance of trunk roads belongs to central government (in England, the Department of Transport; in Wales the Welsh Office; and in Scotland the Scottish Office). Roads not classified as trunk roads are the responsibility of county or unitary councils.

In 1999 there were 371,914 km of public roads, classified as: motorways, 3,316 km; trunk roads, 12,150 km; principal roads, 36,044 km; others, 320,404 km.

In 1998 journeys by car, vans and taxis totalled 616bn. passenger km (less than 60bn. in the early 1950s). Even in the early 1950s passenger km in cars, vans and taxis exceeded the annual total at the end of the 20th century by rail. Motor vehicles in 1999 included 22,785,000 passenger cars, 760,000 mopeds, scooters and motorcycles, 84,000 public transport vehicles and 2,427,000 other private and light goods vehicles. The average distance travelled by a passenger car in the year 1998 was 16,000 km. In 1999, 72% of households had regular use of a car with 27% of households having use of 2 or more cars. New vehicle registrations in 1998, 2,740,300. Driving tests, 1998 (in 1,000): applications, 1,286.1; tests held, 1,165.8; tests passed, 535.1; pass rate, 46%. The driving test was extended in 1996 to include a written examination.

Road casualties in Great Britain in 1999, 320,310 including 3,423 killed (up by 2 on 1998, which was the year with the lowest number of deaths on the road since records began in 1926). Britain has the lowest death rates in road accidents of any industrialized country, at fewer than 6 deaths per 100,000 people.

Inter- and intra-urban bus and coach journeys average 44,000m. passenger-km annually. Passenger journeys by local bus services, 1997-98, 4,337m. For London buses see Transport for London under RAILWAYS, below.

Rail. In 1994 the nationalized railway network was restructured to allow for privatization. Ownership of the track, stations and infrastructure was vested in a government-owned company, Railtrack, which was privatized in May 1996.

Passenger operations were reorganized into 25 train-operating companies, wholly owned subsidiaries of the British Railways Board, and all had been transferred to the private sector by Feb. 1997. These pay Railtrack for access to the rail network, and lease their rolling stock from 3 private-sector companies. By March 1997 all freight operations had also been privatized.

Eurotunnel PLC holds a concession from the government to operate the Channel Tunnel (49.4 km), through which vehicle-carrying and Eurostar passenger trains are run in conjunction with French and Belgian railways. A new dedicated high-speed line is planned to connect the Channel Tunnel to London St Pancras. This line will be used by both international and domestic trains. Construction is being undertaken in 2 sections with the first section planned to open in 2003. The entire line should open in 2007.

In 1999-2000 total route length was 16,649 km (5,166 km electrified). For the year 1998-99 passenger journeys totalled approximately 947m. (38,300m. passenger km in 1999-2000). In terms of passenger km, rail usage has seen only a very small increase since the early 1950s, unlike road usage, which has increased dramatically. Freight movement by rail continues to grow year by year. Freight moved in 1999-2000 amounted to 18.4bn. freight tonne-km, up from 17.4bn. freight tonne-km in 1998-99. In 1999-2000, 65 people were killed in rail accidents (compared to 3,423 in road accidents in 1999). 31 people died in the Ladbroke Grove train crash on 5 Oct. 1999.

Transport for London (TfL) was established on 3 July 2000. It is accountable to the Mayor of London and responsible for implementing his transport strategy and planning, and delivering a range of transport facilities. TfL manages London's buses, the Docklands Light Railway and Croydon Tramlink. It is due to take over management of the Underground during 2001. TfL also manages a 550 km network of strategic roads, regulates taxis and will regulate private hire cars. It helps to co-ordinate schemes for transport users with mobility problems, manages traffic lights, and plans and works to improve conditions on London's streets for walkers, cyclists and freight whilst also reducing congestion. In 1999-2000 London Underground carried 3m. passengers a day to and from 274 stations on 12 lines. These stations include 12 managed by Silverlink Train Services; 2 by SouthWest Trains; and 22 stations with interchanges managed by national rail service operators including Railtrack. Some 6,000 buses, run under contract to London Transport by independent companies, carried 3.8m. passengers a day on some 800 routes.

The privately franchised Docklands Light Railway is operated in east inner London.

There are metros in Glasgow and Newcastle, and light rail systems in Manchester and Sheffield.

Civil Aviation. All UK airports handled a total of more than 125.4m. passengers during 1998. Of those, 89.5m. were handled by London area airports (Heathrow, Gatwick, London City, Luton and Stansted). The busiest airport in 1997 was Heathrow, which handled 57,848,625 passengers (50,612,417 on international flights) and 1,156,104 tonnes of freight. Gatwick was the second busiest, with 26,792,803 passengers (24,384,615 on international flights) and 265,297 tonnes of freight. Heathrow is Europe's busiest airport, ahead of Frankfurt, Paris Charles de Gaulle, Amsterdam and Gatwick, the fifth busiest. More international passengers use Heathrow than any other airport in the world.

Following the Civil Aviation Act 1971, the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) was established as an independent public body responsible for the economic and safety regulation of British civil aviation. A CAA wholly owned subsidiary, National Air Traffic Services, operates air traffic control. Highlands and Islands Airports Ltd is owned by the Scottish Office and operates 8 airports.

Operating and traffic statistics of UK airlines on scheduled services during the calendar year 1999 (and 1998): aircraft-km flown, 946.9m. (886.3m.); revenue passengers carried, 65.4m. (61.7m.); cargo (freight and mail) carried 860,291 (831,436) tonnes. Air transport movements between UK airports and international destinations in 1998 (and 1997) on all services totalled 1,161,083 (1,081,605).

There were 16,470 civil aircraft registered in the UK at 21 Nov. 2000.

British Airways is the largest UK airline, with a total of 229 aircraft at 31 Dec. 1998. It operates long- and short-haul international services, as well as an extensive domestic network. British Airways also has franchise agreements with other UK operators: British Mediterranean, British Regional Airways, Brymon Airways, City Flyer Express, GB Airways, Loganair and Maersk Air. Other airlines operating scheduled flights in 1998 (with numbers of aircraft): Air Belfast (5); Air UK (41); British Midland Airways (37); British World Airlines (11); Channel Express (15); Jersey European Airways (24); Manx and British Regional Airways (37); Monarch Airlines (17); Virgin Atlantic Airways (25). According to CAA airline statistics, in 1998 British Airways flew 519.52m. km and carried 31,152,382 passengers (26,283,992 on international flights). British Midland flew 41.17m. km in 1998 and carried 5,756,061 passengers (3,168,919 on international flights). British Airways carried more passengers on international flights in 1998 than any other airline.

Shipping. The UK-owned merchant fleet (trading vessels over 100 GT) in June 1999 totalled 597 ships of 7.2m. DWT and 6.4m. GT. The UK-owned and registered fleet totalled 340 ships of 2.4m. DWT.

The average age of the UK-owned fleet was 17 years, while that of the world fleet was 14 years. Total gross international revenue in 1998 was £4,334m. The net contribution to the UK balance of payments was £898m.; there were import savings of £1,367m., giving a total contribution of £2,265m. The container and roll-on-roll-off (RoRo) shipping sectors are the leading revenue earners.

The principal ports are (with 1m. tonnes of cargo handled in 1998): London (57.0), Tees and Hartlepool (51.0), Grimsby and Immingham (48.0), Forth (44.0), Southampton (34.0). Total traffic in 1998 was 568.5m. tonnes.

Inland Waterways. There are approximately 3,500 miles (5,630 km) of navigable canals and river navigations in Great Britain. Of these, the publicly-owned British Waterways (BW) is responsible for some 385 miles (620 km) of commercial waterways (maintained for freight traffic) and some 1,160 miles (1,868 km) of cruising waterways (maintained for pleasure cruising, fishing and amenity). BW is also responsible for a further 450 miles (732 km) of canals, some of which are not navigable. BW's direct income for the year to 31 March 2000 was £98.7m. This comprised principally: income for externally funded restoration schemes (£54.8m.), leisure (£15.0m.), the estate (£23.7m.) and commercial uses (£4.3m.). Additionally, British Waterways was in receipt of grants from the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions of £58.7m.

River navigations and canals managed by other authorities include the Thames, Great Ouse and Nene, Norfolk Broads and Manchester Ship Canal.

Telecommunications. In 1997 there were 148 licensed telecommunications operators: 125 cable operators, 19 national and regional public telecommunications operators and 4 mobile phone operators. Fixed-link telephone services were offered by BT, Mercury Communications, Kingston Communications (Hull), most of the cable operators and the public telecommunications operators. BT (then British Telecom) was established in 1981 to take over the management of telecommunications from the Post Office. In 1984 it was privatized as British Telecommunications plc, changing its trading name from British Telecom to BT in 1991.

In 1998 all of the BT system was served by digital exchanges. Almost 3.5m. km of optical fibre have been installed. In 1998 there were 32,829,000 main telephone lines (equivalent to 556.9 per 1,000 population). In 1996, 76% of the lines were residential and 24% business. There were 138,000 public payphones and 200,000 private rented payphones in 1996. BT handles a daily average of 103m. telephone calls a day and 22m. calls to emergency fire, police or ambulance services a year.

In 1996 there were 1.99m. fax receivers. There were still 20,000 telex subscribers in 1996, although telex usage has declined considerably in recent years. Electronic services include electronic mail ('email') and a complete corporate global messaging network. BT telephone, television and business services are carried by 15–20 satellites. In 1995 BT had some 20 offices worldwide and employed 137,561 persons.

In Nov. 2000 there were 35.87m. mobile telephone subscribers in the UK. Vodafone was the largest operator with 8.95m. customers, followed by BT Cellnet with 7.44m., Orange with 6.51m. and One2One with 5.46m. Orange is the fastest-growing network, having added 1.08m. subscribers in the first 3 months of 2000. At the beginning of 1999 there had been 13m. mobile phone subscribers. Virgin Mobile, launched in Nov. 1999, had 450,000 subscribers by Nov. 2000.

Telecommunications services are regulated by OFTEL in the interests of consumers.

Internet. In Nov. 2000 there were 19.98m. Internet users in the UK, or more than 33% of the total population. According to a survey published in Dec. 1999, 3.6m. children between the ages of 7 and 16 used the Internet, with 52% of users being boys, compared to 61% in March 1999. In Oct. 1998, 42% of users were at home and 38% at work. In 1999, 32% of Britons owned a PC.

Postal Services. The Post Office operates as a group of 4 distinct businesses: Royal Mail (letter delivery), Parcelforce Worldwide (parcel delivery), Post Office Counters Ltd (retailing and agency services) and SSL (telemarketing). Every area of the country is served by regional offices for each of the businesses. Royal Mail collects and delivers 75m. letters a day to the 26m. UK addresses. Other services include electronic mail, guaranteed mail deliveries (same-day and overnight to UK addresses), and Swiftair deliveries to 140 other countries and territories. The British Postal Consultancy Service provides advice to administrations abroad.

In 1998 there were almost 19,000 post offices, over 600 operated directly by The Post Office, the remainder (sub-post offices) on a franchise or agency basis; and 120,000 posting points. Staff numbered 193,000 in 1997–98. 19.79bn. letters were posted in 1999–2000.

The Post Office has a monopoly on the carriage of letters within the UK, but the government has suspended this, subject to a minimum delivery charge of £1, and licensed mail transferred between document exchanges. Private services are permitted to handle door-to-door deliveries subject to the minimum fee of £1.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. England and Wales. The legal system of England and Wales, divided into civil and criminal courts, has at the head of the superior courts, as the ultimate court of appeal, the House of Lords, which hears each year a number of appeals in civil matters, including a certain number from Scotland and Northern Ireland, as well as some appeals in criminal cases. In order that civil cases may go from the Court of Appeal to the House of Lords, it is necessary to obtain the leave of either the Court of Appeal or the House itself, although in certain cases an appeal may lie direct to the House of Lords from the decision of the High Court. An appeal can be brought from a decision of the Court of Appeal or the Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court in a criminal case provided that the Court is satisfied that a point of law 'of general public importance' is involved, and either the Court or the House of Lords is of the opinion that it is desirable in the public interest that a further appeal should be brought. As a judicial body, the House of Lords consists of the Lord Chancellor, the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, commonly called Law Lords, and such other members of the House as hold or have held high judicial office. The final court of appeal for certain of the Commonwealth countries is the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council which, in addition to Privy Counsellors who are or have held high judicial office in the UK, includes others who are or have been Chief Justices or Judges of the Superior Courts of Commonwealth countries.

Civil Law. The main courts of original civil jurisdiction are the High Court and county courts.

The High Court has exclusive jurisdiction to deal with specialist classes of case e.g. judicial review. It has concurrent jurisdiction with county courts in cases involving contract and tort although it will only hear those cases where the issues are complex or important. The High Court also has appellate jurisdiction to hear appeals from lower tribunals.

The judges of the High Court are attached to one of its 3 divisions: Chancery, Queen's Bench and Family; each with its separate field of jurisdiction. The Heads of the 3 divisions are the Lord Chief Justice (Queen's Bench), the Vice-Chancellor (Chancery) and the President of the Family Division. In addition there are 99 High Court judges (92 men and 7 women). For the hearing of cases at first instance, High Court judges sit singly. Appellate jurisdiction is usually exercised by Divisional Courts consisting of 2 (sometimes 3) judges, though in certain circumstances a judge sitting alone may hear the appeal. High Court business is dealt with in the Royal Courts of Justice and by over 130 District Registries outside London.

County courts can deal with all contract and tort cases, and recovery of land actions, regardless of value. They have upper financial limits to deal with specialist classes of business such as equity and Admiralty cases. Certain county courts have been designated to deal with family, bankruptcy, patents and discrimination cases.

There are about 230 county courts located throughout the country, each with its own district. A case may be heard by a circuit judge or by a district judge. Defended claims are allocated to one of 3 tracks—the small claims track, the fast track and the multi-track. The small claims track provides a simple and informal procedure for resolving disputes, mainly in claims for debt, where the value of the claim is no more than £5,000. Parties should be able to do this without the need for a solicitor. Other claims valued between £5,000 and £15,000 will generally be allocated to the fast track, and higher valued claims which could not be dealt with justly in the fast track may be allocated to the multi-track.

The Restrictive Practices Court was set up in 1956 under the Restrictive Trade Practices Act and is responsible for deciding whether a restrictive trade agreement is in the public interest. It is presided over by a High Court judge, but laymen sit on the bench also. Another specialist court is the Employment Appeal Tribunal, with similar composition, which hears appeals in employment cases from lower tribunals.

The Court of Appeal (Civil Division) hears appeals in civil actions from the High Court and county courts, and certain special courts such as the Restrictive Practice Court and Employment Appeal Tribunal. Its President is the Master of the Rolls, aided by up to 35 Lords Justices of Appeal (as at 1 Jan. 1999) sitting in 6 or 7 divisions of 2 or 3 judges each.

Civil proceedings are instituted by the aggrieved person, but as they are a private matter, they are frequently settled by the parties through their lawyers before the matter comes to trial. In very limited classes of dispute (e.g. libel and slander), a party may request a jury to sit to decide questions of fact and the award of damages.

Criminal Law. At the base of the system of criminal courts in England and Wales are the magistrates' courts which deal with over 96% of criminal cases. In general, in exercising their summary jurisdiction, they have power to pass a sentence of up to six months imprisonment and to impose a fine of up to £5,000 on any one offence. They also deal with the preliminary hearing of cases triable at the Crown Court. In addition to dealing summarily with over 2.0m. cases, which include thefts, assaults, drug abuse, etc., they also have a limited civil and family jurisdiction.

Magistrates' courts normally sit with a bench of 3 lay justices. Although unpaid they are entitled to loss of earnings and travel and subsistence allowance. They undergo training after appointment and they are advised by a professional justices' clerk. In central London and in some provincial areas full-time stipendiary magistrates have been appointed. Generally they possess the same powers as the lay bench, but they sit alone. On 1 Jan. 2000 the total strength of the lay magistracy was 30,308 including 14,764 women. Justices are appointed on behalf of the Queen by the Lord Chancellor, except in Greater Manchester, Merseyside and Lancashire, where they are appointed by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Justices are selected and trained specially to sit in Youth and Family Proceedings Courts. Youth Courts deal with cases involving children and young persons up to the age of 18 charged with criminal offences (other than homicide and other grave offences). These courts normally sit with 3 justices, including at least one man and one woman, and are accommodated separately from other courts.

Family Proceedings Courts deal with matrimonial applications and Children Act matters, including care, residence and contact and adoption. These courts normally sit with three justices including at least one man and one woman.

Above the magistrates' courts is the Crown Court. This was set up by the Courts Act 1971 to replace quarter sessions and assizes. Unlike quarter sessions and assizes, which were individual courts, the Crown Court is a single court which is capable of sitting anywhere in England and Wales. It has power to deal with all trials on indictment and has inherited the jurisdiction of quarter sessions to hear appeals, proceedings on committal of persons from the magistrates' courts for sentence, and certain original proceedings on civil matters under individual statutes.

The jurisdiction of the Crown Court is exercisable by a High Court judge, a Circuit judge or a Recorder or Assistant Recorder (part-time judges) sitting alone, or, in specified circumstances, with justices of the peace. The Lord Chief Justice has given directions as to the types of case to be allocated to High Court judges (the more serious cases) and to Circuit judges or Recorders respectively.

Appeals from magistrates' courts go either to a Divisional Court of the High Court (when a point of law alone is involved) or to the Crown Court where there is a complete re-hearing on appeals against conviction and/or sentence. Appeals from the Crown Court in cases tried on indictment lie to the Court of Appeal (Criminal Division). Appeals on questions of law go by right, and appeals on other matters by leave. The Lord Chief Justice or a Lord Justice sits with judges of the High Court to constitute this court. Thereafter, appeals in England and Wales can be made to the House of Lords.

There remains as a last resort the invocation of the royal prerogative exercised on the advice of the Home Secretary. In 1965 the death penalty was abolished for murder.

All contested criminal trials, except those which come before the magistrates' courts, are tried by a judge and a jury consisting of 12 members. The prosecution or defence may challenge any potential juror for cause. The jury decides whether the accused is guilty or not. The judge is responsible for summing up on the facts and explaining the law; he sentences convicted offenders. If, after at least 2 hours and 10 minutes of deliberation, a jury is unable to reach a unanimous verdict it may, on the judge's direction, provided that in a full jury of 12 at least 10 of its members are agreed, bring in a majority verdict. The failure of a jury to agree on a unanimous verdict or to bring in a majority verdict may involve the retrial of the case before a new jury.

The Employment Appeal Tribunal. The Employment Appeal Tribunal, which is a superior Court of Record with the like powers, rights, privileges and authority of the High Court, was set up in 1976 to hear appeals on questions of law against decisions of employment tribunals and of the Certification Officer. The appeals are heard by a High Court Judge sitting with 2 members (in exceptional cases 4) appointed for their special knowledge or experience of industrial relations either on the employer or the trade union side, with always an equal number on each side. The great bulk of their work is concerned with the problems which can arise between employees and their employers.

Military Courts. Offences committed by persons subject to service law under the Army Act 1955, the Air Force Act 1955 or the Naval Discipline Act 1957 may be dealt with either summarily or by courts-martial.

The Personnel of the Law. All judicial officers are independent of Parliament and the Executive. They are appointed by the Crown on the advice of the Prime Minister or the Lord Chancellor, and hold office until retiring age. Under the Judicial Pensions and Retirement Act 1993 judges normally retire by age 70 years.

The legal profession is divided; barristers, who advise on legal problems and can conduct cases before all courts, usually act for the public only through solicitors, who deal directly with the legal business brought to them by the public and have rights to present cases before certain courts. The distinction between the 2 branches of the profession has been weakened since the passing of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990, which has enabled solicitors to obtain the right to appear as advocates before all courts. Long-standing members of both professions are eligible for appointment to most judicial offices.

For all judicial appointments up to and including the level of Circuit Judge (except for Recorderhip, which is achieved on promotion from assistant Recorderhip), it is necessary to apply in writing to be considered for appointment. Vacancies are advertised. A panel consisting of a judge, an official and a lay member decide whom to invite for interview and also interview the shortlisted applicants. They make recommendations to the Lord Chancellor, who retains the right of final recommendation to the Sovereign or appointment, as appropriate.

Legal Aid. Broadly there are 3 kinds of legal aid available in England and Wales. Firstly there is legal advice and assistance, otherwise known as the 'Green Form' scheme. This includes advice and assistance on almost any question of English law, both civil and criminal, but does not normally cover any form of representation before a court or tribunal. Qualification for 'Green Form' is dependent on the means of the applicant. As an extension of the scheme, however, assistance by way of representation is available for certain proceedings, chiefly family matters, in magistrates' courts. Assistance by way of representation is also means-tested. In 1997-98 there were 1.6m. payments under the Legal Advice and Assistance Scheme. The net cost to the Legal Aid Fund of this part was £186.4m., of which £12.2m. was accounted for by assistance by way of representation. Legal advice and assistance also provides for duty solicitor schemes at magistrates' courts and police stations. Under the magistrates' courts scheme, initial advice, and representation where necessary, is available to unrepresented defendants at court from duty solicitors either in attendance at courts or on call. The scheme covers advice to a defendant in custody, making a bail application, representing a defendant in custody on a guilty plea, and certain other cases. The advice and assistance at police stations scheme enables any person who has been arrested and taken to a police station, or who is assisting the police with their enquiries, to receive advice and assistance, from either a duty solicitor or the person's own solicitor. The cost of these schemes, which are not subject to means test or contribution, is met from the Legal Aid Fund and in 1997-98 amounted to £115.1m. Secondly, under Part IV of the Legal Aid Act 1988, there is legal aid for civil court proceedings. Under regulations, aid is available to those of low or moderate means either free or subject to a contribution, depending on means. In 1997-98, 319,432 civil legal aid certificates were issued. The cost of legal aid is met from (a) contributions from assisted persons; (b) the operation of the statutory charge which gives the Legal Aid Board a first charge on money or property recovered or preserved for an assisted person; (c) costs recovered from opposing parties and (d) a grant from the Exchequer. The net cost of civil legal aid to the state (excluding administration costs of the scheme) in 1997-98 amounted to £634m. Thirdly under Part V of the Legal Aid Act 1988 a court dealing with criminal proceedings may order legal aid to be given if it considers it is desirable in the interests of justice and if it also considers that the defendant (or appellant) requires financial assistance in meeting the costs he or she may incur. The factors to be taken into account when determining whether it is in the interests of justice that criminal legal aid be granted are defined by statute to include cases where, for example, the defendant is likely to be deprived of his or her liberty, consideration of a substantial question of law may be involved, or the defendant may be unable to understand the proceedings or to state his or her case due to inadequate knowledge of English, mental illness or other mental or physical disability. Legal aid must be granted, subject to means, in the following circumstances: where a person is committed for trial on a charge of murder, where the prosecutor appeals or applies for leave to appeal from the criminal division of the Court of Appeal or the Courts-Martial Appeal Court to the House of Lords, and in certain circumstances where the court is considering depriving a defendant of his liberty.

The costs of legal aid in criminal proceedings are paid by the central government, but courts have power to require legally aided persons to contribute towards the cost of legal aid given to them. The net cost of legal aid in criminal proceedings in 1997-98 was £591m. Of this total, £349m. was for legal aid in the higher courts which is paid for out of the Lord Chancellor's vote, and £242m. for legal aid in the magistrates' courts which is paid from the Legal Aid Fund.

Legislation enacted in 1999 (the Access to Justice Act) has brought changes to legal aid. The reforms have created a Legal Services Commission, which has replaced the Legal Aid Board. The Commission has established a Community Legal Service to fund civil and family cases, and a Criminal Defence Service for all criminal matters.

Police. In England and Wales outside London there are 41 police forces each maintained by a police authority typically comprising 9 local councillors, 3 magistrates and 5 independent members. London is policed by the Metropolitan Police Service (responsible to the Home Secretary) and the City of London Police (whose police authority is the City of London Corporation). In Scotland the unitary councils are the police authorities.

From 3 July 2000 the Home Secretary ceased to be the police authority for the Metropolitan Police District and was replaced in this role by the new Metropolitan Police Authority (MPA). This consists of 23 members (rather than the standard 17) of whom the Lord Mayor of London chooses 12 from the newly-elected London Assembly according to the political balance on that body. The rest consist of 7 independent members and 4 magistrates. This is set out in the Greater London Authority Act 1999. (The budget for the MPA is proposed by the Mayor.)

In April 1995 the Home Office gave up central control of police manpower and authorized establishments of police no longer exist. Instead chief constables recruit according to their budgets. The Home Office collates police strength in March and Sept. each year. Figures show that the total strength of the police service in England and Wales at 31 March 1999 was 126,096 (including 20,123 women). In addition there were 16,484 special constables (including 5,624 women). The net total revenue expenditure on the police service for 1998–99 was £7,070,687,000.

In the year to March 2000 the police in England and Wales recorded a total of 5.3m. notifiable offences—an increase of 3.8% compared with the year to March 1999. 83% of all crimes were against property. In 1999 the average prison population in England and Wales was 64,771 (65,298 in 1998). The incarceration rate of 125 people per 100,000 inhabitants is one of the highest in Western Europe. In the 12 months ending March 1999, a total of 5.1m. offences were recorded by the police in England and Wales. Since 1989 overall crime has risen by an average of 2.8% per year. Over this time violent crime has increased at a higher rate than property crime. The prison population rose 47% between 1987 and 1997, but the recorded crime level went up by only 18%. During the 1990s the female prison population rose by 106%, from 1,600 to 3,300, but the male prison population only rose by 40%.

Religion. The Anglican Communion has originated from the Church of England and parallels in its fellowship of autonomous churches the evolution of British influence beyond the seas from colonies to dominions and independent nations. The Archbishop of Canterbury presides as primus inter pares at the decennial meetings of the bishops of the Anglican Communion at the Lambeth Conference and at the biennial meetings of the Primates and the Anglican Consultative Council. The last Conference was held in Canterbury in 1998 and was attended by 743 bishops. Anglican membership in Britain in 2000 numbered 1.6m., compared to 3.5m. in 1950.

The Anglican Communion consists of 38 member Churches. These are: The Anglican Church of Aotearoa, New Zealand and Polynesia; The Anglican Church of Australia; The Church of Bangladesh; The Episcopal Anglican Church of Brazil; The Church of the Province of Burundi; The Anglican Church of Canada; The Church of the Province of Central Africa; The Anglican Church of the Central America Region; The Province of the Anglican Church of the Congo; The Church of England; Hong Kong Sheng Kung Hui; The Church of the Province of the Indian Ocean; The Church of Ireland; Nippon Sei Ko Kai; The Episcopal Church in Jerusalem and the Middle East; The Church of the Province of Kenya; The Anglican Church of Korea; The Church of the Province of Melanesia; The Anglican Church of Mexico; The Church of the Province of Myanmar (Burma); The Church of the Province of Nigeria; The Church of North India; The Church of Pakistan; The Anglican Church of Papua New Guinea; The Philippine Episcopal Church; The Province of the Episcopal Church of Rwanda; The Scottish Episcopal Church; The Church of the Province of South East Asia; The Church of the Province of Southern Africa; The Anglican Church of the Southern Cone of America; The Church of South India; The Episcopal Church of the Sudan; The Church of the Province of Tanzania; The Church of the Province of Uganda; The Episcopal Church in the United States of America; The Church in Wales; The Church of the Province of West Africa; and The Church in the Province of the West Indies. There are Extra Provincial Dioceses of Bermuda, Cuba, Portugal, Puerto Rico, Spain, Sri Lanka and Venezuela, and new provinces are also currently in formation. Churches in Communion include the Mar Thoma Syrian Church, the Philippine Independent Church, and some Lutheran and Old Catholic Churches in Europe. The Church in China is known as a 'post denominational' Church whose formation included Anglicans in the Holy Catholic Church in China.

England and Wales. The established Church of England, which baptizes about 23% of the children born in England (i.e. excluding Wales but including the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands), is Anglican. Civil disabilities on account of religion do not attach to any class of British subject. Under the Welsh Church Acts, 1914 and 1919, the Church in Wales and Monmouthshire was disestablished as from 1 April 1920, and Wales was formed into a separate Province.

The Queen is, under God, the supreme governor of the Church of England, with the right, regulated by statute, to nominate to the vacant archbishoprics and bishoprics. The Queen, on the advice of the First Lord of the Treasury, also appoints to such deaneries, prebendaries and canonries as are in the gift of the Crown, while a large number of livings and also some canonries are in the gift of the Lord Chancellor.

There are 2 archbishops (at the head of the 2 Provinces of Canterbury and York), and 42 diocesan bishops including the bishop of the diocese in Europe, which is part of the Province of Canterbury. Dr George Carey was enthroned as Archbishop of Canterbury in April 1991. Each archbishop has also his own particular diocese, wherein he exercises episcopal, as in his Province he exercises metropolitan, jurisdiction. In Dec. 1998 there were 66 suffragan and assistant bishops, 41 deans and provosts of cathedrals and 114 archdeacons. The General Synod, which replaced the Church Assembly in 1970 in England, consists of a House of Bishops, a House of Clergy and a House of Laity, and has power to frame legislation regarding Church matters. Each House has a veto over the others. The first two Houses consist of the members of the Convocations of Canterbury and York, each of which consists of the diocesan bishops and elected representatives of the suffragan bishops, 6 for Canterbury province and 3 for York (forming an Upper House); deans, provosts, and archdeacons, and a certain number of proctors elected as the representatives of the priests and deacons in each diocese, together with, in the case of Canterbury Convocation, 4 representatives of the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, London and the Southern Universities, and in the case of York 2 representatives for the Universities of Durham and Newcastle and the other Northern Universities, and 3 archdeacons to the Armed Forces, the Chaplain General of Prisons and 2 representatives of the Religious Communities (forming the Lower House). The House of Laity is elected by the lay members of the Deanery Synods but also includes 3 representatives of the Religious Communities and ex officio appointed members of the Archbishops' Council, Church Commissioners and Ecclesiastical Judges. Every Measure passed by the General Synod must be submitted to the Ecclesiastical Committee, consisting of 15 members of the House of Lords nominated by the Lord Chancellor and 15 members of the House of Commons nominated by the Speaker. This committee reports on each Measure to Parliament, and the Measure receives the Royal Assent and becomes law if each House of Parliament resolves that the Measure be presented to the Queen.

Parochial affairs are managed by annual parochial church meetings and parochial church councils. At 31 Dec. 1998 there were 13,000 ecclesiastical parishes, inclusive of the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands. These parishes do not, in many cases, coincide with civil parishes. Although most parishes have their own churches, not every parish nowadays can have its own incumbent or priest. Over 2,000 non-stipendiary clergy hold a bishop's licence to officiate at services.

In Dec. 1998 there were 5,476 beneficed clergy excluding dignitaries, 1,995 other clergy of incumbent status and 1,590 assistant curates working in the parishes.

Women have been admitted to Holy Orders (but not the Episcopate) as deacons since 1987 and as priests since 1994. At 31 Dec. 1998 there were 990 full-time stipendiary women clergy, 930 of whom were in the parochial ministry. Between 1993 and 1998, 459 clergymen resigned because they disagreed with the ordination of women. 55 clergymen subsequently re-entered the Church of England ministry and of the 459 who resigned, 249 are known to have joined the Roman Catholic Church and 28 the Orthodox Church.

Private persons possess the right of presentation to over 2,000 benefices; the patronage of the others belongs mainly to the Queen, the bishops and cathedrals, the Lord Chancellor, and the colleges of the universities of Oxford and Cambridge. In addition to the dignitaries and parochial clergy already identified there were, in 1998, 134 cathedral and 306 non-parochial clergy working within the diocesan framework, giving a total of 9,764 full-time stipendiary clergy working as at Dec. 1998. Although these figures account for the majority of active clergy in England, there are many others serving in parishes and institutions who cannot be quantified with any certainty. They include some 1,300 full-time hospital, Forces, prison, industrial, and school and college chaplains.

Of the 40,397 buildings registered for the solemnization of marriages at 30 June 1994 (statistics from the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys), 16,538 belonged to the Established Church and the Church in Wales, and 23,859 to other religious denominations (Methodist, 6,739; Roman Catholic, 3,331; Baptist, 3,109; United Reformed, 1,689; Congregational, 1,264; Calvinistic Methodist, 1,093; Jehovah's Witnesses, 786; Brethren, 744; Salvation Army, 737; Unitarians, 165; other Christian, 3,857; Sikhs, 129; Muslims, 90; other non-Christian, 126). Of the 283,012 marriages celebrated in 1995 (291,069 in 1994), 83,685 were in the Established Church and the Church in Wales, 43,837 in other denominations, and 155,490 were civil marriages in Register Offices.

Roman Catholics in England and Wales were estimated at 4,155,262 in 1999. There are 22 dioceses in 5 provinces and 1 Bishopric of the Forces (also covers Scotland). Cormac Murphy O'Connor was installed as Archbishop of Westminster in March 2000. He was created a Cardinal in Jan. 2001. There are 5 archbishops, 23 other diocesan bishops and 6 auxiliary or assistant bishops. There are 5,600 priests in active ministry and 2,810 parish churches. There are 1,211 convents of female religious, who number 8,656.

Membership of other denominations in the UK in 1991 (and 1975): Presbyterians, 1,291,672 (1.65m.); Methodists, 483,387 (0.61m.); Baptists, 241,842 (0.27m.); other Protestants, 123,677; independent churches, 408,999; Orthodox, 265,258 (0.2m.); Afro-Caribbean churches, 69,658; Latter-day Saints (Mormons) (1998), 173,800; Jehovah's Witnesses, 0.12m.; Spiritualists, 60,000; Muslims, 0.99m. (0.4m.); Sikhs, 0.39m. (0.12m.); Hindus, 0.14m. (0.1m.); Jews, 108,400 (0.11m.).

Across all denominations, adult church attendance in the UK was less than 8% of the population in 2000.

The Salvation Army is established in 94 countries. In 1991 in the UK and Ireland it had 1,792 ministers, 55,000 members and 837 churches.

There is a 400-member Board of Deputies of British Jews.

There were approximately 2.5m. visits to Westminster Abbey in 1997, 2m. to both St Paul's Cathedral and York Minster, and 1.6m. to Canterbury Cathedral.

Education. 'Around a fifth of working age adults in England have a low level of literacy (capable of reading but with little understanding) or a very low level (struggling with the simplest text). Up to a quarter have very low levels of numeracy (unable to perform the simplest calculations) and a further quarter a low level (unable to handle fractions or percentages with any confidence)'. (A Fresh Start. Improving Literacy and Numeracy—Report of the working group chaired by Sir Claus Moser).

The Publicly Maintained System of Education: Compulsory schooling begins at the age of 5 (4 in Northern Ireland) and the minimum leaving age for all pupils is 16. No tuition fees are payable in any publicly maintained school (but it is open to parents, if they choose, to pay for their children to attend other schools). The post-school or tertiary stage, which is voluntary, includes universities, further education establishments and other higher education establishments (including those which provide courses for the training of teachers), as well as adult education and the youth service. Financial assistance (grants and loans) is generally available to students on higher education courses in the university and non-university sectors, and to some students on other courses in further education.

National Curriculum. The Education Reform Act 1988 established a National Curriculum for gradual introduction into primary and secondary schools in England and Wales. It was revised in 1995. Statutory subjects at 5 to 11 years: English (and Welsh in Wales), mathematics, science (core subjects); design and technology, information technology, geography, history, physical education, art and music. At 11 to 14 years a foreign language is added. Statutory subjects at 14 to 16: English, mathematics, science, technology, a foreign language and physical education. Religious education and, at secondary level, sex education, are not prescribed in the curriculum but are requirements; parents may withdraw their children from these lessons. Careers education is also statutory at secondary level. There is no statutory national curriculum in Scotland—pupils aged 5 to 14 study a broad curriculum based on national guidelines, which set out the aims of study, the ground to be covered and the way the pupils' learning should be assessed and reported. The Northern Ireland curriculum, compulsory in all publicly financed schools, consists of religious education and six broad areas of study: English, mathematics, science and technology, the environment and society, creative and expressive studies, and, in some primary schools, language studies. The curriculum also has cross-curricular educational themes.

Nursery Education. Provision for children under 5 is made in either nursery schools or in nursery or infant classes in primary schools—others may attend playgroups in the voluntary sector or in private-run nurseries. In England and Wales many primary schools also operate an early admission policy where they admit children under 5 into what are called reception classes. In the public sector no fees are payable. There were 2,826 public sector mainstream nursery schools in the UK in 1999–2000.

There were an average 24 pupils per teacher in public sector nursery schools in the UK in 1999–2000.

Primary Schools. These provide compulsory education for pupils from the age of 5 (4 in Northern Ireland) up to the age of 11 (12 in Scotland). Some pre-compulsory age pupils attend nursery classes within primary schools, however, and in England some middle schools cater for pupils at either side of the secondary education transition age. In 1999–2000 there were 23 pupils per teacher at primary schools in the United Kingdom as a whole, and there were 23,052 public sector mainstream primary schools in the UK.

Middle Schools. A number of local education authorities in England operate a middle school system. These provide for pupils from the age of 8, 9 or 10 up to the age of 12, 13 or 14, and are deemed either primary or secondary according to the age range of the pupils.

Secondary Schools. These usually provide for pupils from the age of 11 upwards and in 1999–2000 there were 4,406 secondary schools in the UK. Some local authorities have retained selection at age 11 for entry to grammar schools, of which there were 234 (in England and Northern Ireland) in 1999–2000. There were 148 secondary modern schools in 1999–2000 providing a general education up to the minimum school leaving age of 16, although exceptionally some pupils stay on beyond that age. In public sector mainstream secondary schools in the UK in 1999–2000 there were an average 17 pupils per teacher.

Almost all local education authorities operate a system of comprehensive schools to which pupils are admitted without reference to ability or aptitude. In 1999–2000 there were 3,440 such schools in Great Britain with over 3.2m. pupils. With the development of comprehensive education, various patterns of secondary schools have come into operation. Principally these are: 1) All-through schools with pupils aged 11 to 18 or 11 to 16; pupils over 16 being able to transfer to an 11 to 18 school or a sixth form college providing for pupils aged 16 to 19. (There were 105 sixth form colleges in England in 1999–2000). 2) Local education authorities operating a three-tier system involving middle schools where transfer to secondary school is at ages 12, 13 or 14. These correspond to 12 to 18, 13 to 18 and 14 to 18 comprehensive schools respectively. 3) In areas where there are no middle schools a two-tier system of junior and senior comprehensive schools for pupils aged 11 to 18, with optional transfer to these schools at age 13 or 14.

Specialist Schools. Technology Colleges, Language Colleges, Art Colleges and Sports Colleges. A programme to help existing maintained secondary schools to specialize in a particular area of the curriculum, while continuing to cover the full National Curriculum. To be included in the programme, schools must raise sponsorship and then prepare development plans, in competition with other schools, to seek extra government funding. They must demonstrate how they will share their resources and expertise with local schools and the wider community. The first Technology Colleges operated from Sept. 1994. By Jan. 2001 there were 535 Specialist Schools in England and the government's latest target was for 1,000 by Sept. 2004, over 30% of secondary schools.

City Technology Colleges. 15 independent all-ability secondary schools established in partnership between government and business sponsors, under the Education Reform Act 1988. They teach the full National Curriculum but give special emphasis to technology, science and mathematics. Government meets all recurrent costs.

Assisted Places Scheme. The government is phasing out the assisted places scheme and is using the money saved to reduce infant class sizes in the maintained sector. The Education (Schools) Act 1997, which came into force on 1 Sept. 1997, has the effect of preventing any further intakes to assisted places after the start of the 1997–98 school year. However, the government has made a commitment to provide continued support for existing assisted pupils for the remainder of the current phase of their education. Children in receipt of secondary education will continue to hold their assisted places until the completion of their secondary education. Children in receipt of primary education will normally hold their place until the completion of their primary education. There is a discretionary power under the Act to allow some pupils to hold their assisted places for a further period in which they receive secondary education.

Music and Ballet Scheme. The 'Aided Pupil Scheme' for boys and girls with outstanding talent in music or ballet helps parents with the fees and boarding costs at seven specialist private schools. This scheme provides a specialist provision not readily available in the maintained sector and will therefore continue to operate.

Special Education. Under the Education Act 1996 children have special educational needs if they have a learning difficulty which calls for special educational provision to be made for them. It has been estimated that, nationally, some 20% of the school population will have special educational needs at some time during their school career. In a minority of cases, perhaps just over 2% of children, the Local Education Authority will need to make a statutory assessment of special educational needs under the Education Act 1996, which may ultimately lead to a 'statement'.

The Education Act 1996 and regulations made thereunder build upon the principles and practices first set out in the 1981 Education Act. They place duties and responsibilities on Local Education Authorities and schools, and all those who help them work with children with special educational needs. Maintained schools must use their best endeavours to make provision for such pupils. The Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs, which came into force on 1 Sept. 1994, gives practical guidance to these bodies as to how they fulfill their duties. Provision for all children with special educational needs will be made by the most appropriate agency, which in most cases will be the child's mainstream school. The Code of Practice recognizes that there is a continuum of needs and a continuum of provision, which may be made in a variety of different forms. However, even before reaching statutory school age, a child may have special educational needs requiring the intervention of the Local Education as well as the Health Authority.

Some pupils with 'statements' remain in school after the age of 16. Local Education Authorities remain responsible for such pupils until they are 19. Others with statements leave school at 16, moving perhaps to a college within the further education sector, or to social services provision.

Ancillary Services. Local Education Authorities (LEAs) and the governing bodies of GM schools may provide registered pupils at schools maintained by them with meals, milk and other refreshment and make such charges as they think fit. However, they must charge the same price for the same quantity of the same item. It is for LEAs and GM schools to decide on the presentation and content of school meals. They must provide meals free of charge to pupils whose parents receive income support or income-based Jobseekers' Allowance, or to pupils who receive income support in their own right. Where LEAs or GM schools decide to provide milk, it must be free to these categories of pupils. The provision of free meals and milk must be made in the middle of the day.

Further Education (Non-University). The Further Education Funding Council (FEFC) is statutorily required to secure the provision of: sufficient facilities for the full-time education of 16–18 year olds; and adequate facilities for part-time education of those over 16; and for the full-time education of those over 18, where such education falls within schedule 2 of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992.

The Council funds further education at 429 further education (FE) sector colleges (including sixth form colleges) and certain other designated institutions. Provision of further education is also funded at other institutions that have been franchised or sponsored by FE sector colleges. In 1999–2000 some 3.2m. students (3.3m. in 1998–99) funded by the FEFC were attending colleges and institutions in England, studying for a total of 5.7m. qualifications (5.6m. in 1998–99).

Local education authorities are required to secure and keep under review the adequate provision of those categories of further education outside the Council's duty.

The Youth Service. The Youth Service forms part of the education system and is mainly concerned with the provision of personal and social education for young people to enable them to become responsible citizens. The Youth Service is chiefly provided by Local Education Authorities (the statutory sector) and a wide range of voluntary organizations. The priority age group for the service is usually regarded as 13–19 years old but this target age group extends to 11–25-year-olds. A duty is laid upon Local Education Authorities by the provision of the (Consolidation) Education Act 1996 which has superseded earlier Education Acts, to secure adequate provision of further education which includes the Youth Service. Provision is usually in the form of a wide range of leisure-time activities or through ‘detached’ or outreach work aimed at young people at risk. The Department for Education and Employment awards grants to the headquarters of national voluntary youth organizations through its Grant Scheme. The 1999–2000 Scheme has 2 main aims: to combat social exclusion and inequality through targeting priority groups; and to raise the standard and quality of youth work undertaken by youth organizations. Some 60 organizations are being funded to pursue approved programmes of work concerned with the social and personal education of young people, particularly those aged 13–19. The Scheme aims to widen access to the youth services especially for those who are disadvantaged, who have disabilities, who come from minority ethnic groups or inner city or rural areas, and for girls and young women. It also places priority on work which aims to contribute to crime prevention and health education, and to encourage the involvement of volunteers.

The Connexions Service will help schools, colleges and all those involved with young people to make a step change in learning achievement—both formal and informal—for all teenagers, stretching the most gifted, raising aspirations and providing opportunities for all young people to achieve their potential. Connexions will bring together all the services—public, voluntary or private sector—that young people need to make a smooth transition to adult life. It will identify and help those who need additional support, when and where they need it. No young person will be outside the scope of the Connexions Service, whatever their needs and regardless of the issues they have to address before they can take advantage of the opportunities available for learning and personal development.

The Service is being phased in across England starting from April 2001. 16 areas will begin providing the service during 2001 and a further 31 will follow. Initially there are 13 pilots in place across the country, at least one in each Government Office region. By the end of 2002–03 some $420m. will be being invested in the Connexions Service across England.

Independent/State School Partnerships Grant Scheme. The aim of this scheme is to promote collaborative working between the independent and state school sectors to raise standards in education. In its first three years, 120 projects worth £2.2m. were funded. £450,000 of this was provided by the Sutton Trust, an educational charity established to provide educational opportunities for young people from non-privileged backgrounds. Further funding will be made available for 2001–02, and schools will be invited to apply for funding.

Higher Education (HE) Student Support. Depending on their own, and their families’ income, students are expected to make a contribution towards their tuition fees. The maximum that a student will be expected to pay towards their tuition in 2001–02 is £1,075. In 2001–02 the annual income threshold at which fees start to be payable has been set at £20,000. Consequently, it is expected that about 50% of all students will not have to pay any fees at all. In addition, students on courses of initial teacher training (other than first degrees), in the fifth or later years of medical and dental courses, and on NHS-funded courses in professions allied to medicine, pay no fees, whatever their and their family’s income.

Loans are available to help with students’ living costs. All students are entitled to 75% of the maximum loan, with the remaining quarter subject to income assessment. The maximum amounts of loan available to new students in 2001–02 are: £4,700 (living away from home and studying in London); £3,815 (living away from home and studying outside London); and £3,020 (living at home). These loans do not have to be repaid until the student has left university or college and is earning over £10,000 a year. They are repaid on what is known as an income contingent basis, set at 9% of gross income over £10,000 a year. This means that repayments rise and fall in line with income.

Since 2000 help has been available to part-time students. Those on benefits or low incomes can get their fees paid for them and are entitled to £500 loans for help with other course costs. In addition, disabled part-time students can get extra help.

Applications for support in HE are made through Local Education Authorities. Students' loan accounts are managed by the Student Loans Company (SLC). Loan payments are made by the SLC direct to the student's bank account except for the first instalment, which is paid by cheque via the student's university or college.

Extra, non-repayable, help is targeted at certain students: those with disabilities; those with dependants; those entering HE from care and those entering HE from low-income families in inner city areas. Help is also available from universities and colleges for those who get into financial difficulties as students. In 2000–01 the amount available to be distributed by universities and colleges to students in financial difficulties was £87m.

For 2001–02 the government has also introduced Opportunity Bursaries, worth £2,000 each, for 6,000 students from low-income families with little or no background in higher education.

Studentships and research grants are available for postgraduate courses from the Research Councils and the Arts and Humanities Research Board (AHRB). There are six Research Councils, five providing for science and technology and one funding economic and social sciences, who report to the Office of Science and Technology in the Department for Trade and Industry. They offer awards to students studying topics within the broad spectrum of agriculture and food; the biological sciences; man's natural environment; science and engineering and the social sciences. They offer three types of funding: advanced course studentships which are for masters level taught courses, usually of one year's duration, research masters training awards and standard research studentships, which are for PhD or MPhil students on programmes of up to three years full-time or five years part-time.

The AHRB also makes awards for postgraduate study and research. It funds studentships in the humanities for Masters and Doctoral programmes, as well as awards for students undertaking a range of professional or vocational training in a variety of arts and humanities subject areas. Both Research Council and AHRB funding is awarded on a competitive basis and securing a place on a course at a higher education institution does not in any way guarantee support. In 1999–2000 the six Research Councils granted 6,791 awards in total, while in the same year the AHRB made 1,592 awards. The British Academy seeks to complement the work of the AHRB and the Economic and Social Sciences Research Council by supporting individual scholars in providing small personal research grants, for amounts up to £5,000; postdoctoral fellowships; research readerships and professorships; grants with international programmes, including overseas exchange schemes; and support for conferences.

Many postgraduate students also look to the public sector for support and obtain loans from banks, seek sponsorship, receive help from educational trusts and charities, or pursue their studies on a part-time basis.

Career Development Loans (CDLs) were introduced by the government in 1988 to provide wider opportunities for adults to acquire and improve vocational skills. The loans are aimed at those who would otherwise not have reasonable or adequate access to the funds required to train. Loans of between £300 and £8,000 can support up to 2 years of education or training, plus up to 1 year's practical work experience where it forms part of the course. Loans to pay for training are available through 4 high street banks (Barclays, The Co-operative, Clydesdale and the Royal Bank of Scotland). The Department for Education and Employment pays the interest on the loan for the period of the training and for 1 month afterwards. Borrowers may apply to the bank to defer payments for up to a further 18 months after completing their course if they are unemployed, employed and receiving certain benefits, or need to extend their training owing to ill health or other social circumstances.

By Jan. 2001 nearly £491m. had been advanced to over 145,000 applicants since the programme began.

Teachers. In order to teach in a maintained school or a non-maintained special school in England or Wales, it is first necessary to achieve qualified teacher status. This is generally achieved by successfully completing an undergraduate or postgraduate course of initial teacher training.

Those who are recognized as qualified teachers in Scotland or Northern Ireland are also entitled to qualified teacher status. Teachers who are nationals of participating member states of the European Economic Area who are recognized as qualified in their own countries may also be entitled to qualified teacher status if they meet the requirements on the mutual recognition of qualifications.

Those who have trained overseas in a country outside of the European Economic Area or candidates over 24 who have successfully completed two or more years of higher education may be eligible to train on the job through what are known as 'employment-based' routes. These are the Graduate Teacher Programme (for graduates) and the Registered Teacher Programme (for those with two years of higher education).

In 2000–01 there were about 50,500 students on initial teacher training courses; this figure includes students on the Open University and school-centred courses.

In Jan. 2000, 429,200 full-time equivalent teachers were employed by Local Education Authorities in maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools in England and Wales.

Finance. Total Managed Education and Training expenditure by central and local government in the UK for the year ending 1998–99 was £38.43bn. In 1998–99 total expenditure on education came to 4.5% of GDP. By 2001–02 this is expected to rise to £49.46bn. (about 5% of GDP).

Independent Schools. All independent schools in England (and Wales) are required to be registered by the Department for Education and Employment (and the National Assembly for Wales). Just over half of all independent schools belong to an association affiliated to the Independent Schools Council (ISC). Independent schools which belong to an association affiliated to the Independent Schools Council are now subject to an inspection regime agreed between the government and the ISC. These arrangements provide for inspections which are broadly comparable with the OFSTED framework for inspections of maintained schools and to the same 6-year cycle. They result in publicly available reports which enable parents and others to have information about the general quality and standards achieved in ISC schools. Independent schools which belong to an association account for approximately 80% of the total independent school pupil population. Non-association schools will continue to be inspected by HM inspectors from OFSTED on a 5–6 year cycle.

The earliest of the schools were founded by, and attached to, medieval churches. Many were founded as 'grammar' (classical) schools in the 16th century, receiving charters from the reigning sovereign. Reformed mainly in the middle of the 19th century, among the best-known are Eton College, founded in 1440 by Henry VI; Winchester College (1394), founded by William of Wykeham, Bishop of Winchester; Harrow School, founded in 1560 as a grammar school by John Lyon, a yeoman; and Charterhouse (1611). Among the earliest foundations are King's School, Canterbury, founded 600; King's School, Rochester (604) and St Peter's, York (627).

Higher Education. Higher education has been through considerable changes over the last 30 years. There are now over 1.7m. students studying in higher education institutions in the UK; they study at 111 universities and 60 higher education colleges. The number of male and female students is roughly equal. 22% of British adults between the ages of 25 and 60 have been through university education, compared to an EU average of 19%.

Total revenue for higher education institutions was around £11.6bn. in 1997–98. Approximately 63% of this comes from UK or European Union governments. Higher education institutions are funded by 4 UK funding bodies, one each for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. They are responsible to Parliament for higher education. Their roles include: allocating funds for teaching and research; promoting high-quality education and research; advising government on the needs of higher education; informing students about the quality of higher education available; and ensuring the proper use of public funds.

The Open University received its Royal Charter on 1 June 1969 and is an independent, self-governing institution, awarding its own degrees at undergraduate and postgraduate level. It is financed by the government through the HEFCE for all its students in England, Wales and Northern Ireland and through the Scottish HEFC for the teaching of its students in Scotland, and by the receipt of students' fees. At the heart of most courses is a series of specially produced textbooks or 'course units' (which are also widely used in the rest of the HE sector). They are closely integrated with a varying mix of set books, recommended reading, radio and television programmes, audio and video tapes, home experiment kits, computer-based learning programmes, multimedia resources and network services. There are also 292 local study centres where face-to-face tutorials may be offered. No formal qualifications are required for entry to undergraduate courses. Residents from most countries of Western Europe aged 18 or over may apply (though some courses are not available outside the UK) and in 1999 the United States Open University was founded. There are over 170 undergraduate courses; many are available on a one-off basis. In 1999–2000 there were over 129,000 undergraduates, and over 27,000 postgraduate level students. The university has some 4,000 full-time staff working at Milton Keynes and in 13 regional centres throughout the country. There are over 7,000 part-time associate lecturers.

One university is independent of the state system, the University of Buckingham, which opened in 1976 and received a Royal charter in 1983. It offers 2-year courses towards its own honours degrees, the academic year commencing in Jan. or July and consisting of four 10-week terms. There are 4 areas of study: Business; Humanities; Law; and Sciences. In 1999 there were 583 full-time and 45 part-time undergraduate students and 79 full-time and 14 part-time postgraduate students. There were 75 teachers (3 part-time).

All universities charge fees, but financial help is available to students from several sources, and the majority of students receive some form of financial assistance.

The British Council. The purpose of the British Council is to enhance the reputation of the United Kingdom in the world as a valued partner. Established in 1934 and incorporated by Royal Charter in 1940, it is the UK's international organization for educational and cultural relations. An independent, non-political organization, it is represented in 110 countries, running a mix of offices, libraries, resource centres and English-teaching operations. Its headquarters are in London and Manchester, with further centres in Belfast, Cardiff and Edinburgh.

The British Council's total expenditure in 1999–2000 was £423m. This was made up of government grants (£141m.), revenues from English-language teaching and client-funded education services (£157m.), and development programmes, principally in education and training, which are managed on behalf of the British government and other clients (£127m.).

The British Council teaches English, supports arts events, funds scientific and research links, manages development projects, and runs libraries and information centres.

Health. The National Health Service (NHS) in England and Wales started on 5 July 1948 under the National Health Service Act, 1946. There is a separate Act for Scotland.

The NHS is a charge on the national income in the same way, for example, as the armed forces. Every person normally resident in the UK is entitled to use any complete part of the services, and no insurance qualification is necessary.

Since 1948 a weekly NHS contribution has been payable by employees and the self-employed. In 1957 this contribution was extended to employers. For convenience this contribution is collected with the National Insurance contribution and amounts to 1.05% of the latter for employees and 0.9% for employers. The NHS is funded 12.1% by these contributions, 82% by general taxation and 2.3% by charges for drugs and dental treatment, and the rest from other receipts. Health authorities may raise funds from voluntary sources; hospitals may take private, paying patients.

In 1998–99 the UK spent 5.36% of its GDP on the NHS, with public spending amounting to £45,579m.

Organization. The National Health Service and Community Care Act, 1990, provided for a major restructuring of the NHS. From 1 April 1991 health authorities became the purchasers of healthcare, concentrating on their responsibilities to plan and obtain services for their local residents by the placement of health service contracts with the appropriate units. Day-to-day management tasks became the responsibility of hospitals and other units, with whom the contracts are placed, in their capacity as providers of care.

In April 1996 the Regional Health Authorities were replaced by 8 regional offices of the NHS Executive. The District Health Authorities and Family Health Service Authorities were replaced by comprehensive Health Authorities directly financed by central government's Hospital and Community Health Services funds. The budget for 1996-97 was £2,260m.

The key responsibility of Health Authorities is to ensure that the health needs of their local communities are met. They have the purchasing power to commission hospital and community health services for their residents. In doing so they have a duty to ensure that high standards are maintained and that they are securing the best possible value for money.

The Health Authorities manage the Family Doctor (or General Medical) Service and also organize the general dental, pharmaceutical and ophthalmic services for their areas. Any doctor may take part in the Family Doctor Service, and are paid for their NHS work; they may also take private fee-paying patients.

NHS Trusts are established as self-governing units within the NHS. Trusts are responsible for the ownership and management of the hospitals or other establishments or facilities vested in them, and for carrying out the individual functions set out in their establishment orders. In April 1996 there were 520 Trusts, representing most hospitals.

General practitioners (GPs) may apply for fundholding status, responsible for their own NHS budget for a specified range of goods and services. There are 2 types of fundholder: Standard fundholders for practices with at least 5,000 patients in England and 4,000 in Wales and Scotland, who purchase the full range of in- and out-patient services; and Community fundholders, for smaller practices of at least 3,000 patients, who purchase only community nursing services and diagnostic tests. In 1996 there were some 14,000 fundholding GPs in 3,300 practices, covering 47% of the population.

Services. The NHS broadly consists of hospital and specialist services, general medical, dental and ophthalmic services, pharmaceutical services, community health services and school health services. All these services are free of charge except for such things as prescriptions, spectacles, dental and optical examination, dentures and dental treatment, amenity beds in hospitals, and for some of the community services, for which charges are made with certain exemptions.

The total cost of the NHS was estimated at £49,148m. for 1999-2000.

In 1999 there were 27,591 GPs in England with an average of 1,845 patients each. There were 1,770 in Wales with an average of 1,694 patients each and 3,697 in Scotland with 1,441. There were 16,089 general dental practitioners in England, 913 in Wales and 1,833 in Scotland. In hospitals in Great Britain, in 1999, there were 66,812 medical staff and 362,554 nurses and midwives (down from 490,545 in 1989) excluding agency staff. In 1998 provision of beds in the UK was 42 per 10,000 population. In 1998 there were 194,000 hospital beds (108,000 acute-care beds).

In the UK in 1995 there were 193 public and private hospices for the terminally ill with 2,982 beds.

In 1998, 28% of the population of the UK aged 15 and over smoked. In 1974 the percentage had been 45%, with 51% of males and 41% of females smoking. Over the years the difference between the percentage of men and of women who smoke has been declining, and by the mid-1990s there was a similar rate among men and women. Among schoolchildren 12% of girls but only 9% of boys smoked in 1998. The average British adult smokes 4.2 cigarettes a day, slightly less than the European Union average of 4.5 a day. Alcohol consumption has increased in recent years. Whereas in 1961 the average Briton consumed the equivalent of 4.5 litres of pure alcohol a year, by 1998 this figure had risen to 7.5 litres.

The UK's AIDS rate stands at 24.1 cases per 100,000 population.

A survey published by the World Health Organization in June 2000 to measure health systems in all of the sovereign countries and find which country has the best overall health care ranked the UK in 18th place.

Personal Social Services. Under the Local Authority Social Services Act, 1970, and in Scotland the Social Work (Scotland) Act, 1968, the welfare and social work services provided by local authorities were made the responsibility of a new local authority department—the Social Services Department in England and Wales, and Social Work Departments in Scotland headed by a Director of Social Work, responsibility in Scotland passing in 1975 to the local authorities. The social services thus administered include: the fostering, care and adoption of children, welfare services and social workers for people with learning difficulties and the mentally ill, the disabled and the aged, and accommodation for those needing residential care services. Legislation of 1996 permits local authorities to make cash payments as an alternative to community care. In Scotland the Social Work Departments' functions also include the supervision of persons on probation, of adult offenders and of persons released from penal institutions or subject to fine supervision orders.

Personal Social Services staff numbered 233,655 in 1996. The total cost of these services was estimated at £8,849m. for 1995–96. Expenditure is reviewed by the Social Services Inspectorate and the Audit Commission (in Scotland by the Social Work Services Inspectorate and the Accounts Commission).

Welfare. The National Insurance Act 1946 came into operation on 5 July 1948, repealing the existing schemes of health, pensions and unemployment insurance. This Act, along with later legislation, was consolidated as the National Insurance Act 1965. The scheme now operates under the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992 and the Social Security Administration Act 1992.

Since 1975 Class 1 contributions have been related to the employee's earnings and are collected with PAYE income tax, instead of by affixing stamps to a card. Class 2 and Class 3 contributions remain flat-rate, but, in addition to Class 2 contributions, those who are self-employed may be liable to pay Class 4 contributions, which for the year 1997–98 were at the rate of 6% on profits or gains between £7,010 and £24,180, which are assessable for income tax under Schedule D. The non-employed and others whose contribution record is not sufficient to give entitlement to benefits are able to pay a Class 3 contribution of £6.05 per week in 1997–98 voluntarily, to qualify for a limited range of benefits. Class 2 weekly contributions for 1997–98 for men and women are £6.15. Class 1A contributions are paid by employers who provide employees with a car and fuel for their private use.

From 6 April 1978 the Social Security Pensions Act 1975 introduced earnings-related retirement, invalidity and widows' pensions. Members of occupational pension schemes may be contracted out of the earnings-related part of the state scheme relating to retirement and widows' benefits. Employee's national insurance contribution liability depends on whether he/she is in contracted-out or not contracted-out employment.

Full-rate contributions for non-contracted-out employment in 1997–98:

Weekly Earnings (in £1)	Yearly earnings (in £1)	Employee pays	Employer pays
Nil–62	Nil–3,223	Nil	Nil
62–109	3,223–5,719	10% ¹	3%
110–154	5,720–8,059	10% ¹	5%
155–209	8,060–10,919	10% ¹	7%
210–464	10,920–24,180	10% ¹	10%
Over 465	Over 24,180	£41.54	10%

¹Plus 2% of £62.

Where earnings exceed £62 per week the employee contributes 2% of earnings up to £62 and 10% thereafter.

For contracted-out employment the employees' contributions are as above, but 8.2% on weekly earnings of £62–£465. The employer's rates are reduced by 3%.

From April 1996 employers who engage a trainee, or a person who has been unemployed for at least 2 years, are eligible for a year's rebate of contributions.

Contributions together with interest on investments form the income of the National Insurance Fund from which benefits are paid. A Treasury grant was instituted in 1993. 24,770,000 persons (10,800,000 women) paid contributions in 1996-97, including 22,280,000 employees at standard rate.

Receipts, 1998-99 (in £1m.), 61,462.3, including: contributions, 50,023.4; investment income, 667.3; compensation from Consolidated Fund for recoveries, 576.4. Disbursements (in £1m.), 48,837.4, including: Retirement Pensions, 38,071.7; administration, 1,052.8; Widow's Benefit, 1,007.7; Jobseekers' Allowance (Contributory), 488.9; transfers to Northern Ireland, 315.0; Redundancy Payments, 140.1; Pensioners' Lump Sums, 127.5; Maternity Allowances, 39.3; Guardian's Allowances, 1.8.

Statutory Sick Pay (SSP). Employers are responsible for paying statutory sick pay (SSP) to their employees who are absent from work through illness or injury for up to 28 weeks in any 3-year period. Basically, all employees aged between 16 and 65 (60 for women) with earnings above the Lower Earnings Limit are covered by the scheme whenever they are sick for 4 or more days consecutively. The weekly rate is £54.55. For most employees SSP completely replaces their entitlement to state incapacity benefit which is not payable as long as any employer's responsibility for SSP remains.

Contributory benefits. Qualification for these depends upon fulfilment of the appropriate contribution conditions, except that persons who are incapable of work as the result of an industrial accident may receive incapacity benefit followed by invalidity benefit without having to satisfy the contributions conditions.

Jobseekers' Allowance. This replaced unemployment benefit on 7 Oct. 1996. Unemployed persons claiming the allowance must sign a 'Jobseekers' Agreement' setting out a plan of action to find work. The allowance is not payable to persons who left their job voluntarily or through misconduct. Claimants with sufficient National Insurance contributions are entitled to the allowance for 6 months regardless of their means; otherwise, recipients qualify through a means test and the allowance is fixed according to family circumstances, at a rate corresponding to Income Support for an indefinite period. In May 2000 there were 972,700 people receiving the Jobseekers' Allowance (755,000 males). Payments start at £31.45 per week.

Incapacity benefit. This replaced the former sickness benefit and invalidity benefit on 13 April 1995. Entitlement begins when entitlement to SSP (if any) ends. There are 3 rates: a lower rate for the first 28 weeks; a higher rate between the 29th and 52nd week; and a long-term rate from the 53rd week of incapacity. It also comprises certain age additions and increases for adult and child dependants. A more objective medical test of incapacity for work was introduced for incapacity benefit as well as for other social security benefits paid on the basis of incapacity for work. This test applies after 28 weeks' incapacity for work and assesses ability to perform a range of work-related activities rather than the ability to perform a specific job. Benefit is taxable after 28 weeks. Some 1,504,300 claims were being made in Feb. 2000.

Maternity Benefit. Pregnant working women may be eligible to receive statutory maternity pay directly from their employer for a maximum of 18 weeks. There are 2 rates: where a woman has been working for the same employer for at least 26 weeks, she is entitled to 90% of her average weekly earnings for the first 6 weeks and to the lower rate of £54.55 a week for the remaining 12 weeks. Employers are reimbursed by the state for 92% of the amount they pay.

Women who are not eligible for statutory maternity pay, those who are self-employed, have recently changed jobs or given up their job, may qualify for a weekly maternity allowance of £60.20 for employees and £52.25 for the self- or non-employed, which is payable for up to 18 weeks. There were some 12,000 beneficiaries in 1995-96.

All pregnant employees have the right to take 14 weeks' maternity leave.

A payment of £100 from the Social Fund may be available if the mother or her partner are receiving income support, family credit or disability working allowance. It is also available if a woman adopts a baby.

Widow's Benefits. From 11 April 1988 the three main widow's benefits are: widow's payment, widowed mother's allowance, widow's pension.

A widow cannot get any widow's benefits based on her husband's National Insurance contributions (NIC) if: she had been divorced from the man who has died; or she was living with the man as if she were married to him, but without being legally married to him; or she is living with another man as if she is married to him; or she was in prison or held in legal custody. A widow can only get widow's benefits if her husband has paid enough NIC. Widow's Payment is a single tax-free payment of £1,000. A widow may be able to get this benefit if her husband has paid enough NIC and she was under 60 when her husband died; or her husband was not getting a State Retirement Pension when he died. Widowed Mother's Allowance: A widow may be able to get a widowed mother's allowance if her husband has paid enough NIC and she is receiving child benefit for one of her children, or her husband was receiving child benefit, or she is expecting her husband's baby, or if she was widowed before 11 April 1988 and has a young person under 19 living with her for whom she was receiving Child Benefit. A widow entitled to a widowed mother's allowance will get an amount based on her husband's NIC. She will also get benefit for her eldest dependent child and further higher benefit for each subsequent child, and she may also get an additional pension based on her husband's earnings since 1978. Widowed mother's allowance is usually paid as long as the widow is getting child benefit. It is taxable. Widow's Pension: A widow may be able to get a widow's pension if her husband has paid enough NIC. She must be 45 or over (40 or over if widowed before 11 April 1988) when her husband died or when her widowed mother's allowance ends. A widow cannot get a widow's pension at the same time as a widowed mother's allowance. A widow who is entitled to a widow's pension will get an amount that depends on her age when her husband died or when her widowed mother's allowance ends. If she was 55 or over (50 or over if widowed before 11 April 1988) she will get the full rate of widow's pension. She may also get an additional pension based on her husband's earnings since 1978. If her late husband was a member of a contracted-out occupational scheme or a personal pension scheme, that scheme is responsible for paying the whole or part of the additional pensions. Widow's pension is usually paid until the widow is entitled to state retirement pension, when she is 60 or older. Widow's pension is taxable. There were some 261,000 pensioners in March 2000.

Retirement Pension. The state retirement ('old-age') pension scheme has 2 components: a basic pension and an earnings-related pension (State Earnings Related Pension—SERPS). The amount of the first is subject to National Insurance contributions made; SERPS is 1.25% of average earnings between the lower weekly earnings limit for Class I contribution liability and the upper earnings limit for each year of such earnings, building up to 25% in 20 years. For individuals reaching pensionable age after 6 April 1999, changes in the way pensions are calculated will be phased in over 10 years to include a lifetime's earnings with an accrual rate of 20%. Pensions are payable to women at 60 years of age and men at 65, but the age differential will be progressively phased out starting in April 2010. Women born before 6 April 1950 will be unaffected; women born after 5 March 1955 will receive their pension at 65; pension age for women between these dates will move up gradually from 60 to 65. There are standard rates for single persons and for married couples, the latter being 159% of 2 single-person rates. Proportionately reduced pensions are payable where contribution records are deficient.

Employees in an occupational scheme may be contracted out of SERPS provided that the occupational scheme provides a pension not less than the 'guaranteed minimum pension'. Self-employed persons, and also employees, may substitute personal pension schemes for SERPS. An independent statutory body, the Occupational Pension Board, is responsible for supervising contracted-out schemes.

Self- and non-employed persons may contribute voluntarily for retirement pension.

Persons who defer claiming their pension during the 5 years following retirement age are paid an increased amount, as do men and women who had paid graduated contributions. Although no further graduated contributions have been paid after April 1975, pension already earned will be paid along with the basic pension in the normal way. In March 2000 some 10,967,400 persons were receiving pensions (6,928,000 women and 4,039,400 men). The basic state pension in 2000–01 was £67.50 per week for a single person and £107.90 per week for a married couple.

Since 1 Oct. 1989 the pension for which a person has qualified may be paid in full whether a person continues in work or not irrespective of the amount of earnings. Although for males the official retirement age is 65, in 1995 the average actual retirement age among males was 62.

At the age of 80 a small age addition is payable. In addition non-contributory pensions are now payable, subject to residence conditions, to persons aged 80 and over who do not qualify for a retirement pension or qualify for one at a low rate. These pensions are financed by Exchequer funds.

Pensioners whose pension is insufficient to live on may qualify for Income Support.

Non-Contributory Benefits.

Child Benefit. Child benefit is a tax-free cash allowance for children normally paid to the mother. The weekly rates are highest for the eldest qualifying child and less for each other child. Child benefit is payable for children under 16, for 16- and 17-year-olds registered for work or training, and for those under 19 receiving full-time non-advanced education. Some 7,107,800 families received benefit in 2000 at any one time.

One Parent Benefit is a tax-free cash allowance for certain people bringing up children alone. It is payable for the first or only child in the family in addition to child benefit. There were some 1,067,000 beneficiaries in 1995–96.

Child Support Agency. The Agency, which started work in April 1993, is gradually replacing the court system for obtaining maintenance for children being brought up by single parents. The Agency is responsible for assessing, collecting and enforcing child maintenance payments and for tracing absent parents. Assessments are made using a formula which takes into account each parent's income and essential outgoings. Changes to the child support arrangements were introduced in Feb. 1994 to take account of concerns raised by members of the public and MPs. These are designed to reduce the amount of child maintenance that many absent parents are required to pay, and to give some families more time to adjust to increased bills. Legislation of 1995 introduced the possibility of fixing maintenance alongside the formula-assessment method. Appeals on points of law may be made to the Child Support Commissioners. In 1994–95 the Agency took on 398,584 new cases and completed 568,149 assessments.

Working Families' Tax Credit. This was introduced on 5 Oct. 1999 and replaced Family Credit. It aims to provide a better deal for working families and is administered by the Inland Revenue; it is paid through the pay packet. It is available to families (either couples or lone parents) who work at least 16 hours a week, who have 1 or more children under 16 (or under 19 if in full-time education up to A-level or equivalent standard), who are resident in and entitled to work in the UK, and who have savings of £8,000 or less. In Aug. 2000 there were 1,129,000 WFTC awards current. The average award was £76.86 per week.

Earnings Top-up. This was introduced in Oct. 1996 on a pilot basis in 8 areas. Wages for workers with dependent children are topped up. There are different rates for couples and single persons.

Guardian's Allowance. A person responsible for an orphan child may be entitled to a guardian's allowance in addition to child benefit. Normally, both the child's parents must be dead but when they never married or were divorced, or one is missing, or serving a long sentence of imprisonment, the allowance may be paid on the death of one parent only. In March 2000 there were 2,500 recipients.

Attendance Allowance. This is a tax-free Social Security benefit for disabled people over 65 who need help with personal care. The rates are increased for the terminally ill. There were some 1,283,000 recipients in 1998 at any one time.

Invalid Care Allowance. This is a taxable benefit which may be paid to those who forego the opportunity of full-time work to care for a person who is receiving attendance allowance, constant attendance allowance or the highest or middle-core component of Disability Living Allowance. There is a weekly rate, with increases for dependants. There were some 339,000 recipients in 1995–96.

Disability Living Allowance. This is a non-taxable benefit available to people disabled before the age of 65, who need help with getting around or with personal care for at least 3 months. The mobility component has 2 weekly rates, the care component has 3. There were some 2,218,400 recipients in 1998 at any one time.

Disability Working Allowance. This is a tax-free benefit for people with an illness or disability which puts them at a disadvantage in getting a job. It is income-related and is intended for people who are starting work or already working at least 16 hours a week. The allowance is not payable if assets exceed £16,000. About 8,000 people received the allowance in 1995–96.

Industrial Injuries Disablement and Death Benefits. The Industrial Injuries Act, which also came into operation on 5 July 1948, with its later amending Acts, was consolidated as the National Insurance (Industrial Injuries) Act, 1965. This legislation was incorporated in the Social Security Act, 1975. The scheme provides a system of insurance against 'personal injury by accident arising out of and in the course of employment' and against certain prescribed diseases and injuries due to the nature of the employment. It takes the place of the Workmen's Compensation Acts and covers persons who are employed earners under the Social Security Act. There are no contribution conditions for the payment of benefit. There were 271,700 recipients in 1997 at any one time. Two types of benefit are provided:

—Disablement benefit. This is payable where, as the result of an industrial accident or prescribed disease, there is a loss of physical or mental faculty. The loss of faculty will be assessed as a percentage by comparison with a person of the same age and sex whose condition is normal. If the assessment is between 14–100% benefit will be paid as weekly pension; 14–19% are payable at the 20% rate. The rates vary from 20% disabled to 100% disablement. Assessments of less than 14% do not normally attract basic benefit except for certain progressive chest diseases. Pensions for persons under 18 are at a reduced rate. When injury benefit was abolished for industrial accidents occurring and prescribed diseases commencing on or after 6 April 1983, a common start date was introduced for the payment of disablement benefit 90 days (excluding Sundays) after the date of the relevant accident or onset of the disease. The following increases can be paid with disablement benefit: Constant attendance allowance – where the disability for which the claimant is receiving disablement benefit is assessed at 100% and is so severe that they need constant care and attention. There are 4 rates depending on the amount of attendance needed. Exceptionally severe disablement allowance – where the claimant is in receipt of constant attendance allowance at one of the two higher rates and the need for attendance is likely to be permanent. Reduced earnings allowance (REA) is a separate benefit. Entitlement exists if the claimant has not retired and cannot go back to their normal job or do another job for the same pay because of the effects of the disability caused by an accident or disease which occurred on or before 30 Sept. 1990. It can be paid whether or not disablement benefit is paid, providing the disablement benefit assessment is 1% or more (e.g. where disablement is assessed at less than 14%) and on top of 100% disablement benefit. From 1 Oct. 1989, if a claimant is of pensionable age (60 for a woman, 65 for a man) they can continue to receive REA if they are in regular employment, or in some cases if they are receiving Sickness Benefit, Invalidity Benefit or Unemployment Benefit. It will not matter whether or not they receive State Retirement Pension. If they are not in regular employment, then entitlement to REA will cease. In most cases it will be replaced by Retirement Allowance.

—Death Benefit. This is payable to the widow of a person who died before 11 April 1988 as the result of an industrial accident or a prescribed disease. Deaths which occurred on or after 11 April 1988—a widow is entitled to full widow's benefits even if her late husband did not satisfy the contribution condition, if he died as a result of an industrial accident or prescribed disease. Allowances may be paid to people who are suffering from pneumoconiosis or byssinosis or certain other slowly developing diseases due to employment before 5 July 1948. They must not at any time have been entitled to benefit for the disabled under the Industrial Injuries provision of the Social Security Act, or compensation under Workmen's Compensation Acts, or have received damages through the courts. In certain cases supplementation allowances are payable to people who are getting or are entitled to compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Acts.

War Pensions. Pensions are payable for disablement or death as a result of service in the armed forces, Merchant Navy or Civil Defence during war, or to civilians injured by enemy action. The amount depends on the degree of disablement. Various supplements may apply. There were some 295,700 recipients in 2000 at any one time.

Severe Disablement Allowance. A severe disablement allowance as well as an age-related addition may be payable to people under pensionable age who have been continuously incapable of work for at least 28 weeks, but who do not qualify for incapacity benefit. Those over 20 who are unable to work and are 80% disabled but do not qualify for the National Insurance invalidity pension because they have not paid sufficient contributions may be entitled to severe disablement allowance. Additions for adult dependants and for children may also be paid. There were some 368,000 beneficiaries in 1995–96.

Housing Benefit. The housing benefit scheme assists persons who need help to pay their rent, using general assessment rules and benefit levels similar to those for the income support scheme. People whose net income is below certain specified levels qualify for housing benefit of up to 100% of their rent. The scheme sets a limit of £16,000 on the amount of capital a person may have and still remain entitled. Restrictions on the granting of benefit to persons under 25 were introduced in 1995. In 2000 some 2,287,800 claims for rent rebate and 1,745,700 for rent allowance were being made at any one time.

Council Tax Benefit. The scheme offers help to those claiming income support and others with low incomes. Subject to rules broadly similar to those governing the provision of income support and housing benefit, people may receive rebates of up to 100% of their council tax. In 2000 some 4,829,600 households received such help at any one time. A person who is liable for the council tax may also claim benefit (called 'second adult rebate') for a second adult who is not liable to pay the council tax and who is living in the home on a non-commercial basis.

Income Support. Under the Social Security Act, 1986, benefit was payable to any persons aged 18 years or over not in full-time work who were without adequate resources. Since 7 Oct. 1996 Income Support has been payable only to persons not required to be available for work whose resources are below a certain level. These include single parents, pensioners, long-term sick or disabled persons, and those caring for them who qualify for the invalid care allowance. Income Support is not payable if the claimant (or claimant and partner together) have savings or capital over £8,000. Benefit is reduced if savings or capital of more than £3,000 is held. A person who is excluded from benefit under the normal rules may receive payments to meet urgent needs. Additional sums, known as premiums, are available. There were some 3,810,500 recipients in 2000 (under the 1986 Act) at any one time.

The Social Fund. The Fund makes payments and loans to help recipients meet intermittent expenses. 'Regulated payments' comprise: Maternity Payments (a payment of up to £100 for each baby expected, born or adopted, payable to persons receiving income support, income-based jobseekers' allowance, disability working allowance or family credit); Funeral Payments (a payment of reasonable funeral expenses up to £500 incurred by persons receiving income support, income-based jobseekers' allowance, housing benefit, Council Tax benefit, disability working allowance or family credit; recoverable from the estate of the deceased); Cold Weather Payments (a payment of £8.50 for any consecutive 7 days when the temperature is below freezing to persons receiving income support who are pensioners, disabled or have a child under 5). 'Discretionary Payments' comprise: Community Care Grants (payments to help persons receiving income support to move into the community or avoid institutional care); Budgeting Loans (interest-free loans to persons receiving income support for expenses difficult to budget for); Crisis Loans (interest-free loans to anyone without resources in an emergency where there is no other means of preventing serious risk to health or safety). Savings over £500 (£1,000 for persons aged 60 or over) are taken into account before payments are made.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Radio and television services are provided by the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC), by licensees of the Radio Authority and the Independent Television Commission (ITC) and by the Welsh-language Sianel Pedwar Cymru (S4C, Channel 4 Wales). The BBC, constituted by Royal Charter until 31 Dec. 1996, has responsibility for providing domestic and external broadcast services, the former financed from the television licence revenue, the latter by government grant. The domestic services include 2 national television services, 5 national radio network services and a network of local radio stations. Government proposals for the future of the BBC after 1996 were published in July 1994.

The ITC is responsible for licensing and regulating all non-BBC TV services (except S4C), provided in and from the UK whether analogue or digital. These include ITV (regional and breakfast-time licensees), Channel 4, Channel 5, cable and satellite and additional services, such as teletext, carried on the spare capacity of TV signals. The Radio Authority is responsible for licensing and regulating independent national and local radio services. S4C is transmitted in Wales, and is funded by the government. It acts as both broadcaster and regulator.

The BBC's domestic radio services are available on Long Wave, FM and VHF; those of the Radio Authority on FM and VHF. Television services other than those only on cable and satellite are broadcast at UHF in 625-line definition and in colour (by PAL). The BBC World Service, which started life in 1932 as the Empire Service, broadcast in 42 languages to an audience estimated at 140m. in 1997. As the self-financed BBC Worldwide TV, the BBC is also involved in commercial joint ventures to provide international television services.

The broadcasting authorities, whose governing bodies are appointed (by HM the Queen in the case of the BBC and by the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport in the case of the ITC, the Radio Authority and S4C) as trustees for the public interest in broadcasting, are independent of government and are publicly accountable to Parliament for the discharge of their responsibilities. Their duties and powers are laid down in the BBC Royal Charter and the Broadcasting Act 1990.

All independent (non-BBC) radio and television services other than S4C are financed by the sale of broadcasting advertising time, commercial sponsorship, or, in some cable and satellite services, by subscription.

The Broadcasting Standards Commission (BSC) was established on 1 April 1997 by the Broadcasting Act 1996, through the merger of the Broadcasting Standards Council and Broadcasting Complaints Commission. Combining the functions of the two predecessor bodies, it acts as a forum for public concern about fairness and taste and decency on television and radio. The Commission considers and reaches findings on taste and decency complaints received from the public and adjudicates upon complaints of unfair or unjust treatment in broadcast programmes, and of unwarranted infringement of privacy in programmes or in their preparation. It also undertakes and commissions research and the monitoring of public attitudes, and must draw up a code of practice on both broadcasting standards and fairness which the broadcasters and regulators are required to reflect in their own programming guidelines. The Commission is half-funded by the Department, half by contributions from the BBC, ITC, Radio Authority and S4C.

The number of television receiving licences in force on 31 March 2000 was 22,625,000, of which 22,413,000 were for colour. There were 2,374,000 cable television subscribers in 1997. Approximately 11% of households with TV licences in 1997 had cable TV, compared to 52% in Germany, 67% in the USA and 98% in the Netherlands. By early 2000, 3m. Britons owned a digital television. In 1997 there were 84.5m. radio receivers, or 1,443 per 1,000 inhabitants—a figure only exceeded in the USA, with 2,116 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Cinema. In 1999 cinemas had 2,276 screens. Admissions were 127.9m. in 1999. Admissions had totalled 500m. in 1960, but had fallen as low as 54m. in 1984. Gross box office takings in 1999 amounted to £501.1m. 103 full-length films were made in 1999 (91 in 1998, and 115 in 1997). In 1997 British films took 27% of the national market, but in 1998 this dropped to 13%.

Press. In 2001 there were 10 national dailies with a combined average daily circulation in Feb. 2001 of 12,438,291, and 10 national Sunday newspapers (13,461,339). There were also about 100 morning, evening and Sunday regional newspapers and 2,000 weeklies (about 1,000 of these for free distribution). There were about 6,500 other commercial periodicals and 4,000 professional and business journals. In 1996 an average of 18.3m. newspapers were sold per day, down from over 23m. in 1980. The most widely read daily is the tabloid The Sun, with an average daily circulation of 3,494,108 in Feb. 2001. The most widely read Sunday paper is the tabloid News of the World, which had an average circulation of 3,992,556 in Feb. 2001.

In Jan. 1991 the Press Complaints Commission replaced the former Press Council. It has 15 members and a chair (Lord Wakeham), including 7 editors. It is funded by the newspaper industry.

In 1996, 101,504 book titles were published, including 89,984 non-fiction. 95,064 titles were published in 1995.

Tourism. In 1999 UK residents made 123m. trips within the UK, passing 396m. nights in accommodation and spending £12,900m. Of these, 61.2m. were holiday-makers spending £8,620m. There were 25.4m. overseas visitors in 1999 staying 212m. nights in accommodation and spending £12,498m. UK residents made 46.0m. trips abroad in 1997. The main countries of origin for foreign visitors in 1999 were: USA (3.9m.), France (3.2m.), Germany (2.8m.), Ireland (2.1m.) and the Netherlands (1.6m.). Visitors to the UK from North America increased every year between 1996 and 2000 whilst those from western Europe declined slightly each year. The UK is the 6th most popular tourist destination in the world.

The leading attraction in 1999 was Blackpool Pleasure Beach, Lancs, with an estimated 7.2m. visits. The leading tourist attractions charging admission in 1999 were Alton Towers in Staffordshire, with 2,650,000 visits; Madame Tussaud's in London, with 2,640,000 visits; and the Tower of London, with 2,422,181 visits. In 2000 the Millennium Dome at Greenwich attracted 6,517,000 visitors, making it the leading tourist attraction charging admission in the UK.

In June 1999 there were 1.86m. (not seasonally adjusted) people working in tourism-related industries.

France is the most popular destination for Britons travelling abroad (11.9m. British visitors in 1999), followed by Spain (10.4m.) and the Republic of Ireland (4.2m.). There were 54m. trips abroad made by British residents in 1999, up from 13m. in 1978.

Festivals. Among the most famous music festivals are the Promenade Concerts or 'Proms', which take place at the Royal Albert Hall in London every year from July to Sept, culminating in the Last Night of the Proms; the Glyndebourne Festival in Sussex (May to Aug.); the Aldeburgh Festival in Suffolk (June); the Buxton Festival in Derbyshire (July); and the Glastonbury Festival in Somerset (June). The annual London Film Festival takes place in Nov. Literary festivals include Hay Festival in Herefordshire (late May/early June) and Cheltenham Festival of Literature in Gloucestershire (Oct.). The Brighton Festival in May is England's largest arts festival. The Crufts Dog Show is in March and for the last 15 years a Viking festival has taken place in York in late Feb. The multicultural Notting Hill Carnival in London takes place at the end of Aug. Other traditional festivals include the cheese rolling and Randwick Wap events in Randwick, Gloucestershire on the first Sunday and second Saturday in May.

Libraries. In 1997 there were 5,183 public libraries, 18 National libraries and 781 Higher Education libraries; they held a combined 249,361,000 volumes. There were 61,415,000 registered library users in 1997.

Museums and Galleries. The museums with the highest number of visitors are all in London. In 1997 there were 6,056,633 visits to the British Museum, 4,809,063 to the National Gallery, 1,793,400 to the Natural History Museum, 1,757,735 to the Tate Gallery and 1,537,151 to the Science Museum.

ENGLAND

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

After the withdrawal of the Roman legions, 5th century Celtic Britain was invaded by Scandinavian and Teutonic tribes. In the course of the next 150 years they conquered the east and centre of the country, pinning down the Celtic Britons on the higher lands to the west. More than 200 years passed before the prevailing tribes recognized one king.

For much of the 1st century AD, Viking invaders were dominant in England. An Anglo-Saxon counter-attack was led by King Alfred, whose successors consolidated their hold on the country. After the departure of the Scandinavians, England attracted the interest of France or, more particularly, Normandy. In 1066 William, Duke of Normandy, was victorious against King Harold at the Battle of Hastings. William was crowned king. When William died in 1087, he left Normandy to his eldest son Robert, thus separating it from England. The French dialect known as Anglo Norman was spoken by the ruling class in England for two centuries after the Conquest.

The Norman heritage was preserved also in the overlap between French and English feudal lords. Henry II, the founder of the Plantagenet dynasty, was feudatory lord of half France. But most of the French possessions were lost by Henry's son John. Thereafter, the Norman baronage came to regard themselves as English.

The ambitions of Edward III began and those of Henry V renewed the Hundred Years War (1338–1453) with France, which ended with the loss of all the remaining French possessions except Calais.

The dynastic struggle between the rival houses of York and Lancaster culminated in the Tudor ascendancy over political and clerical factions. Henry VII was a unifying monarch preparing the way for Henry VIII who forced the Church to submit to lay rule. Tudor power reached its zenith with Elizabeth I when England, allied with other Protestant powers, humbled the Spanish Armada.

Elizabeth's death brought on a great struggle for supremacy between Crown and Parliament. There followed the Civil War, the execution of Charles I, the rule by Protector Cromwell by military dictatorship, and the restoration of the Stuart monarchy on terms which conceded financial authority and thus decision-making power to Parliament.

The attempt of James II to restore the royal prerogative led to the intervention of William of Orange. James fled the country and the crown was taken by William and his wife Mary as Queen. The accession of William involved England in a protracted war against France but before peace was achieved, the 1688 revolution was confirmed by the Hanoverian succession, and the history of England was merged with that of Great Britain by the union with Scotland in 1707.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

At the census taken on 21 April 1991 the area of England was 130,423 sq. km and the population 46,382,050. England covers 53.6% of the total area of the United Kingdom.

Population density (persons per ha), 1991 census: 3.6. Private households at the 1991 census: 19,984,500. Estimated population of England, mid-1999, 49,753,000 (25,210,000 females and 24,543,000 males), giving a density of 3.8 per ha.

Population (present on census night) at the 4 previous decennial censuses:

¹Area now included in Wales formed the English county of Monmouthshire until 1974.

²The final count is believed to be over-stated as a result of an error in processing. The preliminary counts presented here rounded to the nearest hundred are thought to be more accurate.

Population (usually resident) at the census of 1991:

Males	Females	Total
22,812,889	24,242,315	47,055,204

For further statistical information, see under Territory and Population, Great Britain.

8 'Standard Regions' (also classified as 'level 1 regions' for EU purposes) are identified in England as economic planning regions. They have no administrative significance. They are (with estimated population in 1999): East Anglia, 2,196; East Midlands, 4,191; West Midlands, 5,336; North, 3,073; North West, 6,389; South East, 18,586 (including Greater London, 7,285); South West, 4,936; Yorkshire and Humberside, 5,047. Although the populations of most of the regions increased during the 1990s, both the North and the North West saw their populations decline, by 19,000 and 7,000 respectively between 1991 and 1999.

Following the local government reorganization in the mid-1990s, there is a mixed pattern to local government in England. Apart from Greater London, England is divided into 34 counties with 2 tiers of administration; a county council and district councils. There are 6 metropolitan county areas containing 36 single-tier metropolitan districts.

ENGLAND

In addition, there are 46 single-tier unitary authorities which, with the exception of the Isle of Wight, were formally district councils in the shire counties of England. The Isle of Wight is a unitary county council.

As a consequence of the establishment of the 46 unitary authorities, a number of county areas were abolished. These were Avon, Cleveland and Humberside. Berkshire County Council was also abolished but the county itself is retained for ceremonial purposes. Greater London comprises 32 boroughs and the City of London.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Education. For details on the nature and types of school, see under Education, Great Britain.

In 1995–96 education expenditure by Central and Local government in England was £29.6bn. In Jan. 2000 there were 514 public-sector nursery and 6,203 primary schools with nursery classes in England; in addition, there were 1,509 independent schools with provision for children under 5. In 2000 there were 46,297 pupils under 5 attending nursery schools and 667,311 pupils under 5 in nursery and infant classes in primary schools. About 47% of all these children were attending part-time.

In Jan. 2000 there were 4,435,346 pupils at 18,158 primary schools in England, of which 2,182 were infant schools providing for pupils up to the age of about 7, the remainder mainly taking pupils from age 5 through to 11. Nearly all primary schools take both boys and girls. 14.9% of primary schools had 100 full-time pupils or fewer.

In Jan. 2000 there were 535 middle schools in England deemed either primary or secondary according to the age range of the school concerned.

In Jan. 2000 there were 3,550 secondary schools in England. Some local authorities have retained selection at age 11 for entry to grammar schools, of which there were 164 in 2000. There were a small number of technical schools in 2000 which specialize in technical studies. There were 148 secondary modern schools in 2000, providing a general education up to the minimum school leaving age of 16, although exceptionally some pupils stay on beyond that age.

Almost all local education authorities operate a system of comprehensive schools to which pupils are admitted without reference to ability or aptitude. In Jan. 1997 there were 2,882 such schools in England with over 2.6m. pupils. With the development of comprehensive education, various patterns of secondary schools have come into operation. Principally these are: 1) All-through schools with pupils aged 11 to 18 or 11 to 16; pupils over 16 being able to transfer to an 11 to 18 school or a sixth form college providing for pupils aged 16 to 19. (There were 73 sixth form colleges in England in 1999). 2) Local education authorities operating a three-tier system involving middle schools where transfer to secondary school is at ages 12, 13 or 14. These correspond to 12 to 18, 13 to 18 and 14 to 18 comprehensive schools respectively; or 3) In areas where there are no middle schools a two-tier system of junior and senior comprehensive schools for pupils aged 11 to 18 with optional transfer to these schools at age 13 or 14.

Under the Education Act 1996 children have special educational needs if they have a learning difficulty which calls for special educational provision to be made for them. In some cases the Local Education Authority will need to make a statutory assessment of special educational needs under the Education Act 1996, which may ultimately lead to a 'statement'. In England the total number of pupils with statements in 2000 was 252,857. In 2000 there were 1,134 maintained special schools and 63 non-maintained special schools.

Outside the state system of education there were in England about 2,187 independent schools in Jan. 2000, ranging from large prestigious schools to small local ones. Some provide boarding facilities but the majority include non-resident day pupils. There are about 560,560 pupils in these schools, which represent about 7% of the total pupil population in England.

Further Education (Non-University). In 1999–2000 some 3.2m. students funded by the Further Education Funding Council (FEFC) were attending colleges and institutions in England, studying for a total of 5.7m. qualifications.

Higher Education. In England in 2000–01 there were 130 institutions of higher education directly funded by the HEFCE (Higher Education Funding Council for England), of which 76 were universities. The HEFCE allocates public funds for teaching and research to universities and colleges. It works in partnership with the higher education sector and advises the government on higher education policy. In 2000–01 the HEFCE distributed £3,958m. in funding, including £3,020m. for teaching and £867m. for research. There were 1,552,000 students in funded institutions, including 954,000 full-time and sandwich students.

SCOTLAND

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Earliest evidence of human settlement in Scotland dates from the Middle Stone Age. Hunters and fishermen on the west coast were succeeded by farming communities who made homes as far north as Shetland. The Romans were active in the first century AD but made so little impact on hostile tribes they built Hadrian's Wall between the Tyne and Solway Firth as their northern frontier. At this time, the Picts with their own language and culture consolidated their strength beyond the Firth of Clyde, but it was the southern Scots, a Celtic people from Ireland, who gave their name to the land.

In 843 Kenneth MacAlpine united the Scots and the Picts to found the kingdom of Scotland. A legal and administrative uniformity was established by David I whose 29-year reign ended in 1153. His successors maintained an understanding with England which allowed for a century of peace, but in 1286 Edward I of England asserted his claim as overlord of Scotland and appointed his son to succeed to the crown.

Resistance to English rule was led by Robert Bruce, who turned back the English at Bannockburn. His son, David II, was less successful in the battlefield, but defended independence by clever diplomacy. He died in 1371 and was succeeded by his nephew Robert, the first king of the Stuart line.

The reigns of five James's occupied the century and a half between the death of Robert III in 1406 and the accession of Mary. This was the time when the alliance between France and Scotland was cemented by common hostility to England.

James IV reinforced a peace agreement with Henry VII by marrying his daughter Margaret in 1503. Religious differences put a strain on the alliance, and when Henry VIII invaded France, James attacked England only to be killed in the Battle of Flodden.

The young James V was assailed by conflicting pressures from pro-French and pro-English factions but having secured his personal rule, he entered into two successive French marriages. His second wife, Mary, was the mother of Mary, Queen of Scots, who married the Dauphin in 1558. Protestant opposition to French influence was bolstered by Elizabeth I of England who sent troops. Mary was then in France. Returning to Scotland after her husband's death in 1561 she was beset by religious enemies and forced to take refuge in England, where she was the nearest heir to Elizabeth. Her son James VI survived the animosity between his own and his mother's followers to make an alliance with England. With the execution of his mother by a nervous Protestant establishment in England, James became heir to the English throne to which he succeeded in 1603.

The crowns of England and Scotland were now worn by the same monarch but for a century more the two countries remained independent. Reflecting the religious and political divisions of the Civil War in England, which led to the execution of Charles I, Scottish armies fought for both sides. The Scots soon united, however, to accept Charles II as their king. Having established dominance in England, Cromwell moved against Scotland forcing Charles II into exile. His restoration in 1660 was welcomed in both kingdoms. His successor James VII of Scotland and James II of Great Britain and Ireland was less astute in managing religious and political differences. The collapse of his regime in 1688 and the arrival of William of Orange confirmed the Protestant ascendancy in Scotland and England.

The union of parliament, which followed in 1707, brought Scotland more directly under English authority but in many respects the country retained its own system of government.

The remaining supporters of James VII, the Jacobites, led two abortive risings on behalf of James's son and grandson (the old and new Pretenders) but were defeated decisively at Culloden in 1746.

One of the main aspects of the British Labour government's programme of constitutional reform is devolution. In the referendum on Scottish devolution on 11 Sept. 1997, 1,775,045 votes (74.3%) were cast in favour of a Scottish parliament and 614,400 against (25.7%). The turn-out was 60.4%, so around 44.8% of the total electorate voted in favour. For the second question, on the Parliament's tax-raising powers, 1,512,889 votes were cast in favour (63.5%) and 870,263 against (36.5%). This represented 38.4% of the total electorate.

The Parliamentary electorate of Scotland in the register numbered 3,992,502 in 1998.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the UK general election held in June 2001, 72 members were returned from Scotland. The Scottish National Party gained 5 seats (6 in 1997). At the June 1999 European Parliament elections Labour won 3 seats, the Scottish National Party 2, the Conservatives 2 and Liberal Democrats 1.

In elections to the new Scottish Parliament on 6 May 1999, Labour won 56 of 129 seats, against 35 for the Scottish National Party, 18 for the Conservatives, 17 for the Liberal Democrats and 3 for others. Of the 129 seats, 73 were won on a first-past-the-post basis and 56 through proportional representation. Turn-out was 59%. Donald Dewar was elected as First Minister on 13 May 1999. He died on 11 Oct. 2000 and was replaced as First Minister by Henry McLeish, who won the election held on 26 Oct. with 68 votes against 33 for his nearest rival, John Swinney. There were 2 other candidates.

DEFENCE

For information on defence, see Great Britain.

ECONOMY

Performance. A deceleration in Scottish GDP growth was predicted for 1999 of between 1.4% and 1.7%, but growth was expected to recover to between 1.9% and 2.9% in 2000. GDP per head in 1997 was £10,975, compared to a figure of £11,768 for Great Britain as a whole.

Budget. Government expenditure in Scotland came to £24,748m. in 1996–97, of which £9,142m. went on social security, £5,225m. on health and personal social services and £4,026m. on education.

Currency. The Bank of Scotland, Clydesdale Bank and the Royal Bank of Scotland have note-issuing powers. The underlying inflation rate rose to 2.6% in Dec. 1998.

Banking and Finance. There is a stock exchange in Glasgow.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. The Electricity Act 1989 created 3 new companies in Scotland. ScottishPower and Scottish Hydro-Electric (now renamed Scottish and Southern Energy) are vertically integrated companies carrying out generation, transmission, distribution and supply of electricity within their areas. They were privatized in 1990. Scottish Nuclear, responsible for operating the 2 Scottish nuclear power stations, was merged with Nuclear Electric in 1996. ScottishPower now owns Manweb in England, and Scottish Hydro-Electric has merged with Southern Electric under its new group name.

Water. Water supply is the responsibility of the Regional and Island local authorities. 7 river purification boards are responsible for environmental management.

Selected crop production, 1997 (1,000 tonnes): barley, 1,813; potatoes, 1,149; wheat, 821; oats, 121.

Livestock, 1997 (in 1,000): cattle, 2,079; sheep, 9,563; pigs, 645; poultry, 14,725.

Forestry. Total forest area in 2000 was 1,318,000 ha, of which 493,000 ha was state-owned.

Fisheries. The major fishing ports are Aberdeen, Mallaig, Lerwick and Peterhead. In 1997 there were 2,770 fishing vessels that landed 686,400 tonnes of fish worth £278.7m.

INDUSTRY

Labour. In 1997 the economically active population numbered 2,490,000 (1,126,000 females), of whom 212,000 (78,000) were unemployed. This equates to an unemployment rate of 8.5% for men and 7.0% for women. By the spring of 2000 the overall rate was down to 7.6%, compared to 5.5% for the UK as a whole. In Sept. 1997, 22.7% of the active workforce were in distribution, hotels and catering and repairs, 21.2% in education, social work and health services, 16.4% in manufacturing, and 14.85% in financial and business services.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Responsibility for the construction and maintenance of trunk roads belongs to the Scottish Office. Roads not classified as trunk roads are the responsibility of county or unitary councils. In 1997 there were 53,100 km of public roads, of which 329 km were motorways. There were 1,779,000 licensed private and light goods vehicles.

Rail. Total railway length in 1997 was 2,696 km. There is a metro in Glasgow.

Civil Aviation. There are major airports at Aberdeen, Edinburgh, Glasgow and Prestwick. In 1998, 14,382,437 passengers and 68,516 tonnes of freight were carried.

Shipping. The principal Scottish port is Forth, which handled 44.0m. tonnes of cargo in 1998.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The High Court of Justiciary is the supreme criminal court in Scotland and has jurisdiction in all cases of crime committed in any part of Scotland, unless expressly excluded by statute. It consists of the Lord Justice General, the Lord Justice Clerk and 24 other Judges, who are the same Judges who preside in the Court of Session, the Scottish Supreme Civil Court. One Judge is seconded to the Scottish Law Commission. The Court is presided over by the Lord Justice General, whom failing, by the Lord Justice Clerk, and exercises an appellate jurisdiction as well as being a court of first instance. The home of the High Court is Edinburgh, but the court visits other towns and cities in Scotland on circuit and indeed the busiest High Court sitting is in Glasgow. The court sits in Edinburgh both as a Court of Appeal (the quorum being 2 judges if the appeal is against sentence or other disposals, and 3 in all other cases) and on circuit as a court of first instance. Although the decisions of the High Court are not subject to review by the House of Lords, with the Scotland Act 1998 coming into force on 20 May 1999, there is a limited right of appeal against the termination of a devolution issue to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. One Judge sitting with a Jury of 15 persons can, and usually does, try cases, but 2 or more Judges (with a Jury) may do so in important or complex cases. The court has a privative jurisdiction over cases of treason, murder, rape, breach of duty by Magistrates and certain statutory offences under the Official Secrets Act 1911 and the Geneva Conventions Act 1957. It also tries the most serious crimes against person or property and those cases in which a sentence greater than imprisonment for 3 years is likely to be imposed.

The appellate jurisdiction of the High Court of Justiciary extends to all cases tried on indictment, whether in the High Court or the Sheriff Court, and persons so convicted may appeal to the court against conviction or sentence, or both, except where the sentence is fixed by law. In such an appeal, a person may bring under review any alleged miscarriage of justice including an alleged miscarriage of justice based on the existence and significance of evidence not heard at the original proceedings provided there is reasonable explanation of why it was not heard and an alleged miscarriage of justice where the Jury returned a verdict which no reasonable Jury, properly directed, could have returned. It is also a court of review from courts of summary jurisdiction, and on the final termination of any summary prosecution the convicted person may appeal to the court by way of stated case on questions of law, but not on questions of fact, except in relation to a miscarriage of justice alleged by the person accused on the basis of the existence and significance of additional evidence not heard at the original proceedings provided that there is a reasonable explanation of why it was not heard. Before cases proceed to a full hearing, leave of appeal must first be granted. Grounds of appeal and any relevant reports are sifted by a Judge sitting alone in chambers, who will decide if there are arguable grounds of appeal. Should leave of appeal be refused, this decision may be appealed to the High Court within 14 days, when the matter will be reviewed by 3 Judges. The Lord Advocate is entitled to appeal to the High Court against any sentence passed on indictment on the ground that it is unduly lenient, or on a point of law. Both the prosecution and defence, at any time in solemn and summary proceedings, may appeal by way of Bill of Advocation in order to correct irregularities in the preliminary stages of a case. In summary proceedings the accused may appeal by Bill of Suspension, where he desires to bring under review a warrant, conviction or judgement issued by an inferior Judge. In summary proceedings the accused can also appeal against sentence alone by way of Stated Case. In summary proceedings the Crown can appeal against a sentence on the grounds that it is unduly lenient. The court also hears appeals under the Courts-Martial (Appeals) Act 1951.

The Sheriff Court has an inherent universal criminal jurisdiction (as well as an extensive civil one), limited in general to crimes and offences committed within a sheriffdom (a specifically defined region), which has, however, been curtailed by statute or practice under which the High Court of Justiciary has exclusive jurisdiction in relation to the crimes mentioned above. The Sheriff Court is presided over by a Sheriff Principal or a Sheriff, who when trying cases on indictment sits with a Jury of 15 people. His powers of awarding punishment involving imprisonment are restricted to a maximum of 3 years, but he may under certain statutory powers remit the prisoner to the High Court for sentence if this is felt to be insufficient. The Sheriff also exercises a wide summary criminal jurisdiction and when doing so sits without a Jury; and he has concurrent jurisdiction with every other court within his Sheriff Court district in regard to all offences competent for trial in summary courts. The great majority of offences which come before courts are of a more minor nature and as such are disposed of in the Sheriff Summary Courts or in the District Courts (see below). Where a case is to be tried on indictment either in the High Court of Justiciary or in the Sheriff Court, the Judge may, before the trial, hold a preliminary or first diet to decide questions of a preliminary nature, whether relating to the competency or relevancy of proceedings or otherwise. Any decision at a preliminary diet (other than a decision to adjourn the first or preliminary diet or discharge trial diet) can be the subject of an appeal to the High Court of Justiciary prior to the trial. The High Court also has the exclusive power to provide a remedy for all extraordinary occurrences in the course of criminal business where there is no other mode of appeal available. This is known as the Nobile Officium powers of the High Court and all petitions to the High Court as the Nobile Officium must be heard before at least 3 judges.

In cases to be tried on indictment in the Sheriff Court a first diet is mandatory before the trial diet to decide questions of a preliminary nature and to identify cases which are unlikely to go to trial on the date programmed. Likewise in summary proceedings, an intermediate diet is again mandatory before trial. In High Court cases such matters may be dealt with at a preliminary diet.

District Courts have jurisdiction in more minor offences occurring within a district which before recent local government reorganization corresponded to district council boundaries. These courts are presided over by Lay Magistrates, known as Justices, who have limited powers for fine and imprisonment. In Glasgow District there are also Stipendiary Magistrates, who are legally qualified, and who have the same sentencing powers as Sheriffs.

The Court of Session, presided over by the Lord President (the Lord Justice General in criminal cases), is divided into an inner-house comprising 2 divisions of 4 judges each with a mainly appellate function, and an outer-house comprising 18 single Judges sitting individually at first instance; it exercises the highest civil jurisdiction in Scotland, with the House of Lords as a Court of Appeal.

Police. In Scotland, the unitary councils have the role of police authorities. Establishment levels were abolished in Scotland on 1 April 1996. The actual strength at 31 March 1999 was 12,428 men and 2,255 women. There were 1,651 special constables. The total police net expenditure in Scotland for 1997–98 was £715.6m.

In 1999 there were 436,000 crimes reported, of which 23,000 were violent. The average prison population in Scotland in 1999 was 6,029.

Religion. The Church of Scotland, which was reformed in 1560, subsequently developed a presbyterian system of church government which was established in 1690 and has continued to the present day.

The supreme court is the General Assembly, which now consists of some 800 members, ministers and elders in equal numbers, together with members of the diaconate commissioned by presbyteries. It meets annually in May, under the presidency of a Moderator appointed by the Assembly. The Queen is normally represented by a Lord High Commissioner, but has occasionally attended in person. The royal presence in a special throne gallery in the hall but outside the Assembly symbolizes the independence from state control of what is nevertheless recognized as the national Church in Scotland.

There are also 46 presbyteries in Scotland, together with 1 presbytery of England, 1 presbytery of Europe, and 1 presbytery of Jerusalem. At the base of this conciliar structure of Church courts are the kirk sessions, of which there were 1,598 on 31 Dec. 1999. The total communicant membership of the Church at that date was 626,665.

The Episcopal Church of Scotland is a province of the Anglican Church and is one of the historic Scottish churches. It consists of 7 dioceses. As at 31 Dec. 2000 it had 311 churches and missions, 345 clergy and 49,995 members, of whom 31,247 were communicants.

There are in Scotland some small outstanding Presbyterian bodies and also Baptists, Congregationalists, Methodists and Unitarians.

The Roman Catholic Church which celebrated the centenary of the restoration of the Hierarchy in 1978, had in Scotland (1998) 1 cardinal archbishop, 1 archbishop, 5 bishops, 20 permanent deacons, 907 clergy, 463 parishes and 705,650 adherents.

The proportion of marriages in Scotland according to the rites of the various Churches in 1998 was: Church of Scotland, 34.9%; Roman Catholic, 8.0%; Baptist Union of Scotland, 4.2%; others, 9.4%; civil, 43.5%.

Education. In Sept. 1999 there were 2,877 publicly funded (local authority, grant-aided and self-governing) primary, secondary and special schools. All teachers employed in these schools require to be qualified.

Pre-school Education. There were 2,213 pre-school centres that were in partnership with their local authority or in receipt of grants in Sept. 1999. There were 88,799 pupils enrolled in these centres.

Primary Education. In Sept. 1999 there were 2,293 publicly funded primary schools with 431,414 pupils and 22,643 full-time equivalent teachers.

Secondary Education. In Sept. 1999 there were 389 publicly funded secondary schools with 315,356 pupils and 1,264 adults. All but 21 schools provided a full range of Scottish Certificate of Education courses and non-certificate courses. Pupils who start their secondary education in schools which do not cater for a full range of courses may be transferred at the end of their second or fourth year to schools where a full range of courses is provided. There were 24,455 full-time equivalent teachers in secondary schools.

Independent schools. There were 167 independent schools in Sept. 1999, with a total of 30,363 pupils. A small number of the Scottish independent schools are of the 'public school' type, but they are not known as 'public schools' since in Scotland this term is used to denote education authority (i.e., state) schools.

Special Education. In Sept. 1999 there were 195 publicly funded special schools with 8,311 pupils.

Further Education. Under the Further and Higher Education (Scotland) Act 1992 funding of the Further Education colleges was transferred to central government in 1993. With effect from 1 July 1999 Scotland's FE colleges are funded by the Scottish Further Education Funding Council, a new executive Non Departmental Public Body established by the Secretary of State for Scotland on 1 Jan. 1999.

There are 43 incorporated FE colleges as well as the FE colleges in Orkney and Shetland, which are run by the local education authorities, and 2 privately managed colleges, Sabhal Mor Ostaig and Newbattle Abbey College. The colleges offer training in a wide range of vocational areas and co-operate with the Scottish Qualifications Authority, the Enterprise and Lifelong Learning Department and the Education Department of the Scottish Executive in the development of new courses.

The qualifications offered by colleges aim to improve the skills of the nation's workforce and increase the country's competitiveness. The colleges benefit from co-operation with industry, through involvement with Industry Lead Bodies and National Training Organizations whose responsibility it is to identify education, training and skills needs at sectoral level. Industry is also represented on college boards of management. Colleges and schools in Scotland are directly involved in providing the new national qualifications introduced in 1999 as a result of the Higher Still development programme.

In 1998–99 there were 290,300 students enrolled on vocational courses at Scotland's 47 further education institutions. The full-time equivalent staff number in the colleges was 6,631 in 1998–99.

Full-time students resident in Scotland (and EU students) undertaking non-advanced (further education) courses are mainly supported through discretionary further education bursaries which are administered locally by further education colleges within National Policy Guidelines issued by the Scottish Further Education Funding Council. The Colleges have delegated discretionary powers for some aspects of the bursary support award.

In May 2000 the Scottish Executive announced the abolishment of tuition fees for all eligible Scottish (and EU) full-time further education students from Autumn 2000. The Executive also made a commitment to take steps to align, from Autumn 2001, the levels of support available on a weekly basis for FE students with those that will apply for HE students and to begin to align the systems of assessment of parental/family contributions. Work is progressing on this commitment.

Higher Education. In Scotland in 2000 there were 19 institutions of higher education funded by the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council (SHEFC), with the exception of the Scottish Agricultural College which is funded by the Scottish Executive Rural Affairs Department. Included in this total is the Open University. SHEFC took over the responsibility for funding the Open University in Scotland at the start of the 2000–01 academic session. University education in Scotland has a long history. Four universities—St Andrews, Glasgow, Aberdeen and Edinburgh, known collectively as the 'four ancient Scottish universities'—were founded in the 15th and 16th centuries. Four further universities—Strathclyde, Heriot-Watt, Stirling and Dundee—were formally established as independent universities between 1964 and 1967, and four others—Napier, Paisley, Robert Gordon and Glasgow Caledonian—were granted the title of university in 1992, with a fifth, the University of Abertay, Dundee, being added in 1994.

The remaining higher education institutes, which all offer courses at degree level, although not themselves universities, were formerly either Central Institutions or Colleges of Education created for the training of teachers. They are: Edinburgh College of Art, Glasgow School of Art, Northern College of Education (Aberdeen and Dundee), Queen Margaret College (Edinburgh), Royal Scottish Academy of Music and Drama (Glasgow) and Scottish Agricultural College (Perth). Higher education courses may also be provided by further education colleges.

All the higher education institutions are independent and self-governing. In addition to funding through the higher education funding councils, they receive tuition fees through local education authorities for students domiciled in England and Wales, and from the Students Awards Agency for Scotland for students domiciled in Scotland. Institutions which carry out research may also receive funding through the 5 Research Councils administered by the Office of Science and Technology.

Tourism. There were 1,856,000 overseas visitors to Scotland in 1999, spending £817m. Overall tourism receipts totalled £2.48bn. The tourist attraction receiving the most visitors is Edinburgh Castle, with 1,219,055 visits in 1999. In 2000, 8% of the workforce was employed in the tourism industry.

Festivals. The Edinburgh Festival and the Fringe Festival both take place in Aug./early Sept. and are major international festivals of culture.

Museums and Galleries. The most visited museum is Glasgow Art Gallery and Museum, with 1,053,745 visits in 1997, followed by the Royal Museum of Scotland, in Edinburgh, with 591,152 visits.

WALES

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

After the Roman evacuation, Wales divided into tribal kingdoms. Cunedda Wledig, a prince from southern Scotland, founded a dynasty in the northwest district of Gwynedd to become the centrepiece for Welsh unity. Offa's Dyke, the defensive earthwork built in the time of King Offa of Mercia, was the dividing line between England and Wales but over the next two centuries a succession of Welsh kings deferred to the English monarchy.

With the accession of Llewelyn (1194–1240) the house of Gwynedd overcame rival claims from Powys and Deneubarth to forge a stable political state under English suzerainty. But when Llywelyn ap Gruffydd (1246–82) intrigued against Edward I, Wales was annexed and Edward's infant son, born at Caernarvon, was made Prince of Wales.

WALES

In the Tudor period, Welsh loyalty to Henry VIII, who was of Welsh descent, was fully reciprocated. The Act of Union in 1536 made English law general and admitted Welsh representatives to Parliament.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

At the census taken on 21 April 1991 the area of Wales was 20,766 sq. km and the population 2,811,865. Wales covers 8.5% of the total area of the United Kingdom.

Population ('usually resident') at the census of 1991:

Males	Females	Total

²The final count is believed to be over-stated as a result of an error in processing. The preliminary counts presented here rounded to the nearest hundred are thought to be more accurate.

Population density (persons per ha), 1991 census: 1.4. Estimated population, mid-1999, 2,937,000 (1,495,000 females and 1,442,000 males), giving a density of 1.41 per ha. Cardiff, the capital and largest city, had a population in 1999 of 324,000; Swansea, the second largest city, had a population of 230,000 in 1996.

In 1997, 20.5% of the Welsh population (around 600,000 people) were able to speak Welsh. Private households at the 1991 census: 1,201,700.

For further statistical information, see under Territory and Population, Great Britain.

Wales is divided into 22 unitary authorities (cities and counties, counties and county boroughs).

The clear-up rate was 40.6%. 17,350 people were found guilty of indictable offences in Magistrates' Courts and 4,040 in Crown Courts. A total of 4,158 people were given custodial sentences.

In Jan. 2000 there were 288,418 pupils at 1,644 primary schools. Within these figures, 444 primary schools use Welsh as the sole or main medium of instruction. Such schools are to be found in all parts of Wales but are mainly concentrated in the predominantly Welsh-speaking areas of west and northwest Wales. Generally, children transfer from primary to secondary schools at 11 years of age.

In Jan. 2000 there were 228 secondary schools. All maintained secondary schools are classified as comprehensive; there are no middle schools in Wales. In 1999–2000, 52 of the secondary schools were classed as Welsh-speaking as defined in section 354(b) of the Education Act 1996.

Prior to Sept. 1998 local education authority-maintained secondary and primary schools could apply for Grant Maintained (GM) status as self-governing state schools. By the time this option ceased there were in existence 5 GM primary schools, 11 secondary schools and 1 school with both primary and secondary pupils. From Sept. 1999 these schools changed category to one of those prescribed by the School Standards and Framework Act 1998.

Under the Education Act 1996, children have special educational needs if they have a learning difficulty which calls for special educational provision to be made for them. In a minority of cases (3.5% of children) the local education authority will need to make a statutory assessment of special educational needs under the Education Act 1996, which may ultimately lead to a 'statement'. The total number of pupils with statements in Jan. 1998 was 17,154.

In Nov. 1999 there were 28 institutions in the further education sector and 157,632 students.

NORTHERN IRELAND

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Northern Ireland is part of the United Kingdom. The Government of Ireland Act 1920 granted Northern Ireland its own bicameral parliament (Stormont), and between 1921 and 1972 it had full responsibility for local affairs except for such matters as defence and the armed forces, foreign and trade policies, and taxation and customs. However, in the late 1960s a Civil Rights campaign and reactions to it escalated into serious rioting and sectarian violence involving the Irish Republican Army (IRA, an illegal organization aiming to unify Northern Ireland with the Republic of Ireland) and loyalist paramilitary organizations. The Northern Ireland government resigned and direct rule by the UK government began in 1972. The Northern Ireland parliament was abolished in 1973. The Northern Ireland Constitution Act 1973 provided for devolved government on a power-sharing basis, but this collapsed in May 1974.

Under the Northern Ireland Act 1974 the UK parliament approves all laws for Northern Ireland and the Northern Ireland departments are under the direction and control of a UK Cabinet Minister, the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Attempts have been made by successive governments to find a means of restoring greater power to Northern Ireland's political representatives on a widely acceptable basis, including a Constitutional Convention (1975–76), a Constitutional Conference (1979–80) and 78-member Northern Ireland Assembly elected by proportional representation in 1982. This was dissolved in 1986, partly in response to Unionist reaction to the Anglo-Irish Agreement signed on 15 Nov. 1985, which established an Intergovernmental Conference of British and Irish ministers to monitor political, security, legal and other issues of concern to the nationalist community.

On 15 Dec. 1993 the Prime Ministers of the UK and the Republic of Ireland (John Major and Albert Reynolds) issued a joint declaration as a basis for all-party talks to achieve a political settlement. They invited Sinn Féin ('Ourselves Alone', pro-Republican nationalist party and the political wing of the IRA) to join the talks in an All-Ireland Forum 3 months after the cessation of terrorist violence.

The IRA announced 'a complete cessation of military operations' on 31 Aug. 1994. On 13 Oct. 1994 the anti-IRA Combined Loyalist Military Command also announced a ceasefire 'dependent upon the continued cessation of all nationalist republican violence'.

Elections were held on 30 May 1996 to constitute a 110-member forum to take part in talks with the British and Irish governments. Each of the 18 Northern Ireland constituencies returned 5 delegates. The 10 parties receiving the most votes received 2 extra delegates. The Ulster Unionist Party won 30 seats with 24.2% of votes cast; the Social Democratic and Labour Party, 21 with 21.4%; the Democratic Unionist Party, 24 with 18.8%; and Sinn Féin, 17 with 15.5%.

Opening Plenary talks, excluding Sinn Féin, began under the chairmanship of US Senator George Mitchell on 12 June 1996. A marathon negotiating struggle on 9–10 April 1998 led to agreement on a framework for sharing power designed to satisfy Protestant demands for a reaffirmation of their national identity as British. Catholic desires for a closer relationship with the predominantly Catholic Republic of Ireland and Britain's wish to return to Northern Ireland the powers London assumed in 1972 when the local Stormont legislature was disbanded.

Under the Good Friday Agreement, there is to be a democratically elected legislature in Belfast, a ministerial council giving the governments of Northern Ireland and Ireland joint responsibilities in areas like tourism, transportation and the environment, and a consultative council meeting twice a year to bring together ministers from the British and Irish parliaments, and the three assemblies being created in Northern Ireland and in Scotland and Wales. The Irish government has eliminated from its constitution its territorial claim on Northern Ireland.

The critical issues of police and judicial-system reform, the release of paramilitary prisoners, and the dismantling of the vast underground arsenals of weaponry in the province are the subject of further study and recommendations.

In the referendum on 22 May 1998, 71.12% of votes in Northern Ireland were cast in favour of the Good Friday peace agreement and 94.4% in the Republic of Ireland. As a consequence, in June, Northern Ireland's 1.2m. voters elected the first power-sharing administration since the collapse of the Sunningdale Agreement in 1974. But IRA blockage on the decommissioning of arms continues to hold up the transfer of powers from London to Belfast.

In Nov. 1999 the Mitchell talks finally produced an agreement between the Ulster Unionists and Sinn Féin which paved the way for the formation of a government with devolved powers. The new Northern Ireland Assembly met for the first time on 29 Nov. 1999, and on 2 Dec. legislative powers were fully devolved from London to Belfast, with the new executive of Unionists, nationalists and republicans meeting for the first time. In the Republic of Ireland on 2 Dec. 1999 the Irish constitution was amended to remove the articles which referred to claims to Northern Ireland. However, on 11 Feb. 2000 the Assembly was suspended following a breakdown in negotiations on the decommissioning of IRA weapons. Direct rule from London was restored while politicians searched for a way forward. Devolved government resumed on 30 May after the IRA agreed to open their arms dumps to independent inspection.

ECONOMY

Policy. The main Northern Ireland government department concerned with economic development is the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (DETI). The department and its agencies have responsibility for the promotion of inward investment and the development of larger home industry (Industrial Development Board, IDB); promotion of enterprise and small business (Local Enterprise Development Unit, LEDU); promotion of industrially relevant research and development and technology transfer (Industrial Research and Technology Unit, IRTU); promotion and development of tourism (Northern Ireland Tourist Board, NITB); energy matters; mineral development; company regulation; consumer protection; health and safety at work; better regulation; Strategy 2010.

IDB's overall objective is to encourage the development of internationally competitive companies in the manufacturing and tradeable service sectors in Northern Ireland, and to attract new inward investment, contributing to growth in durable employment. During 1999–2000 IDB secured 52 investment projects involving 7,145 new and 1,796 safeguarded jobs, which included 39 projects from companies already established in Northern Ireland involving 4,597 new jobs and 1,693 safeguarded jobs.

The LEDU is the small business agency (for companies employing fewer than 50 people). It aims to strengthen the economy by encouraging enterprise and new business start-ups, and by helping established small businesses achieve export-orientated, profitable growth. In 1999–2000 LEDU achieved a net increase of 3,100 additional new jobs amongst its clients and from business start-ups.

The IRTU, an Executive Agency within DETI, provides the focus for all aspects of industry-related technology and innovation policy, including grants for industrial research and development, information, advice, scientific testing and analysis services. In 1999–2000 IRTU disbursed £16.3m. of government funding to Research and Development projects. In addition, IRTU enabled companies to obtain support under EU programmes.

Roads. In Dec. 2000 the total length of public roads was 24,625 km, graded for administrative purposes as follows: motorway, 133 km; Class 'A' dual carriageway, 145 km; Class 'A' single carriageway, 2,124 km; Class 'B', 2,857 km; Class 'C', 4,677 km; unclassified, 14,689 km.

Ulsterbus and Citybus subsidiaries of N.I. Transport Holding Company (NITHC) provide co-ordinated services with N.I. Railways (NIR) Ltd under the service brand name of Translink.

At 31 March 2000 there were 1,963 professional hauliers and 5,322 vehicles licensed to engage in road haulage.

The number of motor vehicles licensed at 31 Dec. 1999 was 720,645, comprising private light goods, 608,316; motorcycles, scooters and mopeds, 13,088; buses, 2,204; goods vehicles, 17,075; agricultural vehicles, 5,505; exempt including crown vehicles, 73,229; and others, 1,228.

Rail. NIR, a subsidiary of NITHC, provides rail services within Northern Ireland and cross-border services to Dublin, jointly with Irish Rail. The number of track-km. operated is 340. In 1999–2000 railways carried 5.9m. passengers, generating passenger receipts of £13.4m.

Civil Aviation. There are scheduled air services to 3 airports in Northern Ireland. Belfast International Airport is the main one of these. Scheduled services are provided by British Airways and its franchise partners, British Regional Airlines, British Midland, Aer Lingus and Easyjet. Belfast International is also Northern Ireland's holiday airport with holiday flights operated direct to European and transatlantic destinations by a wide range of local and UK tour operators. In the year to Dec. 1999 the airport handled 3m. passengers and 26,010 tonnes of freight and mail.

Belfast City Airport offers commuter services to 13 regional airports in Great Britain as well as services to London Gatwick, Stansted and Luton, Isle of Man, Channel Islands and Cork. In 1999 Belfast City Airport handled 1.2m. passengers. The City of Derry Airport is situated 14 km from Londonderry and provides services from the northwest of Ireland to 3 United Kingdom destinations (Glasgow, London Stansted, Manchester). In 1999 the City of Derry Airport handled 103,504 passengers. There are two other licensed airfields at St Angelo and Newtownards, the latter of which is used principally by flying clubs, private owners and air taxi businesses. St Angelo has commercial flights operated by Brymon Airways to Jersey, and by Crossair to Zürich. It handled 4,544 passengers in 1999.

Shipping. Total traffic in Northern Ireland in 1999 was 22.8m. tonnes. Belfast handled 12.9m. tonnes of cargo in 1999.

There are passenger services from Belfast to Liverpool, Stranraer, Heysham and Troon and from Larne to Cairnryan. Drive-on/drive-off cargo services operate from Belfast and Larne to other UK ports. Belfast, Londonderry and Warrenpoint offer conventional cargo services. A new port at Londonderry opened in 1993.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Lord Chancellor has responsibility for the administration of all courts through the Northern Ireland Court Service and for the appointment of judges and magistrates. The court structure has 3 tiers: the Supreme Court of Judicature of Northern Ireland (comprising the Court of Appeal, the High Court and the Crown Court), the County Courts and the Magistrates' Courts. There are 20 Petty Sessions districts which when grouped together for administration purposes form 7 County Court Divisions and 4 Crown Court Circuits.

The County Court has general civil jurisdiction subject to an upper monetary limit. Appeals from the Magistrates' Courts lie to the County Court, or to the Court of Appeal on a point of law, while appeals from the County Court lie to the High Court or, on a point of law, to the Court of Appeal.

Police. The police force consists of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, which was presented with the George Cross in April 2000. A commission into the future of policing in Northern Ireland, under the chairmanship of Chris Patten, reported in Sept. 1999 and legislation was introduced into the House of Commons in April 2000. Among the most important proposals were changing of the name of the RUC (to the 'Police Service of Northern Ireland') and its badge, heavily increased recruitment of Catholics into the force (who currently constitute only around 8%), and the replacement of the Police Authority for Northern Ireland with a new Policing Board for Northern Ireland. Police strength amounted to 8,393 in March 1999 (987 women).

Religion. According to the census of 1991 there were: Roman Catholics, 605,639; Presbyterians, 336,891; Church of Ireland, 279,280; Methodists, 59,517. Those belonging to other denominations numbered 122,448; to none, 59,234. 114,827 persons did not answer the voluntary question on religion.

Education. Public education, other than university education, is presently administered by the Department of Education, the Department of Higher and Further Education, Training and Employment and locally by 5 Education and Library Boards. The Department of Education is concerned with the range of education from nursery education through to secondary, youth services and for the development of community relations within and between schools. The Department of Higher and Further Education, Training and Employment is responsible for higher education, further education, student support, postgraduate awards, and the funding of teacher training.

Each Education and Library Board is the local education authority for its area. Boards were first appointed in 1973, the year of local government reorganization, and are normally reappointed every 4 years following the District Council elections. The membership of each Board consists of District councillors, representatives of transferors of schools, representatives of trustees of maintained schools and other persons who are interested in the service for which the Board is responsible. Boards have a duty, amongst other things, to ensure that there are sufficient schools of all kinds to meet the needs of their areas. The Boards are responsible for costs associated with capital works at controlled schools. Voluntary schools, including maintained and voluntary grammar schools, can receive grant-aid from the Department of Education toward capital works of up to 85%, or 100% if they have opted to change their management structures so that no single interest group has a majority of nominees. Most voluntary grammar schools can receive the same rate of grant on the purchase of equipment. The Boards award university and other scholarships; they provide school milk and meals; free books and transport for pupils; they enforce school attendance; provide a curriculum advisory and support service to all schools in their area; regulate the employment of children and young people; and secure the provision of youth and recreational facilities. They are also required to develop a comprehensive and efficient library service for their area. Board expenditure is funded at 100% by the Department of Education. Integrated schools receive 100% funding for recurrent costs from the Department of Education, and, where long-term viability has been established, for capital works.

The Education Reform (NI) Order 1989 made provision for the setting up of a Council for Catholic Maintained Schools with effect from April 1990. The Council has responsibility for all maintained schools under Roman Catholic Management which are under the auspices of the diocesan authorities and of religious orders. The main objective of the Council is to promote high standards of education in the schools for which it is responsible. Its functions include providing advice on matters relating to its schools, the employment of teaching staff and administration of appointment procedures, the promotion of effective management, and the promotion and co-ordination of effective planning and rationalization of school provision in the Catholic Maintained sector. The membership of the Council consists of trustee representatives appointed by the Northern Roman Catholic Bishops, parents, teachers, and persons appointed by the Head of the Department of Education in consultation with the Bishops.

There is a Council for Curriculum, Assessment and Examinations which conducts public examinations and oversees the selection procedure and arrangements for pupil assessment. There is also the Northern Ireland Council for Integrated Education, both of which are grant-aided by the Department of Education.

Integrated Schools. In recent years a small number of integrated schools have been established at primary and post-primary levels with the aim of providing education for Roman Catholic and Protestant children together. These schools began as independent schools and qualified for public funding (on the same basis as other non-state schools) when their longer-term viability had been adequately demonstrated. The Education Reform (NI) Order 1989 introduced new measures whereby new integrated schools may receive public funding right from the start. Grant Maintained Integrated schools are eligible for grants on capital works, including purchase of sites and buildings and equipment, at the rate of 100%. At Oct. 1998 there were 40 integrated schools with total enrolments of some 11,381 pupils, about 3.3% of all pupils.

Irish Medium Education. In recent years there has been an increase in demand for pupils to be educated through the medium of Irish. The Education (Northern Ireland) Order 1998 which placed a statutory duty on the Department of Education to encourage and facilitate Irish-medium education, also brought funding arrangements into line with the integrated sector, i.e. recurrent funding from the start. At Oct. 1999 there were 8 grant-aided Irish-medium schools and 3 units catering for some 1,600 pupils.

Pre-school Education is provided in nursery schools or nursery classes in primary schools, reception classes and in funded places in voluntary and private settings. There were 95 nursery schools in 1999–2000 with 5,952 pupils, and 91 nursery units attached to primary schools with 4,047 nursery pupils. A further 2,330 reception pupils were enrolled in primary schools. In addition there were 3,407 children in funded places in voluntary and private pre-school centres.

Primary Education is from 4 to 11 years. In 1999–2000 there were 917 primary schools with 172,591 pupils. There were also 24 preparatory departments of grammar schools with 3,011 pupils. In 1999–2000 there were 8,816 primary school teachers and 172 FTE preparatory school teachers.

Secondary Education is from 11 to 18 years. In 1999–2000 there were 72 grammar schools with 62,361 pupils and 166 secondary schools with 92,603 pupils. In 1999–2000 there were 6,531 FTE secondary school teachers and 4,013 grammar school teachers.

Further Education. There are 17 institutions of further education. In 1999–2000 there were 2,031 full-time and 2,764 part-time teachers, approximately 24,000 full-time enrolments, approximately 33,000 part-time enrolments and approximately 32,000 evening students on vocational courses. There were about 60,000 students on non-vocational (mostly evening) courses.

Special Education. The Education and Library Boards provide for children with special educational needs up to the age of 19. This provision may be made in ordinary classes in primary or secondary schools or in special units attached to those schools, or in special schools. In 1999–2000 there were 53 special schools with 4,861 pupils. This includes 3 hospital schools.

Universities. There are 2 universities: the Queen's University of Belfast (founded in 1849 as a college of the Queen's University of Ireland and reconstituted as a separate university in 1908) had 21,021 students, 1,361 full-time and 96 part-time academic staff in 1998–99. The University of Ulster, formed on 1 Oct. 1984, has campuses in Belfast, Coleraine, Jordanstown and Londonderry. In the 1998–99 academic year it had 19,479 students, 1,190 full-time and 67 part-time academic staff.

Full-Time Initial Teacher Education takes place at both universities and at 2 university colleges of education—Stranmillis, and St. Mary's—the latter mainly for the primary school sector, in respect of which 4-year (Hons) BEd courses are available. The training of teachers for secondary schools is provided, in the main, in the education departments of the 2 universities, but 4-year (Hons) BEd courses are also available in the colleges for intending secondary teachers of religious education, business studies and craft, design and technology. There were a total of 1,632 students (1,325 women) in training at the 2 university colleges and the 2 universities during 1999–2000.

Health. The Department of Health and Social Services is responsible for the provision of integrated health and personal social services. 4 Health and Social Services Boards are responsible for assessing the requirements of their resident populations and for purchasing appropriate services. Since 1 April 1996 services have been delivered exclusively by HSS Trusts (similar to NHS Trusts in the rest of the UK) established under the Health and Personal Social Services (NI) Order 1991.

A total of 19 HSS Trusts are fully operational. 7 HSS Trusts based on acute hospitals and the regional Northern Ireland Ambulance Service are identical in structure and management to NHS Trusts in Great Britain. Of the remaining 11, 5 provide community-based health and personal social services and the other 6 provide both hospital and community-based health and personal social services, reflecting the integrated nature of these services in Northern Ireland. In 1999 there were 1,054 doctors (principals), with an average of 1,679 patients each.

Welfare. The Social Security Agency's remit is now part of the Department for Social Development, and social security schemes are similar to those in Great Britain.

National Insurance. During the year ended 31 March 1999 the expenditure of the National Insurance Fund at £1,251.1m. exceeded contributions by £163.7m. The shortfall in income was made up by a Treasury Grant, investment income and a transfer from the Great Britain Fund. Total benefit expenditure was £1,177.9m., excluding £4.1m. which was subsequently recovered from damages paid to recipients of National Insurance Fund Benefits. Employers received £1m. reimbursement in respect of Statutory Sick Pay paid to their employees. £14.6m. was paid in Jobseekers' Allowance contributions. Widows Benefit amounted to £33.2m. and Retirement Pensions to £802.2m. Incapacity Benefits totalled £323.7m. Maternity Allowance of £1.1m. was paid and employers were reimbursed £17.6m. in respect of Statutory Maternity Pay. £39.3m. was given to personal pension plan providers.

Child Benefit: During the year ended 31 March 1999, £261.4m. was paid. Income Support: In 1998–99, £513.6m. was paid. Family Credit: In 1998–99, £98.0m. was paid.

CULTURE

Tourism. An estimated 1,641,000 visitors came to Northern Ireland in 1999, contributing £255m. to the economy. The Northern Ireland Tourist Board is responsible for encouraging tourism. 9 Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty and 45 Statutory Nature Reserves have been declared, and there are many country and regional parks.

ISLE OF MAN

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Isle of Man was first inhabited approximately 10,000 years ago and the Island became attached to Norway in the 9th century. In 1266 it was ceded to Scotland, but it came under English control in 1333.

The Isle of Man has been a British Crown dependency since 1765, with the British government responsible for its defence and foreign policy. Otherwise it has extensive right of self-government.

A special relationship exists between the Isle of Man and the European Union providing for free trade, and adoption by the Isle of Man of the EU's external trade policies with third countries. The Island remains free to levy its own system of taxes.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Area, 221 sq. miles (572 sq. km); resident population census April 1996, 71,714, giving a density of 125 per sq. km. In 1996 an estimated 73% of the population lived in urban areas. The principal towns are Douglas (population, 23,487), Onchan (adjoining Douglas; 8,656), Ramsey (6,874), Peel (3,819), Castletown (2,958). The Island is divided into 6 sheadings—Ayre, Garff, Glenfaba, Michael, Middle and Rushen. Garff is further subdivided into 2 parishes and the others each have 3 parishes.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1999: births, 894; deaths, 983; marriages, 403. Annual growth rate, 1991-96, 1.6%.

CLIMATE

Lying in the Irish Sea, the Island's climate is temperate and lacking in extremes. Thunderstorms, snow and frost are infrequent, although the Island tends to be windy. July and Aug. are the warmest months with an average daily maximum temperature of around 17.6°C (63°F).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

As a result of Revestment in 1765, the Isle of Man became a dependency of the British Crown. The UK government is responsible for the external relations of the Island, including its defence and international affairs, and the Island makes a financial contribution to the cost of these services. The Isle of Man has a special relationship with the European Union. It neither contributes funds to, nor receives money from, the EU. The Isle of Man is not represented in either the UK or European Parliaments.

The Island is administered in accordance with its own laws by the High Court of Tynwald, consisting of the President of Tynwald, the Legislative Council and the House of Keys. The Legislative Council is composed of the Lord Bishop of Sodor and Man, 8 members selected by the House of Keys and the Attorney General, who has no vote. The House of Keys is an assembly of 24 members chosen by adult suffrage. The President of Tynwald is chosen by the Legislative Council and the House of Keys, sitting together as Tynwald. An open-air Tynwald ceremony is held in early July each year at St Johns. Until 1990 the Lieut.-Governor, appointed by the UK government, presided over Tynwald.

A Council of Ministers was instituted in 1990, replacing the Executive Council which had acted as an advisory body to the Lieut.-Governor. The Council of Ministers consists of the Chief Minister (elected for a 5-year term) and the ministers of the 9 major departments, being the Treasury; Agriculture, Fisheries and Forestry; Education; Health and Social Security; Home Affairs; Local Government and the Environment; Tourism and Leisure; Trade and Industry; and Transport.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The last election for the House of Keys was held on 21 Nov. 1996. 52 candidates stood, mostly independents. Turn-out was 62%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Ian Macfadyen.

President: Noel Cringle (elected April 2000).

In Dec. 2000 the Chief Minister was Donald Gelling. Finance Minister: Richard Corkill.

ECONOMY

Policy. The Isle of Man's economic policy is the pursuit of manageable and sustainable growth based on a diversified economy with the aims of raising the standard of living of the whole population, securing future prosperity and providing the resources needed to sustain public services.

Performance. In 1998–99 GNP was £907m. and GDP was £836m. Real GDP growth in 1998–99 was 13.5%. Just over 80% of national income is generated from services with the finance sector being the single largest contributor (42%). Around 63% of national income is personal incomes and the remainder is company income.

Budget. The Isle of Man is statutorily required to budget for a surplus of estimated revenue over expenditure. Revenue is raised from income tax, taxes on expenditure, health and social security contributions, and fees and charges for services.

The standard rate of tax is 14% for personal income, and there is a higher rate of 20%. Companies are liable at 14% on their first £125,000 of taxable income and 20% on the balance.

There is a Customs and Excise Agreement with the UK, and rates of tax on expenditure are the same as those in the UK with very few exceptions. In addition, there is a reciprocal agreement on social security with the UK, and the rates of health and social security (National Insurance) contributions are the same as in the UK.

In 2000–01 the Isle of Man government budgeted for expenditure of £538m. and revenue of £553m.

Currency. The Isle of Man government issues its own notes and coins on a par with £ sterling. Various commemorative coins have been minted. Inflation was around 3% at the end of 2000.

Banking and Finance. The banking sector is regulated by the Financial Supervision Commission which is responsible for the licensing and supervision of banks, deposit-takers and financial intermediaries giving financial advice, and receiving client monies for investment and management. A compensation fund to protect investors was set up in 1991 under the Commission.

In June 2000 the deposit base was £23bn., and there were 60 licensed banks, 80 investment businesses and 3 building societies with Isle of Man licences.

The insurance industry is regulated by the Insurance and Pensions Authority. In Sept. 2000 there were 188 insurance companies.

Weights and Measures. Both metric and avoirdupois are used.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. The Manx Electricity Authority generates most of the Island's electricity by oil-fired power stations although there is a small hydro-electric plant. A cable link with the UK power grid is nearing completion. Total electricity production in 1999 was 325m. kWh.

Oil and Gas. At present, all oil and gas needs are met from imports, although a gas pipe link with either the Republic of Ireland or the UK is under consideration. The Island's gas suppliers and distributors are in the private sector.

Water. The Isle of Man Water Authority is the statutory body for supply of water in the Island.

Minerals. Although lead and tin mining industries were major employers in the past, they have long since shut down and the only mining activity in the Island is now for aggregates. The Lady Isabella, built in 1854 to drain the mines above Laxey, is one of the largest waterwheels in Europe.

Agriculture. The area farmed is about 113,000 acres, being 80% of a total land area of around 141,500 acres. 66,000 acres are grassland with a further 35,000 acres for rough grazing. There are approximately 178,000 sheep, 35,000 cattle, 15,000 poultry and 6,000 pigs on the Island's 766 farms. Agriculture now contributes less than 2% of the Island's GDP.

Forestry. The Department of Agriculture, Fisheries and Forestry has a forestry estate of some 6,800 acres. Commercial forestry is directed towards softwood production. The Manx National Glens and other amenity areas are maintained for public use by the Department, which owns some 18,000 acres of the Island's hills and uplands open for public use.

Fisheries. The Isle of Man is noted for the Manx kipper, a gutted smoked herring. Scallops and the related queen scallops (queennies) are the economic mainstay of the Manx fishing fleet. Total catch, 1998, 1,912 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

Labour. The economically active population in 1996 was 34,811, of whom 5,695 were self-employed and 1,234 were unemployed. Employment by sector: professional services, 18%; finance, 18%; construction, 10%; manufacturing, 11%; distributive services, 11%.

At the end of 2000 there were less than 200 persons on the unemployment register, giving an unemployment rate of 0.5%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

The Isle of Man forms part of the customs union of the European Union, although the Island is not part of the EU itself. The relationship with the EU provides for free trade and the adoption of the EU's external trade policies and tariffs with non-EU countries.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There are 800 km of good roads. At the end of March 2000 there were 55,026 licensed vehicles, with 43,912 of these being private cars. Omnibus services operate to all parts of the Island. The TT (Tourist Trophy) motorcycle races take place annually on the 60.75-km Mountain Circuit.

Rail. Several novel transport systems operate on the Island during the summer season from May to Sept. Horse-drawn trams run along Douglas promenade, and the Manx Electric Railway links Douglas, Laxey, Ramsey and Snaefell Mountain (63 metres) in the north. The Isle of Man Steam Railway also operates between Douglas and Port Erin in the south.

Civil Aviation. Ronaldsway Airport in the south handles scheduled services linking the Island with London, Manchester, Dublin, Belfast, Glasgow, Liverpool, Blackpool, Birmingham, Leeds, Luton, Newcastle, Cardiff and Jersey. Air taxi services also operate.

Shipping. Car ferries run between Douglas and the UK and the Irish Republic. In 2000, 240 merchant vessels were on the Island's shipping register.

The population in penal institutions in Oct. 1998 was 82 (equivalent to 115 per 100,000 of national population).

Religion. The Island has a rich heritage of Christian associations, and the Diocese of Sodor and Man, one of the oldest in the British Isles, has existed since 476.

Education. Education is compulsory between the ages of 5 and 16. In 1999 there were 6,558 pupils in the 33 primary schools and 5,005 pupils in the 5 secondary schools operated by the Department of Education. The Department also runs a college of further education and a special school. Government expenditure on education totalled £57m. in 2000–01. The Island has a private primary school and a private secondary school.

Health. The Island has had its own National Health Service since 1948, providing medical, dental and ophthalmic services. In 2000–01 government expenditure on the NHS was £85.1m. There are 2 hospitals and a further hospital was under construction in 2000.

Festivals. There is a Manx language festival—Feailley Ghaelgagh; and a Manx cultural festival—Yn Chruinnaght.

Theatre and Opera. The main theatre is the government-owned Gaiety in Douglas, staging a wide variety of drama, musicals and opera throughout the year. Designed by Frank Matcham and opened in 1900, the theatre has undergone extensive restoration to its Victorian decor. A larger concert hall, the Villa Marina, is owned by central government.

Museums and Galleries. The Manx Museum is the Island's major museum and houses the National Art Gallery. Castle Rushen in Castletown is one of Britain's best-preserved medieval castles and Peel Castle on St. Patrick's Isle dates back to the 11th century. CHANNEL ISLANDS

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Channel Islands consist of Jersey, Guernsey and the following dependencies of Guernsey: Alderney, Brechou, Great Sark, Little Sark, Herm, Jethou and Lihou. They were an integral part of the Duchy of Normandy at the time of the Norman Conquest of England in 1066. Since then they have belonged to the British Crown and are not part of the UK. The islands have created their own form of self-government, with the British government at Westminster being responsible for defence and foreign policy. The Lieut.-Governors of Jersey and Guernsey, appointed by the Crown, are the personal representatives of the Sovereign as well as being the commanders of the armed forces. The legislature of Jersey is 'The States of Jersey', and that of Guernsey is 'The States of Deliberation'.

From 1940 to 1945 the islands were left undefended and were the only British territory to fall to the Germans.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Channel Islands cover a total of 75 sq. miles (194 sq. km), and in 1996 had a population of approximately 147,000.

The official languages are French and English, but English is now the main language.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Lieut.-Governors and Cs.-in-C. of Jersey and Guernsey are the personal representatives of the Sovereign, the Commanders of the Armed Forces of the Crown, and the channel of communication between the Crown and the insular governments. They are appointed by the Crown and have a voice but no vote in the islands' legislatures. The Secretaries to the Lieut.-Governors are their staff officers.

Emeraude Ferries connect Jersey and Guernsey with St Malo; local companies run between Guernsey, Alderney and England, and between Guernsey and Sark. In 1998 the merchant marine totalled 2,000 GRT.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered by the Royal Courts of Jersey and Guernsey, each of which consists of the Bailiff and 12 Jurats, the latter being elected by an electoral college. There is an appeal from the Royal Courts to the Courts of Appeal of Jersey and of Guernsey. A final appeal lies to the Privy Council in certain cases. A stipendiary magistrate in each, Jersey and Guernsey, deals with minor civil and criminal cases.

UNITED KINGDOM OVERSEAS TERRITORIES

After the retrocession of Hong Kong to China on 1 July 1997, 13 territories remained under British sovereignty as a legacy of the former Empire. 3 of these (British Antarctic Territory, British Indian Ocean Territory and South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands) have no resident populations and are administered by a commissioner instead of a governor.

Gibraltar is an enclave in Spain; the remainder are islands in the Caribbean and South Atlantic. Gibraltar and the Falkland Islands are the subjects of territorial claims by Spain and Argentina respectively.

Governors of Overseas Territories are appointed by the Queen, and are responsible for external affairs, internal security and the public service. Territories have their own elected legislatures and ministers, but final responsibility for government belongs to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London. For the Caribbean Territories some aspects of administration are carried out by the United Kingdom Overseas Territories Regional Secretariat in Barbados. In March 1999 it was announced that Britain proposed to restore full citizenship to all of the inhabitants of its dependencies, or United Kingdom Overseas Territories as they were to be known henceforth. The relevant legislation has not yet gone before parliament.

ANGUILLA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Anguilla was probably given its name by the Spaniards or the French because of its eel-like shape. It was inhabited by Arawaks for several centuries before the arrival of Europeans. Anguilla was colonized in 1650 by English settlers from neighbouring St Kitts. In 1688 the island was attacked by a party of Irishmen who then settled. Anguilla was subsequently administered as part of the Leeward Islands, and from 1825 became even more closely associated with St Kitts. In 1875 a petition sent to London requesting separate status and direct rule from Britain met with a negative response. Again in 1958 the islanders formally petitioned the Governor requesting a dissolution of the political and administrative association with St Kitts, but this too failed. From 1958 to 1962 Anguilla was part of the Federation of the West Indies.

Opposition to rule from St Kitts erupted on 30 May 1967 when St Kitts policemen were evicted from the island and Anguilla refused to recognize the authority of the State government any longer. During 1968–69 the British government maintained a 'Senior British Official' to advise the local Anguilla Council and devise some solution to the problem. In March 1969, following the ejection from the island of a high-ranking British civil servant, British security forces occupied Anguilla. A Commissioner was installed, and in 1969 Anguilla became de facto a separate dependency of Britain, a situation rendered de jure on 19 Dec. 1980 under the Anguilla Act 1980 when Anguilla formally separated from the state of St Kitts, Anguilla-Nevis. A new constitution came into effect in 1982 providing for a large measure of internal autonomy under the Crown.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Anguilla is the most northerly of the Leeward Islands, some 70 miles (112 km) to the northwest of St Kitts and 5 miles (8 km) to the north of St Martin/Sint Maarten. The territory also comprises the island of Sombbrero and several other off-shore islets or cays. The total area of the territory is about 60 sq. miles (155 sq. km). Census population (1992) was 8,960. Population estimate, 1997, 10,663. The estimated population for 2000 was 12,000. The capital is The Valley. In 1995 an estimated 89% of the population lived in rural areas.

BRITISH ANTARCTIC TERRITORY

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The British Antarctic Territory was established on 3 March 1962, as a consequence of the entry into force of the Antarctic Treaty, to separate those areas of the then Falkland Islands Dependencies which lay within the Treaty area from those which did not (i.e. South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands).

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The territory encompasses the lands and islands within the area south of 60°S latitude lying between 20°W and 80°W longitude (approximately due south of the Falkland Islands and the Dependencies). It covers an area of some 1,700,000 sq. km, and its principal components are the South Orkney and South Shetland Islands, the Antarctic Peninsula (Palmer Land and Graham Land), the Filchner and Ronne Ice Shelves and Coats Land.

There is no indigenous or permanently resident population. There is however an itinerant population of scientists and logistics staff of about 300, manning a number of research stations.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Commissioner: John White (non-resident).

BRITISH INDIAN OCEAN TERRITORY

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

This territory was established to meet UK and US defence requirements by an Order in Council on 8 Nov. 1965, consisting then of the Chagos Archipelago (formerly administered from Mauritius) and the islands of Aldabra, Desroches and Farquhar (all formerly administered from Seychelles). The latter islands became part of Seychelles when that country achieved independence on 29 June 1976. In Nov. 2000 the High Court ruled that the 2,000 Ilois people deported between 1967 and 1973 had been removed unlawfully. Foreign Secretary Robin Cook cleared the way for resettlement.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The group, with a total land area of 23 sq. miles (60 sq. km), comprises 5 coral atolls (Diego Garcia, Peros Banhos, Salomon, Eagle and Egmont), of which the largest and southernmost, Diego Garcia, covers 17 sq. miles (44 sq. km) and lies 450 miles (724 km) south of the Maldives. A US Navy support facility has been established on Diego Garcia. There is no permanent population.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Commissioner: Alan Huckle (non-resident).

Administrator: Louise Savill (non-resident).

Commissioner's Representative: Cdr Peter Lewis, MBE.

FALKLAND ISLANDS

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

France established a settlement in 1764 and Britain a second settlement in 1765. In 1770 Spain bought out the French and drove off the British. This action on the part of Spain brought that country and Britain to the verge of war. The Spanish restored the settlement to the British in 1771, but the settlement was withdrawn on economic grounds in 1774. In 1806 Spanish rule was overthrown in Argentina, and the Argentine claimed to succeed Spain in the French and British settlements in 1820. The British objected and reclaimed their settlement in 1832 as a Crown Colony.

On 2 April 1982 Argentine forces occupied the Falkland Islands. On 3 April the UN Security Council called, by 10 votes to 1, for Argentina's withdrawal. After a military campaign, but without a formal declaration of war, the UK regained possession on 14–15 June after Argentina surrendered.

In April 1990 Argentina's Congress declared the Falkland and other British-held South Atlantic islands part of the new Argentine province of Tierra del Fuego.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Territory comprises numerous islands situated in the South Atlantic Ocean about 480 miles northeast of Cape Horn covering 12,200 sq. km. The main East Falkland Island, 6,760 sq. km; the West Falkland, 5,410 sq. km, including the adjacent small islands. The population at the census of 1996 was 2,564. The only town is Stanley, in East Falkland, with a 1996 population of 1,636. The population is nearly all of British descent, with 1,267 born in the Islands (1996 census figures) and 885 in the UK. In 1995, 84.1% lived in urban areas. A British garrison of about 2,000 servicemen, stationed in East Falkland in 1991, is not included in the 1996 census figures, but the 483 civilians employed there are.

The official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

In 1995 there were 20 births and 19 deaths on the islands.

CLIMATE

A cool temperate climate, much affected by strong winds, particularly in spring. Stanley, Jan. 49°F (9.4°C), July 35°F (1.7°C). Annual rainfall 24" (625 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new Constitution came into force in 1997, updating the previous constitution of 1985 which incorporated a chapter protecting fundamental human rights, and in the preamble recalled the provisions on the right of self-determination contained in international covenants.

Executive power is vested in the Governor who must consult the Executive Council except on urgent or trivial matters. He must consult the Commander British Forces on matters relating to defence and internal security (except police).

There is a Legislative Council consisting of 8 members (5 from Stanley and 3 from Camp, elected every 4 years) and 2 ex officio members, the Chief Executive and Financial Secretary. Only elected members have a vote. The Commander British Forces has a right to attend and take part in its proceedings but has no vote. The Attorney General also has a similar right to take part in proceedings with the consent of the person presiding. The Governor presides over sittings. He also presides over the monthly sittings of the Executive Council which consists of 3 elected members (elected by and from the elected members of Legislative Council) and the Chief Executive and Financial Secretary (ex officio). The Commander British Forces and Attorney General have a right to attend but may not vote.

British citizenship was withdrawn by the British Nationality Act 1981, but restored after the Argentine invasion of 1982.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the Legislative Assembly were held on 9 Oct. 1997. Only non-partisans were elected.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Donald Lamont.

Chief Executive: Dr Michael Blanch.

DEFENCE

Since 1982 the Islands have been defended by a 2,000-strong garrison of British servicemen. In addition there is a local volunteer defence force.

ECONOMY

The GNP of the Islands is estimated to have tripled from 1985–87 as a result of the fishing industry. In 1998–99 the GNP was estimated at £53m.

Policy. Policy initiatives by the government include: education and vocational training investment; promotion of tourism, wildlife and fishing; development of trading links with Chile and Uruguay; encouragement of enterprise e.g. fleet servicing; woolen mill; rationalization of government services; development of physical infrastructure, especially roads; external telecommunications links.

Policy-making is also influenced by the Falkland Islands Development Corporation (FIDC) established in 1984. Its remit is 'to encourage and assist in the economic development of the Falkland Islands; to advise the Falkland Islands Government on such matters relating to economic development as it may refer to the Corporation or as the Corporation may consider fit; and to examine and advise on proposals referred to the Corporation by Executive Council relating to the imposition or revision of tariffs, taxes, duties, quotas or other protective or developmental measures.' In its activities it aims to reflect the realities of the economy, such as its reliance on fishing and to a lesser extent agriculture and tourism, the limited working population, restricted private capital for investment and limited infrastructure. Activities in 1998–99 included assisting a chemical free wool project and initiating surveys into deposits of calcified seaweed.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure (in £ sterling) for fiscal year ending 30 June 1999 was: revenue, 39.52m.; expenditure, 46.9m.

Electricity. Electricity production in 1998 totalled 12m. kWh.

Oil and Gas. In 1996 the Falkland Islands government awarded production licences to Shell, Amerada Hess, Desire Petroleum and International Petroleum Corporation (Sodra), allowing them to begin oil exploration. The licensed areas are situated 150 km north of the Islands over the North Falkland Basin. Six exploration wells were drilled in 1998 and analysis of the findings suggested that in excess of 60bn. bbls. of oil have been generated in the basin.

Agriculture. The economy was formerly based solely on agriculture, principally sheep farming. Following a programme of sub-division, much of the land is divided into family-size units. There were 100 farms in 1997, averaging 33,600 acres and 8,200 sheep. During 1991 the Falklands Islands Co. sold its agricultural holdings to the Falkland Island government. Less than 5% of the total land area is owned outside the islands. Wool is the principal product; 1,870,000 tonnes worth £2,292,000 was exported to the UK in 1998.

Livestock: in April 2000 there were over 700,000 sheep. 1996: cattle, 4,000; horses, 1,000.

Fisheries. Since the establishment of a 150-mile interim conservation and management zone around the Islands in 1986 and the consequent introduction, on 1 Feb. 1987, of a licensing regime for vessels fishing within the zone, income from the associated fishing activities is now the largest source of revenue. Licences raised £25m. in 1992 but this figure had fallen to £20m. by 1998–99. In 1999 the fish catch (1,000 tonnes) was: illex, 266; loligo, 35; hake, 4; hoki, 19; blue whiting, 29; others, 23. The growth in the annual fish catch since the mid 1980s has been one of the fastest in the world.

On 26 Dec. 1990 the Falklands outer conservation zone was introduced which extends beyond the 150-mile zone out to 200 miles from baselines. In Nov. 1992 commercial fishing in the outer zone was banned, the zone was reopened to fishing in 1994. A UK-Argentine South Atlantic Fisheries Commission was set up in 1990; it meets at least twice a year. In 1999 there were 19 registered fishing vessels (16 trawlers and 3 longliners).

INDUSTRY

Labour. In 1996 the working population totalled 1,719. The growth of the fishing industry has ensured practically zero unemployment.

EXTERNAL ECONOMIC RELATIONS

Around 85% of trade is with the UK, the rest with Latin America, mainly Chile. In 1998 imports totalled £23.5m.; exports (mainly wool), £3.5m. (1995).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There are over 50 km of surfaced roads and another 400 km of unsurfaced road. This includes the 80 km between Stanley and Mount Pleasant Airport. Other settlements outside Stanley are linked by tracks. There were about 1,100 private cars in 1996.

Civil Aviation. Air communication is currently via Ascension Island. An airport, completed in 1986, is sited at Mount Pleasant on East Falkland. RAF Tristar aircraft operate a twice-weekly service between the Falklands and the UK. Internal air links are provided by the government-operated air service, which carries passengers, mail, freight and medical patients between the settlements and Stanley on non-scheduled flights in Islander aircraft. A Chilean airline, LanChile, runs a weekly service to Punta Arenas. Aircraft movements at Stanley Airport in 1998 amounted to 4,264 with 7,715 passengers moving through the airport.

Shipping. A charter vessel calls 4 or 5 times a year to/from the UK. Vessels of the Royal Fleet Auxiliary run regularly to South Georgia. Sea links with Chile and Uruguay began in 1989. In 1995 merchant shipping totalled 20,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. Number of telephone main lines (March 1998) 1,856—one of the highest penetration rates in the world. International direct dialling is available, as are international telex and facsimile links. In 1996, 257 households had a PC and 213 had a fax machine.

Postal Services. The Post Office and the Philatelic Bureau work in tandem. In 1998 there were 2 post offices and 740 post boxes. Airmail is generally received and dispatched twice weekly and surface post is airlifted out about once every 2 weeks. Surface mail is received approximately once every 3 weeks.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Judges may only be removed for inability or misbehaviour on the advice of the judicial committee of the Privy Council. The senior resident judicial officer is the Senior Magistrate. There is an Attorney General and a Senior Crown Counsel.

Education. Education is compulsory between the ages of 5 and 16 years. In Stanley in April 2000 there were 24 pre-school pupils, 175 primary pupils (18 teachers) and 160 pupils in the 11–16 age range (18 teachers). In rural areas students attend small settlement schools or are visited by 1 of 7 travelling teachers. Lessons may also be carried out over the radio or telephone. All teachers are trained in the United Kingdom. Students achieving the required number of GCSE passes at Grades A–C are funded for A Level/GNVQ courses on the British mainland. Estimated recurrent expenditure on education and training from own funds in 1994–95, £2,041,440.

Health. The Government Medical Department is responsible for all medical services to civilians. Primary and secondary health care facilities are based at the King Edward VII Memorial Hospital, the only hospital on the islands. It has 28 beds. It is staffed by 5 doctors, 6 sisters (including 4 midwives), 8 staff nurses, a health visitor, counsellor, physiotherapist, social worker and an auxiliary nursing staff. The Royal Army Medical Corps staff the surgical facilities. Regular visits are received from specialists based in the UK. Most services are free to residents and British citizens, though some charges are made. There are 2 dentists on the island. Estimated expenditure (1994–95), £2,092,490.

Welfare. In 1998 total amount spent on old age pension payments was £504,075. Total amount spent on family allowance payments was £336,365.

Broadcasting. The Falkland Islands Broadcasting Station (FIBS), in conjunction with British Forces Broadcasting Service (BFBS), broadcasts 24 hours a day on FM and MW. Some BBC World Service programmes are also available.

BFBS also provides a single channel TV service (UKPAL) to Stanley, Mount Pleasant and most outlying camp settlements and a cable TV service is also in operation. In 1997 there were 1,000 TV and 1,000 radio sets.

Tourism. In the 1999–2000 season there were estimated to be 30,000 cruise ship visitors, representing a 400% increase over 3 seasons. There are tourist lodges at Port Howard, San Carlos, Sea Lion Island and Pebble Island. Stanley has two hotels.

GIBRALTAR

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Rock of Gibraltar was settled by Moors in 711. In 1462 it was taken by the Spaniards, from Granada. It was captured by Admiral Sir George Rooke on 24 July 1704, and ceded to Great Britain by the Treaty of Utrecht, 1713. The cession was confirmed by the treaties of Paris (1763) and Versailles (1783).

On 10 Sept. 1967 a UN resolution on the decolonization of Gibraltar led to a referendum to ascertain whether the people of Gibraltar wished to retain their link with the UK. Out of an electorate of 12,762, an overwhelming majority voted to retain the British connection.

The border was closed by Spain in 1969, opened to pedestrians in 1982 and fully opened in 1985. In 1973 Gibraltar joined the European Community as a dependent territory of the United Kingdom.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Gibraltar is situated in latitude 36°07' N and longitude 05°21' W. Area, 2½ sq. miles (6.5 sq. km) including port and harbour. Highest point is 426 metres. Total population, (1999), 27,204 (of whom 21,010 were British Gibraltarian, 3,792 Other British and 2,402 Non-British); density, 4,167 per sq. km. The estimated population for 2000 was 29,000. The population is mostly of Genoese, Portuguese and Maltese and Spanish descent.

The official language is English. Spanish, Italian and Portuguese are also spoken.

CLIMATE

The climate is warm temperate, with westerly winds in winter bringing rain. Summers are pleasantly warm and rainfall is low. Mean maximum temperatures: Jan. 16°C, July 28°C. Annual rainfall 722 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new Constitution was introduced in 1969. The Legislative and City Councils were merged to produce an enlarged legislature known as the Gibraltar House of Assembly. Executive authority is exercised by the Governor, who is also Commander-in-Chief. The Governor retains direct responsibility for matters relating to defence, external affairs and internal security. He has the power to intervene in the conduct of domestic affairs in support of this responsibility and has certain powers of intervention in the interests of maintaining financial and economic stability. However, he is normally required to act in accordance with the advice of the Gibraltar Council, which consists of 4 ex officio members (the Deputy Governor, the Deputy Fortress Commander, the Attorney-General and the Financial and Development Secretary) together with 5 elected members of the House of Assembly appointed by the Governor after consultation with the Chief Minister. Matters of primarily domestic concern are devolved to elected Ministers. There is a Council of Ministers presided over by the Chief Minister.

The House of Assembly consists of a Speaker appointed by the Governor, 15 elected and 2 ex officio members (the Attorney-General and the Financial and Development Secretary). No more than 8 of the elected seats may go to the winning party at elections.

Gibraltarians have full UK citizenship.

A Mayor of Gibraltar is elected by the elected members of the Assembly.

ECONOMY

Policy. The economy is primarily dependent upon service industries and port facilities, with income derived from tourism, transshipment and, perhaps most importantly in terms of growth, the provision of financial services.

Performance. In 1995–96 Gibraltar's provisional GDP was £327.7m., equivalent to £11,680 per head.

Minerals. Mineral fuels comprised around 25% of the value of total imports in 1996.

Agriculture. Gibraltar lacks agricultural land and natural resources; the territory is dependent on imports of foodstuffs and fuels.

INDUSTRY

The industrial sector (including manufacturing, construction and power) employed around 17% of the working population in 1999.

Britain provided 57% of imports in 1997 and is the largest source. Other major trade partners include the rest of the Commonwealth, the Netherlands, Spain and Japan. Foodstuffs accounted for 12% of total imports in 1997 (excluding petroleum products). Value of non-fuel imports, 1995, £276.2m. Mineral fuels comprised about 32% of the value of total imports in 1998. Exports are mainly re-exports of petroleum and petroleum products supplied to shipping, and include manufactured goods, wines, spirits, malt and tobacco. Gibraltar depends largely on tourism, offshore banking and other financial sector activity, the entrepôt trade and the provision of supplies to visiting ships. Exports of local produce are negligible. In 1997 Gibraltar recorded a visible trade deficit of £173m.

MONTSERRAT

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Montserrat was discovered by Columbus in 1493 and colonized by Britain in 1632, who brought Irish settlers to the island. Montserrat formed part of the federal colony of the Leeward Islands from 1871 until 1958, when it became a separate colony following the dissolution of the Federation.

On 18 July 1995 the Soufriere Hills volcano erupted for the first time in recorded history, which led to over half the inhabitants being evacuated to the north of the island, and the relocation of the chief town, Plymouth. Another major eruption on 25 June 1997 caused a number of deaths and led to further evacuation.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Montserrat is situated in the Caribbean Sea, 43 km southwest of Antigua. The area is 39.5 sq. miles (102 sq. km). Population, 1991, 11,957; estimate, Aug. 1998, 4,008. What was previously the capital, Plymouth, is now deserted as a result of the continuing activity of the Soufriere Hills volcano. The safe area is in the north of the island.

The official language is English.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate with an average annual rainfall of 60" (1,500 mm) the wettest months being Sept.–Dec., with a hurricane season June–Nov. Plymouth, Jan. 76°F (24.4°C), July 81°F (27.2°C).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Montserrat is a British Overseas Territory. The Constitution dates from the 1989 Montserrat Constitutional Order. The head of state is Queen Elizabeth II, represented by a Governor who heads an Executive Council, comprising also the Chief Minister, the Financial Secretary, the Attorney-General and 3 other ministers. The Legislative Council consists of 7 elected members, 2 civil service officials (the Attorney-General and Financial Secretary) and 2 nominated members; it sits for 5-year terms.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In elections to the Legislative Council on 2 April 2001 the New People's Liberation Movement won 7 of the 9 seats against 2 for the National Progressive Party.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

These figures changed as a result of the volcanic eruptions of 1995 and 1997 but since then the government, through the Ministry of Communications and Works, has been focusing its road developments in the north of the island, and in 1998 and 1999 a number of road work projects were under way.

ST HELENA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The island was uninhabited when discovered by the Portuguese in 1502. It was administered by the East India Company from 1659 and became a British colony in 1834. Napoleon died there in exile in 1821.

Public demonstrations took place in April 1997 against government spending cuts and the Governor's imposition of his own head of social services.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

St Helena, of volcanic origin, is 3,100 km from the west coast of Africa. Area, 47 sq. miles (121.7 sq. km), with a cultivable area of 243 ha. The population at the 1998 census was 5,157. In 1995 an estimated 62.6% of the population were urban. The capital and port is Jamestown, population (1995) 3,000.

The official language is English.

Ascension is a small island of volcanic origin, of 34 sq. miles (88 sq. km), 700 miles northwest of St Helena. There are 120 ha providing fresh meat, vegetables and fruit. Population (1993), was 1,117 (excluding military personnel).

The island is the resort of sea turtles, rabbits, the sooty tern or 'wideawake', and feral donkeys.

A cable station connects the island with St Helena, Sierra Leone, St Vincent, Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires. There is an airstrip (Miracle Mile) near the settlement of Georgetown; the Royal Air Force maintains an air link with the Falkland Islands.

Administrator: Geoffroy Fairhurst.

Tristan da Cunha is the largest of a small group of islands in the South Atlantic, lying 1,320 miles (2,124 km) southwest of St Helena, of which they became dependencies on 12 Jan. 1938. Tristan da Cunha has an area of 98 sq. km and a population (1988) of 313, all living in the settlement of Edinburgh. Inaccessible Island (10 sq. km) lies 20 miles west, and the 3 Nightingale Islands (2 sq. km) lie 20 miles south of Tristan da Cunha; they are uninhabited. Gough Island (90 sq. km) is 220 miles south, of Tristan and has a meteorological station.

Tristan consists of a volcano rising to a height of 2,060 metres, with a circumference at its base of 34 km. The volcano, believed to be extinct, erupted unexpectedly early in Oct. 1961. The whole population was evacuated without loss and settled temporarily in the UK; in 1963 they returned to Tristan. Potatoes remain the chief crop. Cattle, sheep and pigs are now reared, and fish are plentiful.

Population in 1996, 292. The original inhabitants were shipwrecked sailors and soldiers who remained behind when the garrison from St Helena was withdrawn in 1817.

At the end of April 1942 Tristan da Cunha was commissioned as HMS Atlantic Isle, and became an important meteorological and radio station. In Jan. 1949 a South African company commenced crawfishing operations. An Administrator was appointed at the end of 1948 and a body of basic law brought into operation. The Island Council, which was set up in 1932, consists of a Chief Islander, 3 nominated and 8 elected members (including 1 woman), under the chairmanship of the Administrator.

Administrator: Brian Baldwin.

SOUTH GEORGIA AND THE SOUTH SANDWICH ISLANDS

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first landing and exploration was undertaken by Captain James Cook, who formally took possession in the name of George III on 17 Jan. 1775. British sealers arrived in 1788 and American sealers in 1791. Sealing reached its peak in 1800. A German team was the first to carry out scientific studies there in 1882–83. Whaling began in 1904 and ceased in 1966, and the civil administration was withdrawn. Argentine forces invaded South Georgia on 3 April 1982. A British naval task force recovered the Island on 25 April 1982.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

South Georgia lies 1,300 km southeast of the Falkland Islands and has an area of 3,760 sq. km. The South Sandwich Islands are 760 km southeast of South Georgia and have an area of 340 sq. km. In 1993 crown sovereignty and jurisdiction were extended from 12 miles (19 km) to 200 miles (322 km) around the islands. There is no permanent population. There is a small military garrison. The British Antarctic Survey have a biological station on Bird Island. The South Sandwich Islands are uninhabited.

CLIMATE

The climate is wet and cold, with strong winds and little seasonal variation. 15°C is occasionally reached on a windless day. Temperatures below –15°C at sea level are unusual.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the new Constitution which came into force on 3 Oct. 1985 the Territories ceased to be dependencies of the Falkland Islands. Executive power is vested in a Commissioner who is the officer for the time being administering the government of the Falkland Islands. The Commissioner is obliged to consult the officer for the time being commanding Her Majesty's British Forces in the South Atlantic on matters relating to defence and internal security (except police). The Commissioner, whenever practicable, consults the Executive Council of the Falkland Islands on the exercise of functions that in his opinion might affect the Falkland Islands. There is no Legislative Council. Laws are made by the Commissioner (Donald Lamont, resident in the Falkland Islands).

ECONOMY

Budget. The total revenue of the Territories (estimate, 1988–89) £268,240, mainly from philatelic sales and investment income. Expenditure (estimate), £194,260.

COMMUNICATIONS

There is occasional communication by sea with the Falkland Islands by means of research and ice patrol ships. Royal Fleet Auxiliary ships, which serve the garrison, run regularly to South Georgia. Mail is dropped from military aircraft.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a Supreme Court for the Territories and a Court of Appeal in the United Kingdom. Appeals may go from that court to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. There is no magistrate permanently in residence. The Officer Commanding the garrison is usually appointed a magistrate.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The earliest inhabitants of the north American continent can be traced back to Palaeolithic times but it was not until the twelfth century that permanent settlements were created, particularly in the east where rich opportunities for cultivation and fishing supported major fortified towns. The first Europeans to make their presence felt were Spaniards who based themselves in Florida before venturing north and west. Santa Fe in New Mexico was founded in 1610. But by the mid-sixteenth century there was competition from the French centred on Quebec who colonized along the St Lawrence River.

Elizabethan adventurers were eager to exploit the New World but it was not until 1607 that a British colony was established. This was at Jamestown in what is now southern Virginia. After a perilous start when disease and malnutrition carried off most of the settlers, Virginia's population grew rapidly to meet the European demand for tobacco. Maryland, originally a refuge for persecuted Catholics, also thrived on the tobacco trade. To make up for the shortage of labour, slaves were imported from Africa.

In 1620 a hundred pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock to found a Puritan enclave which became the colony of Massachusetts. Other settlements soon followed, accommodating a bewildering variety of Christian radicals who had fled from persecution. Not all were tolerant of beliefs that differed from their own. Pennsylvania, the colony named after the Quaker William Penn, was exceptional in offering freedom of worship to 'all persons who confess and acknowledge the one almighty and eternal God'. In 1664 the British took control of neighbouring Dutch colonies. New Amsterdam became New York. Almost all of the eastern seaboard was now claimed by British settlers who were also venturing inland.

Their main European rivals were the French who claimed a vast area around and to the southwest of the Great Lakes. With Indian tribes allied to both sides, there was heavy fighting in 1744 and 1748. But within a decade British forces had captured most of the French strongholds. After the Treaty of Paris in 1763, Britain commanded the whole of North America east of the Mississippi while Spain, having surrendered Florida, gained Louisiana from France. For a brief period colonization was restricted to the area east of the Appalachians, the rest of the territory being reserved for Indian tribes. This soon became a point of issue between the settlers who were intent on expansion and their masters in London who wanted a settled, self-supporting community benefiting British trade. Having disposed of the French threat, the colonists felt confident enough to defy orders that ignored their interests. In particular, they objected to the Navigation Acts which required goods to be carried in British vessels and to various taxes imposed without consultation. 'No taxation without representation' became a rallying cry for disaffected colonists. The centre of opposition was Boston, scene of the infamous 'tea party' when, in 1763, militants destroyed a cargo of East India tea. In 1775 the arrest of rebel ringleaders served only to provoke the 13 colonies to co-operate in further acts of rebellion, including the setting up of a de facto government which appointed George Washington commander of American forces.

The War of Independence was by no means a clear-cut affair. British forces, never more than 50,000 strong, were supported by a powerful body of colonists who remained loyal to the Crown. The war lasted for 7 years from 1776 with both sides often getting close to a conclusive victory. The decisive moment came at last with the surrender of General Burgoyne and his 8,000 troops in upper New York state in Oct. 1777, a defeat that persuaded a cautious France to enter the war. Under the peace terms secured in 1783 Britain kept Canada leaving the new United States with territory stretching from the Atlantic to the Mississippi. A constitution based on democratic principles buttressed by inalienable rights including the ownership of property came into force in 1789. It allowed for a federal government headed by a president and executive, a legislature with a House of Representatives and a Senate, and a judiciary with ultimate authority on constitutional matters exercised by a Supreme Court. The first president was George Washington, who was elected in 1789. In 1800 Washington, D.C. was declared the national capital.

Hostilities with Britain resumed in 1812 amidst accusations that Britain was using the excuse of the Napoleonic wars to harass American shipping and to encourage Indian resistance to expansion into the mid west. Most of the fighting took place on the Canadian border where an attempted invasion was decisively repulsed. But Louisiana, having reverted to French rule and subsequently sold to the US, was secured for the Union. With the exception of Louisiana, other American territories that had once been part of the Spanish empire, fell to Mexico. But not for long. In 1836 Texas broke away from Mexico, surviving as an independent republic until 1845 when it was annexed by the US. This provoked war with Mexico which ended in 1848 with the US taking over what are now the states of California, Arizona, Colorado, Utah, Nevada and New Mexico. Any temptation there might have been for European involvement in the struggle was removed by the Monroe Doctrine, a declaration by President Monroe that interference from the Old World in matters concerning the western hemisphere would not be tolerated. It was a measure of the growing military and economic self confidence of the US that such a warning, delivered in 1823, was taken seriously.

The westward expansion began soon after independence but accelerated with the destruction of Indian power and the removal of the native population to designated reservations. In 1846 a long-running dispute with Britain confirming US title to Oregon acted as a spur to migration as did the Californian gold rush of 1848. By the 1850s the railway network was bringing people and economic prosperity to the mid west. Population quadrupled between 1815 to 1860, from 8m. to almost 31m. In 1862 the Homestead Act allocated 160 acres to anyone who was ready to farm it. By 1890 the west was won.

The transition from a rural society to an industrial power of world importance created tensions, not least between the slave-owning southern states and the rest of the Union which favoured the abolition of slavery. Economic as well as humanitarian factors were in play since the North resented the advantage cheap labour gave to the South. The opposing view held that the South, by now the world's largest cotton producer, depended on slavery for its commercial survival. Mutual antagonism came to a head with the secession of the southern states from the Union in 1860–61 and their formation as a Confederacy. Despite sporadic outbreaks of violence, civil war was not in prospect until Confederate troops fired on the US flag at Fort Sumter. Lincoln ordered a blockade of the South. The recruitment of rival armies followed within weeks. The war turned out to be much bloodier than anyone had expected. More American lives were lost in the Civil War than in the two world wars combined. The military balance was maintained until 1863 when the North secured a crushing victory at the Battle of Gettysburg. However, the war continued until April 1865 when Robert E. Lee surrendered to Ulysses S. Grant at Appomattox Courthouse in Virginia. A few days later Lincoln was assassinated, a loss that the southern states had subsequent cause to regret. Contrary to Lincoln's hopes, a generous settlement was now out of the question. Instead of a gradual transition to a new society, the South was rushed into a social revolution. This in turn led to terrorist violence and acts of vengeance against freed slaves. From this carnage emerged the notorious Ku Klux Klan as the standard bearer of lynch law. While the 13th amendment prohibited slavery, political freedom was denied to the black community by state imposed literacy tests and discriminatory property taxes.

That America had interests beyond its own borders was made evident by the Spanish war of 1898 which resulted in the US becoming the dominant power in the Caribbean though the effort to take over in the Philippines came up against Filipino resistance and led to a heavy death toll.

By 1900 the US rivalled Britain and Germany as the world's dominant power. With vast natural resources and a manufacturing capacity that secured 11% of world trade, it was clear that Europe was soon to lose its grip on world affairs. Ironically, though, it was Europe as the chief supplier of labour that gave the US the impetus it needed to fulfil its promise. Between 1881 and 1920, 23m. immigrants entered the US, the largest population movement ever recorded.

Given the nationalistic mix that constituted early twentieth century America it is scarcely surprising that popular opinion was against involvement in the First World War. But events, including German U-boat harassment of American shipping, soon proved that isolationism was not an option. It was not until 1917 that America joined the hostilities but the resurgence of energy created by the arrival of the American Expeditionary Force was critical to the Allied breakthrough.

Post-war America, relatively unscathed by the European conflict, was unquestionably the most powerful nation and as such was able to dictate terms at the Versailles peace conference. But President Wilson's much vaunted 'fourteen points' which set out a plan for collective security policed by a League of Nations failed to win support in the one country that was critical to its success. The Treaty was rejected by the Senate in 1920 and America retreated once again into isolationism.

A resumption of economic growth was accompanied by a struggle to impose a common set of values, chiefly white, Protestant, on an incredibly diverse population. To outsiders the most extraordinary experiment in social engineering was Prohibition, a federal imposed attempt to outlaw all alcoholic drinks. Whatever gain there was to the health of the nation, the chief beneficiaries were the bosses of organized crime.

Dreams of everlasting prosperity were shattered by the 1929 Stock Market Crash. A succession of bank failures was followed by widespread bankruptcies and mass unemployment which sent the economy into a further downward spin. The beginning of the end to the agony came with the election to the presidency of Franklin D. Roosevelt, who pushed through Congress a series of radical measures known collectively as the New Deal aimed at revitalizing the nation. Cheap loans to restart factories and farms and huge investment in public works proved to be the key to recovery though unemployment remained high until production was boosted by the demands of another world war.

Roosevelt was well aware of the dangers to the US if the fascist dictators were allowed to triumph, but as in 1914, there was formidable opposition to direct involvement. Roosevelt compromised by supplying Britain with much needed armaments on favourable terms. But it was events in Asia rather than in Europe that eventually persuaded America of the need for direct action. Opposition to Japanese expansion into China and South East Asia, including an oil embargo and a freezing of Japanese assets in the US, brought a savage retaliation at Pearl Harbour, when much of the US fleet was destroyed. America declared war on Japan while Germany declared war on America. The US military effort focused initially on the Pacific but after 1942 American forces were also committed to the campaign in north Africa and Europe. With the D-Day landings in June 1944, US troops led the attack on Germany before forcing a Japanese surrender by sacrificing Hiroshima and Nagasaki to the atomic bomb.

This time, in the aftermath of war, the US needed no encouragement to assume the leadership of the free world. The threat of a Soviet takeover in Europe was countered by the formation of NATO and the provision of dollar aid under the Marshall Plan to kick start European economic recovery. The risk of a return to isolationism receded still further when China fell to communism. In 1950 American troops went to the aid of South Korea when it was invaded by the communist North. Though technically under the aegis of the UN, the campaign was an almost entirely American affair led by General Douglas MacArthur. When Chinese forces became involved, MacArthur spoke openly of extending the war to the Chinese mainland, a threat countered strongly by President Truman who forced MacArthur's resignation to establish undisputed political control over the military. A ceasefire was negotiated after Dwight Eisenhower was elected President in 1953 and the US took the lead in setting up the South East Asia Treaty Organization on the same lines as NATO.

At home, civil rights were high on the political agenda. The thuggish tactics of Senator Joe McCarthy and the House Committee on Un-American Activities brought into focus basic democratic freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution while growing protests against racial discrimination led to legislation to enforce equality of opportunity in education and employment. The civil rights movement peaked in the early sixties when the imposition of federal law in the South led to acts of violence against liberal protesters. Social tensions were exacerbated by the Cold War confrontation. On his election in 1962, one of the first challenges President Kennedy had to face was the placing of Soviet missiles in Cuba. For a time, the prospect of world war was only too real. But an agreement between the two nations allowed for a withdrawal of the missiles on the condition of a US promise not to invade Cuba. Another optimistic sign was the Nuclear Test Ban Treaty of 1963 which, for the first time, put a brake on the spread of nuclear weapons. Less hopeful was the acceleration of the conflict in Vietnam. Following President Kennedy's assassination in 1963, US military involvement in Vietnam was intensified but opposition at home led to withdrawal of forces in 1973.

In 1974 President Nixon was forced to resign amidst charges of corruption known collectively as Watergate. A revival of Republican fortunes came with the election of Ronald Reagan in the 1980 presidential race. In international affairs, Reagan was resolutely anti-Communist, raising fears of confrontation with the Soviet Union over his Strategic Defense Initiative, otherwise known as his 'Star Wars' system of defence. However, relations between the two superpowers improved in the mid-eighties with successful negotiations on nuclear arms limitations. The collapse of the Soviet empire in 1990 extended US economic aid to Eastern Europe. The Democrats regained control of the White House with the election of Bill Clinton, who combined economic recovery at home with an active foreign policy which underlined America's role as the only superpower.

The population of the New York urban agglomeration was for many years the largest in the world until overtaken by Tokyo in the late 1960s. Of all the American cities with more than 100,000 inhabitants, Phoenix saw the greatest increase in its population between 1990 and 1999, with an additional 222,483 people based on the above estimates, and Henderson the highest percentage increase, with a 155.6% rise. Philadelphia's population saw the greatest decline, dropping by 167,976 based on these estimates, and St Louis the highest percentage fall, with a 15.8% drop.

Washington, D. C.: The capital of the United States, the city is located at the head of the Potomac River, and was carved from Virginia and Maryland in 1790 to form the permanent seat of government for the new nation. The city is home to many of the most important monuments, artifacts and museums in the country. The larger metropolitan city, however, suffers from complex social, economic and political problems.

New York: Located on the Eastern Atlantic coast of the United States at the mouth of the Hudson River, it became the focus for the first European immigrants in the 17th century. Greater New York was formed in 1898 by the amalgamation of the five boroughs—The Bronx, Brooklyn, Manhattan, Queens and Staten Island. Affectionately known as the 'Big Apple' it covers an area of 301 sq. miles and has a city population of 7.4m. It was the world's most populous city until overtaken by Tokyo in the late 1960s.

Los Angeles: Sprawling across some 464 sq. miles (1,202 sq. km), Los Angeles is the second most populous city and metropolitan area in the United States after New York. Developing from an 18th century missionary settlement, the city was opened up by the railroads at the end of the 19th century. The city has become a centre for the US film industry and has the busiest harbour on the West Coast. It is one of the most ethnically diverse and divided cities in the US.

Chicago: Chicago is the third most populous city and metropolitan area in the United States. Owing to its strategic position at the lakeside interior of a rapidly expanding country, Chicago developed in the early 19th century to become a nexus for goods transport via canals and railways. Industry followed and Chicago emerged as the major city of the Midwest. The city is famous for its prohibition-period gangster history and its skyline of skyscrapers including the Sears Tower, the second tallest building in the world.

Immigration and naturalization. The Immigration and Nationality Act, as amended, provides for the numerical limitation of most immigration. The Immigration Act of 1990 established major revisions in the numerical limits and preference system regulating legal immigration. The numerical limits are imposed on visas issued and not admissions. The maximum number of visas allowed to be issued under the preference categories in 1996 was 451,819: 311,819 for family-sponsored immigrants and 140,000 for employment-based immigrants. Within the overall limitations the per-country limit for independent countries is set to 7% of the total family and employment limits, while dependent areas are limited to 2% of the total. The 1996 limit allowed no more than 31,627 preference visas for any independent country and 9,036 for any dependency. Immigrants not subject to any numerical limitation are spouses, children, and parents of US citizens who are 21 years of age or older; certain former US citizens; ministers of religion; certain long-term US government employees; refugees and asylum-seekers adjusting to immigrant status; and certain other groups of immigrants.

Immigration data for 1996 include 4,635 aliens who were admitted as permanent residents under the legalization programme created by the Immigrant Reform and Control Act of 1986. These aliens have resided in the USA since before 1982 or were agricultural workers on perishable crops and have qualified as temporary residents under the first phase of the legalization programme; in the fiscal year 1989 they began qualifying for permanent status.

Immigrant aliens admitted to the USA for permanent residence, by country or region of birth, for fiscal years:

¹Immigration from the former USSR in 1997 included 16,600 from Russia and 15,700 from Ukraine. Figures from 1996 were: Russia, 19,700; Ukraine, 15,700; Armenia, 2,400; Azerbaijan, 2,000; Belarus, 4,300; Moldova, 1,800; Uzbekistan, 4,700.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The total number of immigrants admitted from 1820 up to 30 Sept. 1996 was 63,140,227; this included 7,142,593 from Germany, and 5,427,298 from Italy.

US law gives preferential immigration status to persons with a close family relationship with a US citizen or legal permanent resident, persons with needed job skills, or persons who qualify as refugees. Immigrants in other categories usually account for relatively few admissions.

The number of immigrants admitted for legal permanent residence in the United States in the fiscal year 1998 was 660,477. Included in this total were 357,037 aliens previously living abroad who obtained immigrant visas through the US Department of State and became legal permanent residents upon entry into the United States. The remaining 303,440 legal immigrants, including former undocumented immigrants, refugees, and asylees, had been living in the United States an average of 3 years and adjusted status through the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS). Legal immigration in 1998 was 17% lower than in 1997 (798,378). The decrease was due primarily to an increase in the number of adjustment of status applications pending a decision at INS, not to a decline in the demand to immigrate.

Aliens coming to the United States for temporary periods of time are classified as non-immigrants. During fiscal year 1998 a total of 30,174,627 non-immigrants were admitted. This total includes multiple entries but excludes border crossers, crewmen and insular travellers. Tourists numbered 23,254,140, with 13,669,895 from the Caribbean, Germany, Japan, Mexico and the UK.

Beginning on 1 April 1997 formal removals include deportations, exclusions, inadmissibility and deportability. During fiscal year 1998 there were 1,742,364 aliens expelled. Of this number, there were 172,547 formal removals (16,215 deportations; 956 exclusions; 125,836 inadmissible; and 29,540 deportable) and 1,569,817 voluntary departures (includes aliens under control required to depart and voluntary departures not under docket control).

A total of 463,060 persons were naturalized in fiscal year 1998. This number would have been much higher were it not for a backlog of more than 1m. applications pending a decision at the end of 1997. The refugee admissions ceiling for the fiscal year 1998 was fixed at 83,000, including 54,000 from Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union and 4,000 from Asia East and South-East Asia.

Even though the marriage rate shows a gradual decline, it remains much higher than in most other industrial countries. The most popular age range for marrying is 25–29 for males and 20–24 for females. Estimated number of births to unmarried women in 1997 was 1,257,000 (32.4% of all births), compared to 666,000 in 1980. Between 1970 and 1998 the annual number of births rose by 5.7%. The number of births within marriage declined by 19.2% whereas the number outside of marriage rose by 223.6%. The number of lone-parent families rose by 190.2% over the same period.

Infant mortality rates, per 1,000 live births: 29.2 in 1950; 12.9 in 1980; 7.0 in 1998. Fertility rate, 1999, 2.0 births per woman (3.6 in 1960).

Numbers of deaths by principal causes, 1997 (and as a percentage of all deaths): heart disease, 727,000 (31.4%); cancer, 539,600 (23.3%); stroke, 159,800 (6.9%); obstructive lung disease, 109,000 (4.7%); accidents, 95,600 (4.1%); pneumonia and influenza, 85,700 (3.7%); diabetes mellitus, 62,600 (2.7%); suicide, 30,500 (1.3%); liver disease, 25,200 (1.1%); AIDS, 21,200 (0.9%).

In 1997 there were 32,436 deaths caused by firearms; 15,973 from drug-induced causes; and 19,576 from alcohol-induced causes.

The number of Americans living below the poverty line in 1998 was 34.5m. or 12.7% of the total population, down from 15.1% in 1993.

A UNICEF report published in 2000 showed that 22.4% of children in the USA live in poverty (in households with income below 50% of the national median), compared to just 2.6% in Sweden. The report also showed that the poverty rate of children in lone-parent families was 55.4%, compared to 15.8% in two-parent families.

CLIMATE

For temperature and rainfall figures, see entries on individual states as indicated by regions, below, of mainland USA.

Pacific Coast. The climate varies with latitude, distance from the sea and the effect of relief, ranging from polar conditions in North Alaska through cool to warm temperate climates further south. The extreme south is temperate desert. Rainfall everywhere is moderate. See Alaska, California, Oregon, Washington.

Mountain States. Very varied, with relief exerting the main control; very cold in the north in winter, with considerable snowfall. In the south, much higher temperatures and aridity produce desert conditions. Rainfall everywhere is very variable as a result of rain-shadow influences. See Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, Wyoming.

High Plains. A continental climate with a large annual range of temperature and moderate rainfall, mainly in summer, although unreliable. Dust storms are common in summer and blizzards in winter. See Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota.

Central Plains. A temperate continental climate, with hot summers and cold winters, except in the extreme south. Rainfall is plentiful and comes at all seasons, but there is a summer maximum in western parts. See Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas.

Mid-West. Continental, with hot summers and cold winters. Rainfall is moderate, with a summer maximum in most parts. See Indiana, Iowa, Kansas.

Great Lakes. Continental, resembling that of the Central Plains, with hot summers but very cold winters because of the freezing of the lakes. Rainfall is moderate with a slight summer maximum. See Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, Wisconsin.

Appalachian Mountains. The north is cool temperate with cold winters, the south warm temperate with milder winters. Precipitation is heavy, increasing to the south but evenly distributed over the year. See Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, West Virginia.

Gulf Coast. Conditions vary from warm temperate to sub-tropical, with plentiful rainfall, decreasing towards the west but evenly distributed over the year. See Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana.

Atlantic Coast. Temperate maritime climate but with great differences in temperature according to latitude. Rainfall is ample at all seasons; snowfall in the north can be heavy. See Delaware, District of Columbia, Georgia, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia.

New England. Cool temperate, with severe winters and warm summers. Precipitation is well distributed with a slight winter maximum. Snowfall is heavy in winter. See Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont. See also Hawaii and Outlying Territories.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The form of government of the USA is based on the constitution of 17 Sept. 1787.

By the constitution the government of the nation is composed of three co-ordinate branches, the executive, the legislative and the judicial.

The Federal government has authority in matters of general taxation, treaties and other dealings with foreign countries, foreign and inter-state commerce, bankruptcy, postal service, coinage, weights and measures, patents and copyright, the armed forces (including, to a certain extent, the militia), and crimes against the USA; it has sole legislative authority over the District of Columbia and the possessions of the USA.

The 5th article of the constitution provides that Congress may, on a two-thirds vote of both houses, propose amendments to the constitution, or, on the application of the legislatures of two-thirds of all the states, call a convention for proposing amendments, which in either case shall be valid as part of the constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, whichever mode of ratification may be proposed by Congress. Ten amendments (called collectively 'the Bill of Rights') to the constitution were added 15 Dec. 1791; two in 1795 and 1804; a 13th amendment, 6 Dec. 1865, abolishing slavery; a 14th in 1868, including the important 'due process' clause; a 15th, 3 Feb. 1870, establishing equal voting rights for white and black; a 16th, 3 Feb. 1913, authorizing the income tax; a 17th, 8 April 1913, providing for popular election of senators; an 18th, 16 Jan. 1919, prohibiting alcoholic liquors; a 19th, 18 Aug. 1920, establishing woman suffrage; a 20th, 23 Jan. 1933, advancing the date of the President's and Vice-President's inauguration and abolishing the 'lameduck' sessions of Congress; a 21st, 5 Dec. 1933, repealing the 18th amendment; a 22nd, 26 Feb. 1951, limiting a President's tenure of office to 2 terms, or to 2 terms plus 2 years in the case of a Vice-President who has succeeded to the office of a President; a 23rd, 30 March 1961, granting citizens of the District of Columbia the right to vote in national elections; a 24th, 4 Feb. 1964, banning the use of the poll-tax in federal elections; a 25th, 10 Feb. 1967, dealing with Presidential disability and succession; a 26th, 22 June 1970, establishing the right of citizens who are 18 years of age and older to vote; a 27th, 7 May 1992, providing that no law varying the compensation of Senators or Representatives shall take effect until an election has taken place.

National motto: 'In God we trust'; formally adopted by Congress 30 July 1956.

Presidency. The executive power is vested in a president, who holds office for 4 years, and is elected, together with a vice-president chosen for the same term, by electors from each state, equal to the whole number of senators and representatives to which the state may be entitled in the Congress. The President must be a natural-born citizen, resident in the country for 14 years, and at least 35 years old.

The presidential election is held every fourth (leap) year on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November. Technically, this is an election of presidential electors, not of a president directly; the electors thus chosen meet and give their votes (for the candidate to whom they are pledged, in some states by law, but in most states by custom and prudent politics) at their respective state capitals on the first Monday after the second Wednesday in December next following their election; and the votes of the electors of all the states are opened and counted in the presence of both Houses of Congress on the sixth day of January. The total electorate vote is one for each senator and representative. Electors may not be a member of Congress or hold federal office. If no candidate secures the minimum 270 college votes needed for outright victory, the 12th Amendment to the Constitution applies, and the House of Representatives chooses a president from among the first 3 finishers in the electoral college. (This last happened in 1824).

If the successful candidate for President dies before taking office the Vice-President-elect becomes President; if no candidate has a majority or if the successful candidate fails to qualify, then, by the 20th amendment, the Vice-President acts as President until a president qualifies. The duties of the Presidency, in absence of the President and Vice-President by reason of death, resignation, removal, inability or failure to qualify, devolve upon the Speaker of the House under legislation enacted on 18 July 1947. In case of absence of a Speaker for like reason, the presidential duties devolve upon the President pro tem. of the Senate and successively upon those members of the cabinet in order of precedence, who have the constitutional qualifications for President.

The presidential term, by the 20th amendment to the constitution, begins at noon on 20 Jan. of the inaugural year. This amendment also installs the newly elected Congress in office on 3 Jan. instead of—as formerly—in the following Dec. The President's salary is $400,000 per year (taxable), with in addition $50,000 to assist in defraying expenses resulting from official duties. Also he may spend up to $100,000 non-taxable for travel and $19,000 for official entertainment. In 1999 the presidential salary was increased for the president taking office in Jan. 2001, having remained at $200,000 a year since 1969. The office of Vice-President carries a salary of $181,400 and $10,000 allowance for expenses, all taxable. The Vice-President is ex officio President of the Senate, and in the case of 'the removal of the President, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of his office', he becomes the President for the remainder of the term.

¹Position vacant thereafter until commencement of the next presidential term.

Cabinet. The administrative business of the nation has been traditionally vested in several executive departments, the heads of which, unofficially and ex officio, formed the President's cabinet. Beginning with the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1887, however, an increasing amount of executive business has been entrusted to some 60 so-called independent agencies, such as the Housing and Home Finance Agency, Tariff Commission, etc.

All heads of departments and of the 60 or more administrative agencies are appointed by the President, but must be confirmed by the Senate.

Congress. The legislative power is vested by the Constitution in a Congress, consisting of a Senate and House of Representatives.

Electorate. By amendments of the constitution, disqualification of voters on the ground of race, colour or sex is forbidden. The electorate consists of all citizens over 18 years of age. Literacy tests have been banned since 1970. In 1972 durational residency requirements were held to violate the constitution. In 1973 US citizens abroad were enfranchised.

With limitations imposed by the constitution, it is the states which determine voter eligibility. In general states exclude from voting: persons who have not established residency in the jurisdiction in which they wish to vote; persons who have been convicted of felonies whose civil rights have not been restored; persons declared mentally incompetent by a court.

Illiterate voters are entitled to receive assistance in marking their ballots. Minority-language voters in jurisdictions with statutorily prescribed minority concentrations are entitled to have elections conducted in the minority language as well as English. Disabled voters are entitled to accessible polling places. Voters absent on election days or unable to go to the polls are generally entitled under state law to vote by absentee ballot.

The Constitution guarantees citizens that their votes will be of equal value under the 'one person, one vote' rule.

Senate. The Senate consists of 2 members from each state (but not from the District of Columbia), chosen by popular vote for 6 years, approximately one-third retiring or seeking re-election every 2 years. Senators must be no less than 30 years of age; must have been citizens of the USA for 9 years, and be residents in the states for which they are chosen. The Senate has complete freedom to initiate legislation, except revenue bills (which must originate in the House of Representatives); it may, however, amend or reject any legislation originating in the lower house. The Senate is also entrusted with the power of giving or withholding its 'advice and consent' to the ratification of all treaties initiated by the President with foreign powers, a two-thirds majority of senators present being required for approval. (However, it has no control over 'international executive agreements' made by the President with foreign governments; such 'agreements' cover a wide range and are more numerous than formal treaties.) It also has the power of confirming or rejecting major appointments to office made by the President, but it has no direct control over the appointment by the President of 'personal representatives' or 'personal envoys' on missions abroad. Members of the Senate constitute a High Court of Impeachment, with power, by a two-thirds vote, to remove from office and disqualify any civil officer of the USA impeached by the House of Representatives, which has the sole power of impeachment.

The Senate has 17 Standing Committees to which all bills are referred for study, revision or rejection. The House of Representatives has 19 such committees. In both Houses each Standing Committee has a chairman and a majority representing the majority party of the whole House; each has numerous sub-committees. The jurisdictions of these Committees correspond largely to those of the appropriate executive departments and agencies. Both Houses also have a few select or special Committees with limited duration.

House of Representatives. The House of Representatives consists of 435 members elected every second year. The number of each state's representatives is determined by the decennial census, in the absence of specific Congressional legislation affecting the basis. For the 107th congress, beginning in 2001, the states had the following numbers of representatives (based on the 1990 census):

Alabama	7	Indiana	10	Nebraska	3	South Carolina	6
Alaska	1	Iowa	5	Nevada	2	South Dakota	1
Arizona	6	Kansas	4	New Hampshire	2	Tennessee	9
Arkansas	4	Kentucky	6	New Jersey	13	Texas	30
California	52	Louisiana	7	New Mexico	3	Utah	3
Colorado	6	Maine	2	New York	31	Vermont	1
Connecticut	6	Maryland	8	North Carolina	12	Virginia	11
Delaware	1	Massachusetts	10	North Dakota	1	Washington	9
Florida	23	Michigan	16	Ohio	19	West Virginia	3
Georgia	11	Minnesota	8	Oklahoma	6	Wisconsin	9
Hawaii	2	Mississippi	5	Oregon	5	Wyoming	1
Idaho	2	Missouri	9	Pennsylvania	21
Illinois	20	Montana	1	Rhode Island	2

The 108th congress, beginning in 2003, will be constituted on the basis of the apportionment population from the 2000 census.

The constitution requires congressional districts within each state to be substantially equal in population. Final decisions on congressional district boundaries are taken by the state legislatures and governors. By custom the representative lives in the district from which he is elected. Representatives must be not less than 25 years of age, citizens of the USA for 7 years and residents in the state from which they are chosen.

In addition, 5 delegates (1 each from the District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam, the US Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico) are also members of Congress. They have a voice but no vote, except in committees. The delegate from Puerto Rico is the resident commissioner. Puerto Ricans vote at primaries, but not at national elections. Each of the two Houses of Congress is sole 'judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members'; and each of the Houses may, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member. The period usually termed 'a Congress' in legislative language continues for 2 years, terminating at noon on 3 Jan.

The salary of a senator is $145,100 per annum, with tax-free expense allowance and allowances for travelling expenses and for clerical hire. The salary of the Speaker of the House of Representatives is $186,300 per annum, with a taxable allowance. The salary of a Member of the House is $145,100 ($161,200 for the Majority Leader and Minority Leader).

No senator or representative can, during the time for which he is elected, be appointed to any civil office under authority of the USA which shall have been created or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the USA can be a member of either House during his continuance in office. No religious test may be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the USA or in any state.

Indians. By an Act passed on 2 June 1924 full citizenship was granted to all Indians born in the USA, though those remaining in tribal units were still under special federal jurisdiction. The Indian Reorganization Act of 1934 gave the tribal Indians, at their own option, substantial opportunities of self-government and the establishment of self-controlled corporate enterprises empowered to borrow money and buy land, machinery and equipment; these corporations are controlled by democratically elected tribal councils. Recently a trend towards releasing Indians from federal supervision has resulted in legislation terminating supervision over specific tribes. In 1988 the federal government recognized that it had a special relationship with, and a trust responsibility for, federally recognized Indian entities in continental USA and tribal entities in Alaska. In 1993 the Bureau of Indian Affairs listed 552 'Indian Entities Recognized and Eligible to Receive Services'. Indian lands (1991) amounted to 52,092,247 acres, of which 41,868,582 was tribally owned and 10,233,665 in trust allotments. Indian lands are held free of taxes. Total Indian population at the 1990 census was 1,959,000, of which Oklahoma, Arizona, California and New Mexico accounted for 832,466.

The District of Columbia, ceded by the State of Maryland for the purposes of government in 1791, is the seat of the US government. It includes the city of Washington, and embraces a land area of 61 sq. miles. The Reorganization Plan No. 3 of 1967 instituted a Mayor Council form of government with appointed officers. In 1973 an elected Mayor and elected councillors were introduced; in 1974 they received power to legislate in local matters. Congress retains power to enact legislation and to veto or supersede the Council's acts. Since 1961 citizens have had the right to vote in national elections. On 23 Aug. 1978 the Senate approved a constitutional amendment giving the District full voting representation in Congress. This has still to be ratified.

The Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, American Samoa, Guam and the Virgin Islands each have a local legislature, whose acts may be modified or annulled by Congress, though in practice this has seldom been done. Puerto Rico, since its attainment of commonwealth status on 25 July 1952, enjoys practically complete self-government, including the election of its governor and other officials. The conduct of foreign relations, however, is still a federal function and federal bureaux and agencies still operate in the island.

General supervision of territorial administration is exercised by the Office of Territories in the Department of Interior.

National Anthem. The Star-spangled Banner, 'Oh say, can you see by the dawn's early light'; words by F. S. Key, 1814, tune by J. S. Smith; formally adopted by Congress 3 March 1931.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the presidential election on 7 Nov. 2000 turn-out was 51.2% (49% in 1996). George W. Bush (R.) received 50,461,080 votes (48.1%), Albert Arnold ('Al') Gore

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Jr (D.) 50,994,082 (48·3%), Ralph Nader (Green Party) 2,858,843 (2·6%), Pat Buchanan (Reform Party) 438,760 (0·4%), Harry Browne (Libertarian Party) (0·4%). Electoral college votes: Bush, 271; Gore, 267; other candidates, nil. Bush's victory was only confirmed on 13 Dec. 2000 after a recount in Florida gave him a total of 271 electoral colleges, one more than he needed to win the presidency. In becoming president as George Bush had 12 years earlier, George W. Bush became only the second son of a former US president to follow his father into office. John Quincy Adams became president in 1825, 24 years after his father John Adams had left office.

Local Government. The Union comprises 13 original states, 7 states which were admitted without having been previously organized as territories, and 30 states which had been territories—50 states in all. Each state has its own constitution (which the USA guarantees shall be republican in form), deriving its authority, not from Congress, but from the people of the state. Admission of states into the Union has been granted by special Acts of Congress, either (1) in the form of 'enabling Acts' providing for the drafting and ratification of a state constitution by the people, in which case the territory becomes a state as soon as the conditions are fulfilled, or (2) accepting a constitution already framed, and at once granting admission.

Each state is provided with a legislature of two Houses (except Nebraska, which since 1937 has had a single-chamber legislature), a governor and other executive officials, and a judicial system. Both Houses of the legislature are elective, but the senators (having larger electoral districts usually covering 2 or 3 counties compared with the single county or, in some states, the town, which sends 1 representative to the Lower House) are less numerous than the representatives, while in 38 states their terms are 4 years; in 12 states the term is 2 years. Of the 4-year senates, Illinois, Montana and New Jersey provide for two 4-year terms and one 2-year term in each decade. Terms of the lower houses are usually shorter; in 45 states, 2 years.

Members of both Houses are paid at the same rate, which varies from $200 a year in New Hampshire to $57,500 a year in New York. The trend is towards annual sessions of state legislatures; most meet annually now whereas in 1939 only 4 did.

The Governor has power to summon an extraordinary session, but not to dissolve or adjourn. The duties of the two Houses are similar, but in many states money bills must be introduced first in the Lower House. The Senate sits as a court for the trial of officials impeached by the other House, and often has power to confirm or reject appointments made by the Governor.

State legislatures are competent to deal with all matters not reserved for the federal government by the federal constitution nor specifically prohibited by the federal or state constitutions. Among their powers are the determination of the qualifications for the right of suffrage, and the control of all elections to public office, including elections of members of Congress and electors of President and Vice-President; the criminal law, both in its enactment and in its execution, with unimportant exceptions, and the administration of prisons; the civil law, including all matters pertaining to the possession and transfer of, and succession to, property; marriage and divorce, and all other civil relations; the chartering and control of all manufacturing, trading, transportation and other corporations, subject only to the right of Congress to regulate commerce passing from one state to another; labour; education; charities; licensing; fisheries within state waters, and game laws (apart from the hunting of migratory birds, which is a federal concern under treaties with Canada and Mexico). Taxes on income were left to the states until 1913, when the 16th amendment authorized the imposition of federal taxes on income without regard to apportionment.

The Governor is elected by direct vote of the people over the whole state for a term of office ranging in the various states from 2 to 4 years, and with a salary ranging from $65,000 (Nebraska) to $165,000 (California). His duty is to see to the faithful administration of the law, and he has command of the military forces of the state. He may recommend measures but does not present bills to the legislature. In some states he presents estimates. In all but one of the states (North Carolina) the Governor has a veto upon legislation, which may, however, be overridden by the two Houses, in some states by a simple majority, in others by a three-fifths or two-thirds majority. In some states the Governor, on his death or resignation, is succeeded by a Lieut.-Governor who was elected at the same time and has been presiding over the state Senate. In several states the Speaker of the Lower House succeeds the Governor.

There were elections for 11 governors' seats on 7 Nov. 2000: Democrats won 8 and Republicans 3. As a result there were 29 Republican, 19 Democrat and 2 Independent Governors in total.

The chief officials by whom the administration of state affairs is carried on (secretaries, treasurers, members of boards of commissioners, etc.) are usually chosen by the people at the general state elections for terms similar to those for which governors hold office.

The chief unit of local government is the county, of which there were (1997) 2,994 with definite functions; in addition, Rhode Island has 5 'counties' which have no functions; Alaska does not have counties but 25 divisions and, since Oct. 1960, there has been no active county government in Connecticut. Louisiana has 64 'parishes'. The counties maintain public order through the sheriff and his deputies, who may, in a crisis, be drawn temporarily from willing citizens; in many states the counties maintain the smaller local highways; other functions are the granting of licences and the apportionment and collection of taxes. In a few states they also manage the schools.

The unit of local government in New England is the rural township, governed directly by the voters, who assemble annually or more often if necessary, and legislate in local affairs, levy taxes, make appropriations and appoint and instruct the local officials. Townships are grouped to form counties. Where cities exist, the township government is superseded by the city government.

DEFENCE

The President is C.-in-C. of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

The National Security Act of 1947 provides for the unification of the Army, Navy and Air Forces under a single Secretary of Defense with cabinet rank. The President is also advised by a National Security Council and the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization.

Defence expenditure in 1999 totalled US$283,096m. (US$1,034 per capita), representing 3.1% of GDP (down from an average of 4.8% of GDP between 1990 and 1994). The USA spent more on defence in 1999 than the next 7 biggest spenders combined. In 1997 the Quadrennial Defense Review (QDR) was implemented—a plan to transform US defence strategy and military forces. The 1999 defence budget continues to support the plan by funding relevant new technologies.

The estimated number of active military personnel in 1999 was 1,371,500.

The USA is the world's largest exporter of arms, with sales in 1999 worth $26.2bn., or 49.1% of the world total. In 1987 sales had been worth $25bn., but had only represented 27.0% of the total. In 1998 Lockheed Martin, Boeing and Raytheon were the 3 largest arms producing companies in the USA, accounting for $17.88bn., $15.90bn. and $12.48bn. worth of sales respectively.

The USA's last nuclear test was in 1993. In accordance with START I—the treaty signed by the US and USSR in 1991 to reduce strategic offensive nuclear capability—the number of nuclear warheads (intercontinental ballistic missiles, submarine-launched ballistic missiles and bombers) in Jan. 1999 was approximately 7,200. In 1990 the number of warheads had been 12,718. Strategic nuclear delivery vehicles were made up as follows:

Intercontinental ballistic missiles: 500 Minuteman III; 50 Peacekeeper (MX).

Submarine-launched ballistic missiles: 192 Trident I (C-4); 240 Trident II (D-5).

Bombers: 76 B-52H; 21 B-2.

Army. Secretary of the Army (acting): Joseph. W. Westphal.

The Secretary of the Army is the head of the Department of the Army. Subject to the authority of the President as C.-in-C. and of the Secretary of Defense, he is responsible for all affairs of the Department.

The Army consists of the Active Army, the Army National Guard of the US, the Army Reserve and civilian workforce; and all persons appointed to or enlisted into the Army without component; and all persons serving under call or conscription, including members of the National Guard of the States, etc., when in the service of the US. The strength of the Active Army was (1999) 469,300 (including 71,000 women).

The Army budget for current and recent fiscal years has been: 1999, $68,876m.; 2000, $70,010m.; and 2001, $70,765m.

The US Army Forces Command, with headquarters at Fort McPherson, Georgia, commands the Third US Army; 4 continental US Armies, and all assigned Active Army and US Army Reserve troop units in the continental US, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands of the USA. The headquarters of the continental US Armies are: First US Army, Fort George G. Meade, Maryland; Second US Army, Fort Gillem, Georgia; Fifth US Army, Fort Sam Houston, Texas; Sixth US Army, Presidio of San Francisco, California. The US Army Space Command, with headquarters in Colorado Springs (CO), is the Army component to the US Space Command.

Approximately 32% of the Active Army is deployed outside the continental USA. Several divisions, which are located in the USA, keep equipment in Germany and can be flown there in 48–72 hours. Headquarters of US Seventh and Eighth Armies are in Europe and Korea respectively.

Combat vehicles of the US Army are the tank, armoured personnel carrier, infantry fighting vehicle, and the armoured command vehicle. The first-line tanks are the M1A1 Abrams tank, and the M1 Abrams. The standard armoured infantry personnel carrier is the M2 Bradley Fighting Vehicle (BFV), which is replacing the older M113.

The Army has over 5,000 aircraft, all but about 250 of them helicopters, including AH-1 Cobra and AH-64 Apache attack helicopters.

Over 95% of recruits enlisting in the Army have a high-school education and over 50% of the Army is married. Women serve in both combat support and combat service support units.

The National Guard is a reserve military component with both a state and a federal role. Enlistment is voluntary. The members are recruited by each state, but are equipped and paid by the federal government (except when performing state missions). As the organized militia of the several states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Territories of the Virgin Islands and Guam, the Guard may be called into service for local emergencies by the chief executives in those jurisdictions; and may be called into federal service by the President to thwart invasion or rebellion or to enforce federal law. In its role as a reserve component of the Army, the Guard is subject to the order of the President in the event of national emergency. In 1999 it numbered 468,700 (Army, 362,400; Air Force, 106,300).

The Army Reserve is designed to supply qualified and experienced units and individuals in an emergency. Members of units are assigned to the Ready Reserve, which is subject to call by the President in case of national emergency without declaration of war by Congress. The Standby Reserve and the Retired Reserve may be called only after declaration of war or national emergency by Congress. In 1999 the Army Reserve numbered 421,500 (49,700 women).

Navy. Secretary of the Navy (acting): Robert B. Pirie, Jr.

The Navy's Operating Forces include the Atlantic Fleet, divided between the 2nd fleet (home waters) and 6th fleet (Mediterranean) and the Pacific Fleet, similarly divided between the 3rd fleet (home waters), the 7th fleet (West Pacific) and the 5th fleet (Indian Ocean), which was formally activated in 1995 and maintained by units from both Pacific and Atlantic.

The authorized budget for the Department of the Navy (which includes funding both for the Navy and Marine Corps) for current and recent fiscal years: 1996, $76,400m.; 1997, $79,370m.; 1998, $81,935m.; 1999, $83,666m.; 2000, $88,000m.; and 2001, $91,938m.

Personnel and fleet strength declined during the mid-1990s but are now stabilizing. The '600-ship battle force' planned in the late 1980s has reduced to a current figure of 317. The Navy personnel total in 1999 was 372,696.

The operational strength of the Navy at the end of the year indicated:

Category	1992	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999

¹Includes the USS John F. Kennedy as 'operational and training reserve carrier' in the Naval Reserve Force.

Ships in the inactive reserve are not included in the table, but those serving as Naval Reserve Force training ships are.

Submarine Forces. A principal part of the US naval task is to deploy the seaborne strategic deterrent from nuclear-powered ballistic missile-carrying submarines (SSBN), of which there were 18 in 1999, all of the Ohio class. The listed total of 56 nuclear-powered attack submarines (SSN) includes 2 of 3 new Seawolf class and 51 of the Los Angeles class. There are also 2 Sturgeon class and 1 other submarine.

Surface Combatant Forces. The surface combatant forces are comprised of modern cruisers, destroyers and frigates. These ships provide multi-mission capabilities to achieve maritime dominance in the crowded and complex littoral warfare environment.

The cruiser force consists of 27 Ticonderoga class ships. There are 24 guided-missile Arleigh Burke Aegis class destroyers, 24 Spruance class destroyers, and 35 (27 active and 8 in the reserve force) Oliver Hazard Perry class guided missile frigates.

Aircraft carriers. There are 8 nuclear-powered Nimitz class carriers. The USS Enterprise, completed in 1961, was the prototype nuclear-powered carrier. The 2 ships of the Kitty Hawk and 1 of the John F. Kennedy classes were completed between 1961 and 1968, and represent the last oil-fuelled carriers built by the US Navy. All carriers deploy an air group which comprises on average 2 squadrons each of F-14 Tomcat fighters and 3 squadrons each of F/A-18 Hornet fighter/ground attack aircraft.

Naval Aviation. The principal function of the naval aviation organization (currently 12,110 pilots and Naval flight officers) is to train and provide combat ready aviation forces. The main carrier-borne combat aircraft in the current inventory are 232 F-14 fighters and 821 F/A-18 Hornet dual-purpose fighter/attack aircraft.

The Marine Corps. While administratively part of the Department of the Navy, the Corps ranks as a separate armed service, with the Commandant serving in his own right as a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and responsible directly to the Secretary of the Navy. Its strength had stabilized at 171,000 by late 1999.

The role of the Marine Corps is to provide specially trained and equipped amphibious expeditionary forces. The Corps includes an autonomous aviation element numbering 36,400 in 1999 with some 442 combat aircraft and 515 helicopters. They include F/A 18 Hornets and AV-8B Harriers.

The US Coast Guard. The Coast Guard operates under the Department of Transportation in time of peace and as part of the Navy in time of war or when directed by the President. The act of establishment stated the Coast Guard 'shall be a military service and branch of the armed forces of the United States at all times'.

The Coast Guard is the country's oldest continuous sea-going service and its missions include maintenance of aids to navigation, icebreaking, environmental response (oil spills), maritime law enforcement, marine licensing, port security, search and rescue and waterways management.

The workforce in 1996 was made up of over 34,000 active duty personnel augmented by 7,340 reserve and 35,638 auxiliary members. On an average Coast Guard day, the service saves 14 lives, conducts 120 law enforcement boardings, seizes 209 pounds of marijuana and 170 pounds of cocaine, boards 90 large vessels for port safety checks, processes 120 seaman's documents, investigates 17 marine accidents, inspects 64 commercial vessels, assists 328 people in distress, saves $2,490,000 in property, services 150 aids to navigation and interdicts 176 illegal immigrants.

Air Force. Secretary of the Air Force (acting): Lawrence J. Delaney.

The Department of the Air Force was activated within the Department of Defense on 18 Sept. 1947, under the terms of the National Security Act of 1947.

The USAF has the mission to defend the USA through control and exploitation of air and space. For operational purposes the service is divided into 8 major commands, 37 field operating agencies and 3 direct-reporting units.

The bulk of the combat forces are grouped under the Air Combat Command, which controls strategic bombing, tactical strike, air defence and reconnaissance assets in the USA.

Air Force bombers include the B-1B Lancer, the B-2A and the B-52G/H Stratofortress, which has been the primary manned strategic bomber for over 35 years. In the fighter category are the F-15 Eagle, the F-16 Fighting Falcon and the F-117A, the world's first operational aircraft to exploit low-observable stealth technology.

The Air Force budget for current and recent fiscal years has been: 1996, $74,263m.; 1997, $73,141m.; 1998, $76,444m.; 1999, $80,870m.; 2000, $83,368m.; and 2001, $86,619m.

In 1999 the Air Force had approximately 361,400 military personnel. 66,300 Air Force members are women. Since 1991 women have been authorized to fly combat aircraft, but not until 1993 were they allowed to fly fighters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The USA is a member of the UN, WTO, NATO, BIS, OECD, OSCE, OAS, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, Pacific Community, Colombo Plan, IOM and the Antarctic Treaty.

In 1999 the USA gave US$9bn. in international aid, a total figure only exceeded by Japan. In terms of a percentage of GDP, the USA was the least generous major industrialized country, giving just 0.1%.

ECONOMY

Services accounted for approximately 80% of GDP in 1999, industry 18% and agriculture 2%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, the USA ranked 14th in the world in 2000 in a survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 7.8 out of 10 in the annual index.

Performance. Total GDP in 1998 was US$8,230.4bn., representing approximately 29% of the world's total GDP. Real GDP growth was 4.4% in both 1997 and 1998, 4.2% in 1999 and 5.1% in 2000. Projected GDP growth for 2001 is 2.6%. The USA was first in the Growth Competitiveness Ranking in the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report 2000, up from second in 1999. In the 2000 World Competitiveness Yearbook, compiled by the International Institute for Management Development, the USA also came top in the world ranking. After nearly 10 years of uninterrupted growth, the booming US economy is more than ever the driving force of world prosperity.

Budget. The budget covers virtually all the programmes of federal government, including those financed through trust funds, such as for social security, Medicare and highway construction. Receipts of the government include all income from its sovereign or compulsory powers; income from business-type or market-orientated activities of the government is offset against outlays. The fiscal year ends on 30 Sept. (before 1977 on 30 June). Budget receipts and outlays, including off-budget receipts and outlays (in $1m.):

Fiscal year ending in	Receipts	Outlays	Surplus (+) or deficit (-)
